Recommendation by Rules Committee—Sen. James' References to Achievements of Administration Brought Forth Cheers and Applause—McCormick to Succeed McCombs

ST. LOUIS, Mo., June 15.—While the democratic national convention was in its second session today adopting a permanent organization and hearing the speech of Senator Ollie James as permanent chairman, the platform makers were working with President Wilson's "own draft" and various suggested planks, hoping to have a completed draft of the platform ready for submission to the full resolutions committee late this afternoon.

When the committee met, the democratic rules committee today recommended that nominations for president and vice-president begin at 8 o'clock tonight.

The proposal was carried after an extended argument in its chief by Chairman William A. Glasgow, Jr., of Pennsylvania. His chief contention was that it would be impossible to hold the delegates later than tonight and that it would be poor politics to make the nominations with seats empty.

Charles B. Strecker of Massachusetts opposed a change of program. He insisted it was due the St. Louis business men who had given the national committee a bonus of $100,000 for the convention, that delegates be kept until tomorrow night. Eventually, he too, agreed to Mr. Glasgow's plan.

When the platform will be considered has not been definitely decided. The tentative plan of the rules committee was to recess at the conclusion of Senator James' speech until 8 o'clock, at which time nominations would begin. Whether the platform should be considered tonight after the

FIVE BODIES RECOVERED

Steamer Bear Wrecked—Two Boatloads of Survivors Land—Others Reported Safe

EUREKA, Cal., June 15.—Five bodies have been recovered from the steamer Bear, wrecked last night on Sugar Loaf rock, two boatloads of survivors have come ashore, one is reported trying to land and the remaining passengers and crew are said to be aboard the tug Relief.

152 ON BOARD

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., June 15.—The steamer Bear of the San Francisco and Portland Steamship Co., southbound with 100 passengers and a crew of 52 men from Portland, Ore., for San Francisco, went ashore last night on Sugar Loaf, Cape Mendocino and passengers and crew were compelled to take refuge in the ship's lifeboats.

The order to abandon ship was given at midnight and all on board got away safely. The steamer went ashore during a thick fog, but the sea was reported smooth.

The battleship Oregon picked up the Bear's wireless call for assistance and headed at once full speed to the vessel's aid. The life-saving station at Eureka started out a power lifeboat and the tug Relief also left for the scene.

A radio message received early today reported that Capt. L. N. Nopander, master of the Bear, had ordered the ship abandoned about midnight and that all lifeboats had got safely away from the ship and were awaiting the arrival of the rescue boats.

The Bear has a cargo of 2700 tons. When the Bear grounded in the rocks Capt. Nopander did not send out an "S.O.S." call immediately, evidently believing he could clear his boat. Apparently finding the steamer tightly clamped he ordered the passengers into the lifeboats.

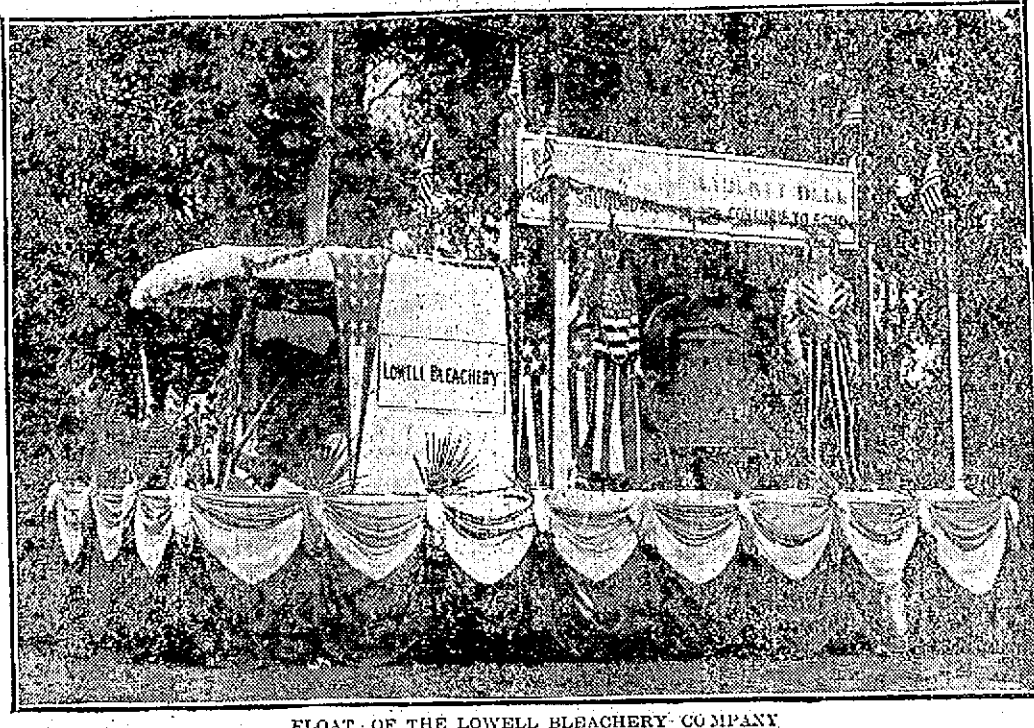

The Bear was leaking badly when deserted and at daybreak showed signs of breaking up.

The sea was calm and there was but

Lowell, true to her traditions, sent forth to the nation last night the message that Americanism meant today just what it meant in 1776.

Through the city's streets, from 7:45 o'clock until 10:15, marched more than 15,000 men and women, row after row of them, thundering the message home to the rhythm of tramping feet, piling conviction upon conviction that a solid American citizenship is determined that Americanism, by national preparedness, shall live forever.

The potent force of it all struck deep. Thousands of spectators, hanked at the edges of this human torrent, caught up the message and shouted it out in one of the greatest demonstrations of patriotism ever witnessed in this or any other city.

Not a man, woman or child will forget the impressiveness of the scene and the feeling that went with it when the parade halted and the thousands of voices joined in singing "America." Recollections of that moment will not die until the end comes, regardless of how many the years. And high above the heads of all was the emblem which symbolized the spirit of it all—Old Glory.

The parade started at 7:45 o'clock sharp.

Long before that hour the route of parade was choked with the largest crowds of humanity ever assembled in Lowell's history. The windows of every building, home or office along the line of march were the frames for countless more faces. Roofs were black with people and young America cheered from perilous positions. Not a tree or post but held its quota of spectators.

Through the long line of packed humanity there ran a tremor and the onlooker watched a sight that will live always in memory—an inspiration all through life. Words cannot paint the picture; superlatives seem weak. Now it would be row upon row of uniformed men, transformed by the fluttering flags they carried into a great human wave of red, white and blue.

Now it would be row upon row of white-garbed women, sweeping into view like a huge white cloud; and women never looked lovelier than those who marched last night.

Trained, uniformed men, or recruits from all life—everyday men and women—it was all the same. The same spirit prevailed and actuated them. Shoulders straightened, eyes fixed, as they strode by the reviewing stand under the eyes of the mayor, the lieutenant governor and others, including army officers, active and retired.

Veterans of Civil War

Probably no more enthusiastic group of spectators along the line of march was to be found than the G.A.R. Veterans of the various posts, who reviewed the parade from in front of the Green school, where seats had been provided for them. "The greatest sight in Lowell's history," was the unanimous opinion of every veteran.

There were a few G.A.R. men in the parade, a small detail of them, hardly from that old life—only in years, still young in spirit. And gazing on them the thousands of spectators had it poignantly thrust home that these same men back in the days of '61—fired with Americanism—held this country welded together and may point to it today and say, "We did it; made it what it is today." We gave our sons, our brothers for it. We risked our lives for it. We're too old now, so we've handed the trust down to you. Be guided by us—prepare!"

There was nothing frivolous about the bearing of these men and women. They did not laugh. They did not make acquaintances along the way. Earnest, fired with patriotism and earnestness for their cause, they surged spontaneously from the city's everyday life—they, the men and women who make the wheels go round—and now they marched as living testimonials of their belief.

Cheers for the Women

The spectacle that thrilled the most, though, was the spectacle of the marching women. Platoon upon platoon, company upon company, they came down the hill in Gorham street, through Merrimack square and by city hall—the mothers and prospective mothers who won't be afraid to raise their boys to be soldiers.

These women, and the women along the way who cheered them—and they were legion—proved beyond all doubt that the American women of today, like Moll Pitcher of history, are behind their men, ready to raise and give them to their country if their country needs them.

A roaring cheer, the kind of cheer that comes from the heart unbidden, met these women on every hand. It was theirs when they came down the hill in Gorham street. It was theirs when they finished. There wasn't one who fell out of line—not one that complained. Like the men they, too, marched for a big idea—and mud and cobble held no terrors.

There were many other features, impressive and unique; but next to that of the marching women in impressiveness was the enormous numbers of men and women in the division from the U. S. Cartridge factories. The other industries also showed up in splendid style, as did the business men, the large stores and the fraternal organizations.

Weather Clerk a Dear

A woman at city hall said the weather clerk was "a perfect dear" to hold back the rain which threatened all the afternoon until the parade was over. Not a drop of rain was felt until the last unit had passed the reviewing stand and then a heavy mist settled over the city, but there was no downpour.

Parade the Best Ever

Lieut. Col. Beaumont B. Buck, U.S.A., and Justice James B. Carroll of Springfield, of the supreme court, were among those on the reviewing stand. Lieut. Col. Buck was chief marshal of Boston's big Preparedness parade and he said last night that Lowell's parade was a close second. The number of marchers in the Boston

Mexicans Hurlled Back After 30 Minute Battle—Villa Chief is Captured—Note to Carranza

LARDO, Tex., June 15.—One hundred Mexican bandits crossing the Rio Grande, forty miles southeast of here, early today attacked the American border patrol near San Ignacio, killing two and wounding five, according to reports sent to Fort McIntosh, here, over the field telephone.

The Mexicans expected to find an insignificant detachment of Americans. Instead, they were met by Troops I and M, of the 14th Cavalry, 140 strong, under Major Alonzo Gray. They were hurled back across the river, losing six dead and several wounded.

The bandits first attacked Troop M. Troop I, a short distance up the river, heard the shooting and hurried to the scene. The attackers soon lost heart and retreated southward along the river, keeping on the American side for some distance before crossing back to Mexican soil.

The attack began at 2 a. m., and the fighting lasted about thirty minutes. The Americans were only partly surprised. The Mexicans succeeded in making their way around to the rear of the patrol's camp and fired the shot at a sentry.

PROMINENT VILLA CHIEF CAPTURED BY AMERICANS

FIELD HEADQUARTERS, June 14, via radio to Columbus, N. M., June 15.—Col. Pedro Lujan, one of the most prominent Villa chieftains remaining alive, was captured yesterday by Capt. F. G. Turner, commanding Troop M, 13th Cavalry, at Hacienda Tepohakens. Lujan was one of the leaders in the raid at Columbus, N. M., March 9. His capture nearly completes the extermination of the Villa leaders in the raid across the border.

NOTE TO CARRANZA COMPLETED BY LANSING

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Secretary Lansing laid before President Wilson today the completed draft of a note to Gen. Carranza, replying to the demand that American troops be withdrawn from Mexico. The president and Mr. Lansing conferred at length on the situation.

Unless some new development forces the situation, the reply will not be sent until next week, at the earliest. President Wilson and his advisers are anxious to deal with the Carranza note in such fashion that action can be attributed to domestic politics.

As prepared by Secretary Lansing, it is understood the note flatly declines to withdraw American troops until the de facto government has shown both its willingness and its ability to police the border sharply properly. It also is said to make sharp rejoinder to suggestions of the Mexican communications which officials regard as discourteous and uncalled for. Carranza questioned the good faith of the Washington administration and openly hinted that President Wilson had his eyes on the American political situation in dealing with the situation beyond the border.

Carranza's request for a new statement of the intentions of the United States toward Mexico probably will be complied with. It is understood, however, that the declaration will be so framed that the de facto government can have no doubt that the United States government regards such a request as wholly unnecessary in view of the consistency in view of all previous utterances of President Wilson, the acts of his administration and the behavior of the troops now beyond the border. It will be pointed out that a friendly spirit constantly has been manifested towards Mexico and Carranza will be told that failure of Mexican and the American troops to cooperate for the extermination of bandits was due to the hostility and suspicion exhibited by the Mexicans.

2000 REFUGEES ARRIVE IN JUAREZ FROM CHIHUAHUA

EL PASO, Tex., June 15.—Two thousand refugees including four Americans are in Juarez, today, having been moved from Chihuahua and the district around Torreon. The Americans declare that famine conditions prevail around Torreon and that the civil population would welcome any measure that would relieve them from the dangers of starvation. The newest issue of Carranza's currency, they say, is without purchasing power.

SIX CENT FARES Expert Favors Cut in Bay State Officials and Clerks

BOSTON, June 15.—The present revenues on the Bay State street railway system are not sufficient to pay operating expenses and taxes and to provide for depreciation and for an annual revenue of 5 per cent. to stockholders, according to a report to the public service commission by Elton J. Arnold of Chicago, an expert retained by the commission. The report was made public today at a further hearing before the commission into the road's petition for increased fares. Its conclusion, it was stated, took into consideration all possible economies.

Mr. Arnold recommended a cut of $125,000 a year in the salaries of officials and clerks and in office expenses.

ORPET MURDER TRIAL SCHOOLMATE OF MARION LAMBERT TO TESTIFY AT TODAY'S SESSION

WAUKEGAN, Ill., June 15.—Verne Jackson, a schoolmate of Marion Lambert, for whose death Will H. Orpet is on trial, is expected to be called by the prosecution today to describe the last meeting between Orpet and the girl.

Miss Jackson is said to be ready to testify that on the morning of Feb. 10, the day the girl's body was found, she observed Orpet behind a tree in the woods.

State's Attorney Dady announced today that he will himself take the witness stand to repeat the story Josephine Davis told him shortly after the tragedy, and which she recanted in her testimony in court this week.

SEEK TO AVERT STRIKE R. R. OFFICIALS AND REPRESENTATIVES OF EMPLOYEES MET IN CONFERENCE TODAY

NEW YORK, June 15.—Railway officials and delegates representing the four unions of railway employees met in conference again today in the expectation that this session would determine whether it will be necessary for the unions to vote on the question of declaring a strike to enforce their demands for an 8-hour day and pay at the rate of time and a half for overtime.

The railway managers in a separate conference late last night arrived at a decision as to whether they should make a compromise offer to the employees. They promised to make this verdict known to the union representatives today, but declined to say what it was in advance of the meeting. The union leaders declared that any compromise would be rejected; if it abolished double pay for two classes of service performed by the same employees. They said they were willing to compromise on the other main issue.

It was said today that five weeks would be required to take the strike vote and that when it was completed another conference with the railway managers would be held before putting a strike into effect.

TO RENOMINATE WILSON

gressive remedial legislation than the nation has ever had written upon its statute books since its birth. In former national contests in the last two decades our party came as a prophet. Today we come with deeds, not words; with performance, not promise. The democratic party has kept its word with the American people. We have made good.

The chairman reviewed at length the legislative records of the administration and eulogized the president for his direction of foreign affairs. The democrats, he said, had enacted a tariff law under which monopolies were curbed and unexampled prosperity attained; a banking law taking the money control out of the hands of an oligarchy and making panics no longer possible; and many reform measures of lesser importance.

He declared President Wilson's Mexican policy and his course in protecting American rights against the encroachments of European belligerents had shown all the world that the president "neither bullies the weak nor fears the strong."

In a concluding appeal for the triumph of patriotism above politics, Senator James said the renomination of such a president in partisan convention ought not to be necessary, and that to discredit him might palsy the hand that could write the peace treaty of the world.

At the outset the senator referred briefly to President Wilson's campaign against lobbying in congress and pointed out that under this administration the constitution had been amended for the first time since the Civil war when "we freed the senate from the control of the great interests by making it elective by the people at the polls." He then eulogized the Underwood-Simmons tariff act as one of which the party was justly proud.

"Not a schedule in it fosters a monopoly," he said. "Our republican friends told us it would close the factories, fill the streets with idle men, produce a panic, create soup houses and distress would reign everywhere; but we rejoice today to point to an unexampled prosperity in a nation with labor more generally employed, at higher rates, shorter hours, and better conditions than ever before. Our republican friends tell us that after the war is over poor, stricken, prostrate, torn, bleeding Europe will take our home market from us. I have seen the markets of the world. But we shall cut from them the last hope of having even a false issue, for we shall pass a bill creating a tariff board to gather the facts created by new war conditions."

Turning to the federal reserve law, Senator James declared that it alone averted a panic at the outbreak of the European war.

"What would have been the result if the old republican system had been in effect," he asked. "The stock exchanges in every city in the world were closed. Europe poured its vast holdings in precious metals upon our shores. Who thinks that the old republican system of finance under the guidance of those petrodollar guardians would have been able to withstand this mighty cataclysm? But what was the result? Not a bank closed its doors; not a laborer was thrown out of employment; not a business was forced into bankruptcy; but there stood strong, serving the masses of mankind, this great legislative achievement of the democratic party. As the master achievement of Woodrow Wilson, to my mind, next to keeping a hundred million people at peace with the world, the historian will record the federal reserve law."

Declaring that "self-defense and preparation for it is as necessary now as ever before," the speaker pointed to the administration's preparedness program as a proof that the party has lived in "preparedness without militarism."

"In 1906," he continued, "I attended the great peace conference held in London. I thought that the millennium of peace had come and such a thing as the world's war was impossible; but that day when the Christian heart shall rule the world is not in sight. We must not mistake dishonor for peace, as we cannot mistake oppression for peace. Woodrow Wilson and the democratic party advocate an army big enough to make aggressors think the second time before they strike a blow. Democracy wants an army and a navy in keeping with the dignity, preservation, and worth of this great republic. We do not want a foot of anybody's else soil, and, by the eternal God, they shall not take a foot of ours."

"During this administration we have done more to build up an army and navy in three years than the republican party did in 40 years of its existence. More has been done to give the American people a navy and army in three months than Col. Roosevelt and Mr. Taft did in 11 years."

Senator James spoke of the republican platform declaration for "a continuous policy of national defense," declaring that only two propositions for a continuous policy ever had been made in American history, one, by the general board of the navy in 1903, which was plighted by a republican secretary of the navy, and the other by President Wilson in his address to congress last December.

"But what happened when this matter was under consideration in the naval affairs committee of the house?" he continued. "Every republican member on the committee decided to oppose the president's 'continuous program' and would vote for no program longer than one year. After 15 years of failure, even to let the public know of the 'continuous policy' proposed by naval experts, much less to carry out such a policy, and after the republicans on the house naval affairs committee in June, 1916, unanimously opposed the president's policy, they now say they favor the 'continuous policy.'"

The republican plank, declaring for "an effective system of naval credits as opposed to the ineffective law proposed by the present democratic administration," was assailed by Senator James, who declared that almost every republican in the house and senate had voted for the administration's rural credits bill and that none had charged that it was ineffective or had proposed a substitute.

The senator also replied to republican criticism of the administration's shipping bill which he declared would have given the United States an adequate merchant marine by now had it not been killed at the last session of congress by a republican filibuster.

"For the first time in the history of our country," said Senator James, after reviewing briefly democratic legislation which he declared had made prosperity possible, "the United States leads the world in exports. We are more prosperous than ever, and mills which have not turned a spindle for years are now busy. All the laborers of the United States are employed as never before. With the world-war raging, our country is the only neutral one that is not in distress and the only that has not declared a moratorium. Every demand of the stress of war, the democratic party has met quickly. We have freed business from the black-mail of the politician as we have emancipated it from the clutch of monopoly."

The senator likened President Wilson's Mexican policy to that of Lincoln, and quoted from a declaration of the latter to show that he had declined to intervene when conditions were much the same as now.

"It is a perfectly easy thing," he continued, "for the president of the United States to plunge his country into war if he is a politician before he is a patriot. He would seek his own re-election as he came upon horseback over the bloody highway of conquering armies. Of course our army could invade Mexico and march in triumph to its capital, but after the war was over other armies would march an army of widows and orphans, an army of cripples and men broken in health, an army of pensioners, and an army of tax collectors gathering up the earnings of the people to pay the great war debt."

The president had acted quickly, the senator said, when there was an invasion of American territory, and the pacifistic expedition was doing all that this country could do with honor in Mexico.

"No president during the life of this republic," said the senator, "has ever had to deal with so many delicate and dangerous problems as those which have confronted President Wilson. With more than half the world in arms in Europe, with Mexico in revolution at our border, these difficult and complicating problems have confronted him almost daily, and he has handled them as becomes a patriot and a statesman. When the Lusitania was sunk the militant voice of Theodore Roosevelt cried out for war, and if he had been president of the United States at that time, today 500,000 brave American sons would be contending around the forts of Verdun in this mighty maelstrom of blood—thousands would have been buried in ditches. Our president, patient, patriotic, far-sighted, the real statesman, handled this question with the greatest ability and won for America its greatest diplomatic victory. "There are happily two kinds of courage, the courage of the man who is willing to undertake the dangers himself and the courage of the man that sends others to the conflict. Woodrow Wilson has both kinds of courage—the courage of conflict and the courage to act coolly and sensibly when he is dealing with the lives of others—the fate of a nation."

"Four years ago they sneeringly called Woodrow Wilson the school teacher. Today he is the world teacher. His subject is the protection of American life and American rights under international law. And without orphaning a single American child, without wounding a single American mother, without firing a single gun, he wrung from the most militant spirit that ever brooded over a battlefield, an acknowledgment of American right and an agreement to American demands. He has elevated himself to that lofty but lowly eminence, occupied by George Washington, Abraham Lincoln and Woodrow Wilson, the three worst abused and best loved Americans the republic ever grew."

MOVE TO MAKE CHANGE

Many Want Nominations to Take Place Tonight—Others Favor Original Plan

ST. LOUIS, June 15.—Still fired with the enthusiasm stirred up yesterday by the keynote speech of former Governor Glynn of New York on Americanism, preparedness, peace and prosperity, delegates today crowded into the Coliseum where the democratic national convention is being held, to hear more party doctrine expounded by leaders of the democracy.

While the sub-committee of the resolutions committee was engaged in its work of platform building, the program called for the permanent organization of the convention, another keynote speech by permanent chairman, and the delivery of addresses by well known party leaders.

The day's plans provided for the opening of the convention at 11 o'clock by Temporary Chairman Glynn, with a prayer by the Right Rev. John J. Glennon, archbishop of St. Louis. The report of the committee on credentials was expected to take up but a few minutes.

James Chairman

The committee on permanent organization recommended Senator Ollie James of Kentucky for permanent chairman, who was prepared to deliver an address that was looked forward to with much interest.

The committee on rules and order of business had recommended no serious changes in the rules that governed former democratic national conventions. The rules of the house of representatives are to be adopted. President Wilson will be nominated by acclamation and Vice President Marshall, leaders say, will have more than two-thirds of the 1902 votes in the convention for renomination.

Nomination: Friday Night

No change is expected in the program to nominate President Wilson late Friday night, though William A. Glasgow, Jr., the Pennsylvania member of the rules committee, may offer a resolution in the convention providing that nominations be made the order of business at 8 o'clock tonight, it was said. The resolutions committee, however, has pointed out that the platform will not be ready for the consideration of the convention until probably Friday morning.

Bryan Going on Stump

Managers of the convention said considerable time probably would be given over to well known party leaders. That William J. Bryan, who is attending the convention as a newspaper correspondent, will be called upon for a speech, no one doubts. Mr. Bryan, it is known, would respond and make a speech of support for the president. The Nebraska senator was quiet last night as he had nothing to offer the convention except that which the president wanted. "His plank will be mine," Mr. Bryan was reported to have said. "I expect to go before the people in his behalf."

With the program for the day carried out, the convention was expected to adjourn until 10 o'clock tomorrow, when the resolutions committee will be ready to report. With the adoption of the platform a recess will be declared until tomorrow night, when the presidential nomination will be made.

Committee On Resolutions

The sub-committee on resolutions met today and planned to sit until its work was ready for the full committee, which will meet at 3 o'clock tomorrow to receive the report. The sub-committee is composed of Senator Stone of Missouri, chairman; Representative Rainey, Illinois; Senator Walsh, Montana; Senator Hollis, New Hampshire; Representative Fitzgerald, New York; Senator Pomeroy, Ohio; Palmer, Pennsylvania; Senator Martin, Virginia and Gov. Stanley, Kentucky. When the members began work today they had a fair idea what the platform should contain. A declaration on Americanism appeared to be of paramount interest among them and the president's flag day speech at Washington yesterday received some attention. It was said that President Wilson's idea of what the plank on Americanism should be was telegraphed here last night. It virtually charged conspiracy on the part of some foreign-born citizens to influence foreign and domestic affairs and recommended organizations that failed to repudiate such alleged conspiracy.

It is understood that President Wilson has not suggested in any definite language approval of his action in maintaining peace.

Planks prepared by the president have been turned over to the sub-committee by Secretary of War Baker. It is learned that there will be no specific mention of Mexico in the declaration of principles but that the question will be covered in a general way in the plank dealing with foreign affairs. This plank will declare that every nation has a right to regulate its own internal affairs.

Protection For Americans

Adequate protection for Americans at home and abroad will be among the pronouncements and a permanent peace tribunal will be favored. There will be a preparedness plank and an unequivocal expression against war for aggrandizement.

Here, too, friction in the resolutions committee will come over the equal suffrage question. There are some committeemen who are opposed to any reference to the equal rights question; some want a declaration along the lines of the plank in-

FIGHT FOR SUFFRAGE

Suffragists Regard Committee Appointment as None Too Favorable to Their Cause

ST. LOUIS, Mo., June 15.—Suffragists fighting for an equal rights plank in the democratic national platform today regarded the resolutions sub-committee appointed last night as none too favorable to their cause. Only three of its members, Representative Rainey of Illinois, Senator Walsh of Montana, and Senator Hollis of New Hampshire, are outspoken for suffrage, it was declared.

The sub-committee was declared by democratic leaders to be inclined enough toward suffrage to give it only about the same measure of endorsement as is contained in the republican platform. Such a declaration would be entirely satisfactory to the National American Woman Suffrage association, but unsatisfactory to the women's party. Hence, the latter organization today exerted every influence to convince members of the sub-committee that democratic success next fall in the 12 states in which women are enfranchised depended largely on the democrats going further in their platform than the republicans have gone.

PLANK ON AMERICANISM

President Wilson Condemns Citizens of Foreign Birth for Political Activity in Behalf of Native Land

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Out of the flood of messages reaching the White House today from the democratic national convention at St. Louis, those of special interest to President Wilson told of the reception of his proposed plank condemning citizens of foreign birth for political activity in behalf of their native land.

The president yesterday sent to convention leaders a request that the plank on Americanism include an unequivocal challenge to so-called "hyphenates," who seek to embarrass the national government in its dealings with foreign nations. He came out strongly for such an attitude in his flag day address yesterday, when he charged that a small group of foreign-born citizens are seeking "to levy political blackmail" to accomplish their purpose.

The president's wish is to pledge the democratic party against any change in policy on account of activity of these propagandists and thus virtually challenge the republican nominee to take a similar stand.

The president was expected to send to St. Louis today word of his choice of a national committee chairman.

TO SUCCEED MCCORMICK

Vance McCormick of Pennsylvania Selected by President Wilson—Administration Leaders Notified

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Vance McCormick of Pennsylvania has been selected by President Wilson to succeed William F. McCombs as chairman of the democratic national committee.

Administration leaders in St. Louis were notified today by the president.

It is believed here that Mr. McCormick will be able to solidify the party and harmonize different elements. The president looks upon him as progressive and thoroughly in harmony with his ideas of how the coming campaign should be run.

The democratic national committee elects its chairman, but there is no doubt that the president's choice will be formally ratified.

McCormick, who is a native of Harrisburg and 44 years old, owns the Harrisburg Patriot and has been identified with democratic policies since his youth. He was mayor from 1902 to 1905 and this year was the party's candidate for governor.

VERY EFFECTIVE METHOD FOR BANISHING HAIRS

(Modes of Today)

At very little cost any woman can rid her face of hairy growths if she will use the delicate treatment. This is made by mixing some water with a little powdered delatone. This paste is spread upon the hairy surface for 2 or 3 minutes, then rubbed off and the skin washed, when every trace of hair will have vanished. No harm results from this treatment, but care should be used to buy real delatone.

PRES. WILSON'S WARNING

Defies Disloyal Foes—Charges Germans With Political Black-mail in Election

WASHINGTON, June 15.—A charge that foreign-born citizens of the United States are trying to levy political blackmail and to undermine the influence of the national government was made by President Wilson in a flag speech here yesterday.

His assertion sounded the keynote of one of the foremost issues on which he will go before the country for reelection, and touched upon a platform declaration which will be submitted by the administration to the St. Louis convention.

The president spoke before a crowd of thousands gathered at the foot of the Washington monument after he had reviewed for five hours a great preparedness parade at the head of which he himself had marched down Pennsylvania avenue. He declared that not since the Civil war had it been tested as it now is being tested, whether the Stars and Stripes stood for any one united purpose.

Loyalty to Flag First Test
"There is disloyalty active in the United States and it must be absolutely crushed," declared the president, speaking emphatically. "It proceeds from a minority, a very small minority, but a very active and subtle minority."

"It works underground, but it also shows its ugly head where we can see it; and there are those at this moment who are trying to levy a species of blackmail, saying, 'Do what we wish in the interest of foreign sentiment or we will wreak our vengeance at the polls.' That is the sort of thing against which the American nation will turn with a might and triumph of sentiment which will teach these gentlemen once for all that loyalty to this flag is the first test of tolerance in the United States."

The president's words were taken as an open challenge to foreign-born Americans who, he had learned from foreign language newspapers and other sources, are opposing him for reelection.

Flag Raised on Monument
While the democratic convention was being opened at St. Louis Mr. Wilson devoted the entire day to the flag day and preparedness demonstration. Carrying a large American flag, he walked from the capitol to the White House at the head of more than 50,000 marchers, including many high government officials, government employees, employees of the capital's business houses, companies of cadets, National Guardsmen, Union and Confederate veterans, and members of commercial and social organizations.

The parade started from the capitol grounds. At the White House the president took his place in the reviewing stand and was joined there by Secretaries McAdoo, Redfield, Lusk and Wilson, Postmaster General Burleson, Atty Gen. Gregory and Sec. Lansing.

Before he began speaking, cannon fired a national salute of 21 guns and the Marine band played the "Star Spangled Banner" while a huge flag was drawn slowly to the top of the white monument, 550 feet above the ground. Sec. Lansing presided, and in introducing the president, emphasized the duty of present-day Americans to preserve unsullied ideals handed down by the founders of the republic.

Sentiment That Needs Action
Mr. Wilson first referred to the "very moving spectacle of the morning—an almost unprepared outpouring of thousands of sober citizens to manifest their interest in the safety of the country and the sacredness of the flag."

"I need not remind you," he said, "how much sentiment has been poured out in honor of the flag of the United States. Sentiment is a propulsive power, but it does not propel in the way that is serviceable to the nation, unless it has a definite purpose before it. This is not merely a day of sentiment. It is a day of purpose."

"It is an eloquent symbol of the unity of our history that upon this monument which commemorates the man who did most to establish the American Union we should have hoisted those stars that have so multiplied since his time, associated with those that in red and white, which mean all that is pure in our purpose and all that is red in our blood in the service of a nation whose history has been full of inspiration because of his example."

"But Washington was one of the least sentimental men that America has ever produced. The thing that thrilled me about Washington is that he is impatient of any sentiment that has not got definite purpose in it. His letters run along the lines of sentiment and the most inspiring times that this nation has ever seen have been the times when sentiment had to be translated into action."

New Questions of Loyalty
"Apparently this nation is again and again being tested and always tested in the same way. The latest supreme test this nation went through was the test of the Civil war. You know how deep that cut. While it seemed a time of terror, it has turned out a proof of the validity of our hope. Did you not see the blue and the Gray mingling this morning in the procession? Was there any contradiction of feeling or division of sentiment evident there for a moment?"

"And yet again the test is applied, my fellow countrymen. A new sort of division of feeling has sprung up amongst us. You know that we are derived in our citizenship from every nation in the world. It is not singular that sentiment should be disturbed by what is going on on the other side of the water, but while sentiment may be disturbed, loyalty ought not to be."

To Be Quelled by Spiritual Force
"I believe that the vast majority of those men whose lineage is directly derived from the nation now at war are just as loyal to the flag of the United States as any native citizen of this beloved land, but there are some men of that extraction who are not, and they, not only in past months, but at the present time, are doing their best to undermine the influence of the government which are foreign to us, and which are not derived from the questions of our own politics."

"The president here declared there is disloyalty in the United States which must be absolutely crushed."

"That is the lesson," he continued, "that I have come to remind you of on this day—no more sentiment. Are you going yourselves, individually and collectively to see to it that no man is tolerated who does not do honor to this flag? It is not a matter of force—it is a matter of spiritual force."

"It is to be achieved as we think, as we purpose, as we believe, and when the world finally learns that America is indivisible, then the world will learn how truly and profoundly great and powerful America is."

Intrigue and Sedition
"I realize personally, my fellow citizens, the peculiar significance of the flag of the United States at this time, because there was a day not many years ago when, although I thought I knew what the flag stood for, it had not penetrated my whole consciousness as it has now."

"If you could have gone with me through the space of the last two years and could have felt the subtle impact of intrigue and sedition and have realized with me that those to whom you have entrusted authority are trustees not only of the power, but of the very spirit and purpose of the United States, you would realize with me that solemnity with which I look upon that sublime symbol of our unity and power."

"I want you to share that consciousness with me. I want you to realize that in what I am saying I am merely your spokesman, merely trying to interpret your thoughts, merely trying to put into inadequate words the purpose that is in your hearts. I regard this day as a day of reeducation to all the ideals of the United States."

Show Feeling of the Nation
"I took the liberty a few weeks ago to ask our fellow-citizens all over the United States to gather together in celebration of this day, the anniversary of the adoption of our present flag as the emblem of the nation."

"I had no legal right to declare it a holiday, I had no legal right to ask for the cessation of business, but when you read the papers tomorrow morning I think you will see that authority was not necessary; that the people of the country were waiting for an opportunity to cease their ordinary business and gather together in united demonstration of their feelings as a nation."

"I was a very happy thought that led the committee of gentlemen who had charge of the demonstration of the forenoon to choose the 14th of June for the parade which most of us have witnessed. It is a tiresome thing, my fellow-citizens, to stand for hours and see a parade go by, but I want to take you into this secret: it was not half as tiresome as the inauguration parade."

Violent Honor of United States
"The inauguration parade is a very interesting thing, but it is painfully interesting to the man who is being inaugurated, because there lie ahead of him the hues of responsibilities whose horoscope cannot be cast by any man. But today was interesting because the inauguration parade of the day of my inauguration is more than three years gone by. I have gone through deep waters with you in the meantime."

"This parade was not a demonstration in honor of any man. It was an outpouring of people to demonstrate a great national sentiment. I was not the object of it. I was one citizen among millions whose heart beat in unison with it."

"I felt caught up and buoyed up along the great stream of human purpose which seemed to flow before me by the stand by the White House, and I shall go away from this meeting as I came away from that parade, with all the deepest purposes of my heart renewed; and as I see the winds lovingly unfold the beautiful lines of our great flag, I shall seem to see a hand pointing the way of duty, no matter how hard, no matter how long, which we shall tread while we vindicate the glory and honor of the United States."

WOMAN KNIFED THREE

VIOLENT ATTACK MADE IN BOSTON.

STORE—PROPHET, WIFE AND SON ARE VICTIMS

BOSTON, June 15.—An unknown woman stabbed three persons in the dry goods store at 381 Hanover street last evening, and made her escape, leaving no trace of her identity. Her victims were taken to the Relief hospital, suffering from painful though not serious wounds. Up to a late hour the police had not been able to locate the assailant.

The victims were Samuel Slavin, 46, his wife, Mary, 42, and their son Benjamin, 21. The husband suffers from wounds of the cheeks and left chest; the wife from a wound in the left breast, and the son from a wound in the chest.

The woman entered the store conducted by the Slavins just before 9 last evening, and Mrs. Slavin waited on her.

A dispute arose, and the woman suddenly drew a knife and stabbed Mrs. Slavin. The latter screamed and her husband ran to her assistance. The woman at once turned on him, and stabbed him twice, and then the son attempted to aid his parents, only to be met by the ever-ready assailant.

The woman then rushed from the store, hiding her knife in the folds of her skirt as she ran.

THE SPELLBINDER

Mayor O'Donnell demonstrated his ability to put through successfully a big project on short notice, in planning and carrying out the Preparedness parade of last evening, within two weeks' time. His chief aide in the undertaking was "General Co-operation," for everybody took a hand, and considering the fact that it was the biggest thing in the parade line that Lowell has ever witnessed, there was comparatively little of a disappointing nature and less dissatisfaction over the affair.

Of course there were some who didn't like the places in line assigned them, but Solomon himself, couldn't have pleased everybody under similar circumstances. The idea of the committee in arranging the roster was to divide the music evenly so that all would have an opportunity to march within a reasonable distance of a band or drum corps. This was done because many of the organizations couldn't afford to engage music nor could the city provide for them. Of course there were some who didn't like the places in line assigned them, but Solomon himself, couldn't have pleased everybody under similar circumstances. The idea of the committee in arranging the roster was to divide the music evenly so that all would have an opportunity to march within a reasonable distance of a band or drum corps. This was done because many of the organizations couldn't afford to engage music nor could the city provide for them.

That was one reason why the roster was made out as it was. Another reason was certain obligations of the committee to some of the organizations appearing in line. Annually the Elks, all over the country, observe Flag day; it is a matter of ritual. The Elks, therefore were obliged to hold exercises on that day, and on no other. They agreed to postpone their exercises until after the parade and only asked in return that they be assigned a position as visible in order that they might get back to their hall before the night had gone. The Welfare association of the United States Cartridge Co., some time ago had engaged the Casino for a grand ball and had 3000 tickets. The plan had been to have an evening to accommodate its employees and all arrangements had been made before the Preparedness parade idea was broached. Hence the Cartridge shop people, unable to postpone the dance and desirous of parading requested that they be given a position in the front part of the parade in order that they might get back to the Casino in time. But as a general rule everybody was satisfied with the position assigned him. During the week one man made the demand that the post office employees lead the parade by reason of the fact that they were federal employees. But he did not represent the employees, who were satisfied with a position that would permit their brethren from Boston to get back to the depot in time for the last train.

The Cartridge shop business men wanted the parade to pass along the white way of that section but the committee found it impossible to grant their request on account of the length of the parade; the fact that there were hundreds of women and young people in line making a short route necessary and because of the ground crossing there. It was suggested that the parade could be formed on the South common and proceed down Thordike street to Middlesex street, but again the length of parade put this suggestion out of commission for in order to form properly of side and intersecting streets for the different divisions to occupy in lining up, and Davis square at the junction of Gerhart, Central and Thordike streets made an ideal forming point for so large a lineup. A parade of the magnitude of last night's affair made up for a large part of undrilled organizations has never been attempted before in this city, and surely its promoters deserve great credit.

The Bridge Contract
The contract for the new Pawtucket bridge has been given out and that means that the bridge will be a reality at last. After a lengthy discussion yesterday afternoon the municipal council formally voted the contract to the National Engineering company, and no further time will be lost in beginning the work which has been under discussion for over a year. This year's government found itself up against a succession of obstacles, and obstructions but finally overcame all of them and to the probable disappointment of some who desired to see the government fall down on the proposition as its predecessors did, is ready to proceed with the work.

Of course the public is naturally interested in the identity of the contractors who are to do the work. Among contractors and building interests they are already favorably known by their work in this city. The National Engineering company was organized in Lowell, in the latter part of 1915 to absorb the contracting business of F. G. Barrows & Company. The officers of the company are all well known in the contracting field. Mr. Barrows, the vice-president and general manager, is a Harvard graduate, class of 1908, formerly associated with the Jenneque Construction company, of New York and Paris. Mr. Page, the general superintendent, was formerly superintendent of construction for the Swift interests in Chicago. Mr. McGahery, the secretary was formerly active in the dredging business in Boston and Portland, and Captain Doe, who is the president of the company represents the local interests.

In Lowell, last year this company did nearly $1,000,000 worth of work for the U. S. Cartridge Co.; the R. B. Phillips Co., the Newton Mfg. Co., and the American Hide and Leather company besides other industrial plants in Worcester, Portsmouth and Boston. The remarkable speed record made by them on the South Lowell plant of the U. S. Cartridge Co. is still a topic of discussion among builders, and at the same time the company is reported to have put up a five story concrete building in Boston for the American Steam Gauge and Valve company in 40 days. While with the Jenneque company Mr. Barrows and some of his associates had a wide experience in bridge building in many important structures both in the United States and in France. Mr. Van Deyling, formerly chief engineer of the Jenneque company is chief engineer of the N.E.C. and with Mr. Ramsey, local superintendent of construction of the company is already well known in local circles.

Mayor O'Donnell put up a hard and persistent fight to get the bridge started this year, as he had promised to do before election. Last year's government after discussing the project for a whole year, left the matter in a state of chaos for its successors and only by continuous and persistent effort has the municipal council finally disposed of the multitudinous preliminaries without which no bridge could ever be built.

Demand for More Policemen

The demand for additional policemen becomes greater each day. Since the warm weather came the Sunday auto traffic is becoming tremendous and traffic officers are needed at least at Central and Merrimack streets and at Merrimack square on Sundays. There are also demands for traffic officers at Moody and Alton streets and at Pawtucket square, and at the present time there is an open traffic position. When there are demands for police on the parks and commons during the summer months. The introduction of the deer family at Fort Hill park has been followed by a great increase in the number of visitors to the park and those who have gone there to see the deer have become so favorably impressed with the beauty of the park that they have returned and brought others and now the largest crowds that have ever been known to visit Fort Hill are gathering there daily. It would seem that after many years Lowell's most picturesque breathing spot, is at last appreciated by the public. On account of the restrictions on the old Fair Grounds, the circus and Wild West show cannot hire that land this year, and hence when the advance men came here to look for locations, one of them sought out Sheed park, and going to the summit of Fort Hill surveyed the area beneath him, with a view to locating there, which of course he subsequently found was out of the question. Speaking of his visit to Fort Hill to Secretary John H. Murphy, of the board of trade, the circus man said: "I have visited all of the parks of the principal cities of the United States but I want to say for your Fort Hill park, that for a park of its size this country does not contain a finer park, for natural beauty and picturesque layout. I should think it would be crowded with people all the time."

With a view to providing a few extra officers without necessitating the raising of more money this year, Mayor O'Donnell has asked the superintendent of police to make an analysis of his appropriation, together with an estimate of his departmental expenses for the remainder of the year to ascertain if there will be a sufficient amount of money left in the appropriation to permit of the employment of a few more men; for the summer months. During the first half of the year the expenses of the police department have been kept down to a minimum, and for that reason the mayor is of the opinion that it may be possible to put on a few men, as they are badly needed. Lowell has one of the smallest police forces per population of any city in the country.

ton parade was 12,000 and it was, in reality, a state affair, so that Lowell's showing last night, considering size and all else, was away ahead of Boston. Asked what he thought of the parade Justice Carroll said: "It was the finest parade I have ever seen outside of New York."

Parade Started on Time

It was 7.15 o'clock, and not a minute later, when Chief Marshal John Jacob Rogers gave the order to march, and the staff moved forward, followed closely by the military division. Thirty-five minutes later, two mounted policemen, advance agents for the parade, passed the reviewing stand. Stiles' Military band of Lynn appeared next, playing Reeves' "Sec-

James F. O'Donnell, Bishop Henri da Silva, Rev. C. E. Fisher, D.D., Gen. Adelbert Ames and Warren M. Powers of the committee on arrangements and others.

Decorations

The decorations throughout the city were profuse and beautiful, and some of the big stores had elaborate displays. Although bunting and flags were artistically arranged on different buildings throughout the city, inasmuch as yesterday was Flag day, the decorations on the Sun building, which consisted entirely of flags, was in keeping with the day. Flags were displayed from every window on the front of the building, while from the parapet on the roof there was a line of flags. There were 115 flags in all, not including the large American flag which floated from the top of the flagpole 150 feet above the street, and the American flag which hung over the entrance to the building. During the day the flags waited for a gentle breeze, floated to and fro, and when the wind died down in the evening they hung straight downward making a very pretty as well as patriotic decoration.

FIRST DIVISION

The first division, which might be termed the military division, presented an imposing sight it being composed of the four local companies of the 6th regiment, M.V.M., the Lowell section of battery C, Field Artillery, the three Irish semi-military organizations, six companies of the Angel Guardian cadets, several other guards, the business men's battalion, Spanish War veterans, a detachment of former soldiers and sailors, Sons of veterans, high school regiment, Boys' brigade, Boy Scouts, the O.M.I. cadets and clerks and carriers of the local post office.

The militia companies appeared to advantage and the entire line of this division presented a sight that will long be remembered. It impressed those who witnessed the parade, especially from a standpoint of "preparedness." It was also one of the longest divisions, as it took about half an hour to pass a given point at a good marching pace.

Chief Marshal Pearson

The division was headed by Gen. Gardner W. Pearson, as chief marshal, together with the members of his mounted staff which consisted of Lieut. W. C. MacBrayne of the governor's staff, chief aide; Capt. Lewis G. Hunton, Sixth regiment; Capt. Harold G. Patten, Eighth regiment; Capt. Charles A. Ranlett, formerly of the Eighth regiment; Capt. Mason D. Bryant, Sixth regiment medical corps; Sergt. Harry C. Roberts and a detachment of Sixth regiment scouts.

Then came the Sixth Regiment band led by Sergt. Major George D. Crowell, who acted as drum major and under the direction of Chief Musician Z. I. Bissonnette. The selections played along the line of march were greatly enjoyed by everyone. It was inspiring to say the least and sent a thrill of patriotism to the hearts of the people.

National Guard Companies

Next in order came the four companies of the National Guard headed by Major Colby T. Kittredge of the second battalion of the Sixth regiment with Lieut. Harry G. Sheldon, battalion adjutant as his aid. The members of the companies with one exception wore the olive drab uniforms. The exceptionary organizations, namely: The Wolfe Tone Guards, Sheridan Guards and Meagher Guards. Capt. Francis J. Kierce and Lieuts. Michael Monahan and Thomas Kenney were at the head of the Wolfe Tone Guards. There were forty men in line, all attired in blue dress uniforms.

The Sheridan Guards, headed by Capt. C. H. Daley and Lieuts. James O'Garra and Michael McDermott wore blue uniforms.

The Meagher Guards, forty strong, wearing the regulation blue, were headed by Capt. Jeremiah Leary and trousers. Garde Sacre Coeur presented a neat sight with their blue uniforms with white braid and white stripes, each member carrying a sword. The members of the Garde St. Louis wore neat uniforms of blue and carried guns.

The officers of the A. G. cadets were as follows: Major Alcide Bellefeuille, Co. A, Capt. Charles Rondeau, Lieuts. Joseph Baribault and Armand Belanger; Co. B, Capt. Rodolphe Rondeau, Lieuts. Arthur Lemay and Bernard Bernier; Co. C, Capt. Albert Corcoran, Lieut. Leo Mongeau; Co. D, Capt. Arthur Maher, Lieuts. Ovide Verville and Eugene Morrisette; Co. E, Capt. Robert Chappellaine, Lieut. Edouard Bourard; Co. F, Capt. Arthur Theriault, Lieut. Leo Leblanc.

Garde Frontenac—Capt. Albert Bergeron, Lieuts. Alphonse Vallier and William Leslier.

Garde d'Honneur—Capt. Nelson Phillips, Lieuts. Emilio Bordeleau and Louis St. Jean.

Garde Sacre-Coeur—Capt. Horace Desilets, Lieuts. Alfred Renaud and Hermidas Cote.

Garde St. Louis—Capt. Arsene Guy, Lieuts. Edmond Gamache and Severin Lambert.

Business Men's Battalion

The Salem Cadet band, one of the best organizations of its kind in this part of the country, commanded by Jean Missud, headed the Business Men's battalion. This battalion, which was only recently organized, presented a beautiful sight and they were cheered all along the route of parade. There were four companies in the battalion, and a total of 230 men were in line. Despite the fact that the members had but four or five practice drills they kept an excellent line and every man was in step.

The battalion was led by Col. Butler Ames, A. D. Milliken and Collins Van-attention in the Fourth of July parade in this city last year.

Army and Navy

Next in order came a detachment of former regular soldiers and sailors with Yeoman H. E. Tucker of the United States naval recruiting station at its head. There were 55 men in line and Yeoman Tucker was assisted in commanding by former Sergt. J. A. Brown of the hospital corps.

Sons of Veterans

The Sons of Veterans to the number of fifty and headed by Commander L. F. Munro, followed. The members were attired in camp uniforms of blue and wore white gloves. Assisting in the command were Fred Fletcher and Charles H. Foote.

High School Regiment

The High School regiment, composed of 12 companies, made an excellent appearance. It was headed by the High School Rifle and Drum corps. The young soldiers were in command of Col. Herbert T. Kerrigan, with a staff comprising Lieut. Col. Raymond P. Bourgeois, Regt. Adj. R. B. Nichols, Regt. Quartermaster William Barlofsky and Capt. C. H. O'Donnell and Lieut. R. E. Cardell as regimental orderlies.

Boys' Brigade

Next in order came the Boys' Brigade of the First Trinitarian church, led by Commander George F. Lockhart and the chaplain, Rev. Raymond C. Clapp. Following the brigade were eight members of the Nashua, N. H. Boys' Brigade headed by Capt. Harry S. Cutter.

Boy Scouts

Another feature of this division was the 25 troops of the Boy Scouts. The regulation scout uniforms were worn and almost every boy carried an American flag. The scouts were led by Scout Commissioner Luther W. Faulkner and Scout Executives Alex. Williams and James Kibberd. They made an excellent showing in numbers, marching and general appearance.

O.M.I. Cadets

The O.M.I. Cadets, who were next in line, presented a splendid alignment. Their marching, from the largest boy to the smallest, was truly marvelous. Owing to some misunderstanding the Cadets were without their corps, it having previously been engaged by the United States Cartridge Co. Nevertheless, even without the band, the boys kept good step. Major William Conroy was in command. The boys were attired in their new uniforms, blue brass-buttoned coats, West Point style, and white duck pants. One of the features of this detachment was a number of boys dressed all in white, carrying large American flags held by the edges.

Postoffice Employees

One of the big features of this division was that of the employees of the local postoffice, headed by the Letter Carriers' band of Boston. The men marched excellently and maintained a good line.

The postoffice men were headed by Postmaster Edwards Cheney, owing to the absence of Postmaster Neenan in St. Louis. On Mr. Cheney's staff were Lieut. George S. Howard, as adjutant; Supt. of Mails Edwin L. Cooke and Supt. of Delivery Albin S. Ashworth. The letter carriers wore their regulation uniform, with red carnations in their buttonholes and each carried a along the line hats went off and cheer after cheer went up. Yet there was nothing of show or of ostentation in their manner. They marched like drilled ranks and their marshals and aides had the various divisions in perfect control. After the sober uniforms of the soldiers in the first division, the dresses of the women gave refreshing variety, but what was admired most was their spirit and their splendid discipline. There was also a wonderful lesson of democracy in the spectacle. Daughter of veteran, nurse, college graduate, mill girl, society leader and office girl marched along under the Stars and Stripes in one grand American sisterhood. No mention of the parade can be made for years to come that will not recall the splendid showing of the women of Lowell, and those who made the showing possible are entitled to a hearty share of credit.

At the head of the division marched

Chief of Staff

D.A.R. Band

The Lowell Military band was followed by one of the most inspiring divisions in the parade, the Daughters of the American Revolution, Molly Varnum, Lydia Darrach and Old Bay State cheerleaders. Marching in true soldier fashion, dressed in white with sashes of red, white and blue and headed by a caption with the motto "D.A.R.—for Home and Country," borne by Mrs. Joseph Barber, they made a splendid showing. Commanding the three chapters were Mrs. Burton H. Wiggin, major, Mrs. Charles E. Howe, color bearer, and escorts, Mrs. Charles K. Miller and Mrs. Robert Fulton. In command of the various companies were Mrs. A. W. Thompson, Miss Belle Horner, Mrs.

Those on the reviewing stand included: Lieut. Gov. Calvin W. Coolidge, Mayor James E. O'Donnell, Lieut. Col. Beaumont B. Buck, U.S.A., Lieut. George J. Charette, U.S.N., Col. Percy Parker, Justice James B. Carroll of Springfield, of the supreme court, Commissioner William W. Duncan, Commissioner Charles J. Morse, Amasa Pratt, Daniel J. Murphy, tion was company C, whose members appeared in full dress uniforms. Company K of the Sixth regiment was commanded by Capt. James N. Greig; Company G, Sixth, by Capt. Walter R. Jeyes; Company C, Sixth, by Capt. George W. Peterson and company M of the Ninth regiment, was led by Lieut. Daniel M. Christian.

Next in order came the Lowell section of battery C, Field Artillery, whose headquarters are at Methuen, Mass. There were 25 men in this feature. They were attired in olive drab uniforms and were commanded by Lieut. Sumner H. Needham, Sergt. Edward Watts and Corp. George Emsley.

Irish Semi-Military Companies

Then came the three Irish semi-mil-

Angel Guardian Cadets

Then came the Angel Guardian cadets led by the Angel Guardian band of 22 pieces. Arthur Gionel was the director of the band. There were six companies of the A. G. cadets and four companies of French-American military organizations.

The cadets were commanded by Major Alcide Bellefeuille. There were about 25 men in each company, their uniforms being blue with gold trimmings. They also wore white gloves.

The members of Garde Frontenac wore blue uniforms trimmed with yellow braid while the members of the Garde d'Honneur wore attired in grey denBerg. Each of the four companies was commanded by a lieutenant of the M.V.M., assigned especially for last night's parade. Company A was headed by Lieut. Arthur Cashin; Company B, Lieut. S. R. Waller; Company C, Lieut. Paul Kittredge; Company D, Lieut. James Duffey.

Spanish War Veterans

Then came the United Spanish War Veterans, led by Commander Alexander D. Mitchell. A feature of this contingent was a large American flag, 36 by 26 feet which was carried by a number of the veterans, it being the same flag that attracted so much flag. The clerks were dressed in dark colored suits and wore white ties and white gloves and carried flags.

SECOND DIVISION

The enthusiasm created by the marching part of the First Division was as nothing compared to that aroused by the Second Division. This was due in great part to the presence of the women in the parade. Two by two, four by four, in tens, in scores, in hundreds they marched along in splendid order, earnestly and seriously showing their interest in the patriotic call. The women in the parade were nothing short of magnificent, and as they swung into sight all

John K. Whittier, Miss Leslie Pullen and Mrs. Charles C. Barron. The dress of the woman in this division was simple but effectively uniform. Mrs. Wiggin, Mrs. Dudley L. Page and Mrs. Charles K. Miller were the chapter regents.

From Tewksbury
The state hospital at Tewksbury made an impressive showing with a dozen doctors, about 100 nurses and many other employees of the institution. The nurses were dressed in their attractive uniforms and caps with immaculate aprons, and the physicians wore in sanitars white duck. All carried American flags. The delegation was in charge of Dr. G. A.

THE DEMOCRATIC OUTLOOK

Democrats in all parts of the country are not striving to create the impression that the re-election of President Wilson will be easy. They know that the republicans have a strong candidate and that mighty efforts will be made to heal the split of 1912. Nevertheless, they feel absolutely confident that when the campaign is well under way and when the record of the administration is analyzed before the eyes of the American people, fairness and justice will prevail and President Wilson will be once again the choice of the country.

Backed by the full strength of the democratic party, President Wilson stands on his record, and whether he is attacked for his domestic policies or for his conduct of foreign affairs, he is able to give an account of his stewardship. To attack a candidate who is in office is not difficult, but when the people ask Mr. Hughes and the republican party what they would substitute for the policies they condemn, the republican will come the real test. Putting aside the unpatriotic criticism of men who have ulterior motives in their opposition to President Wilson, the purely political criticism will not carry weight with the thinking men of the country, no matter what party they belong to.

It is easy to overestimate the strength of the racial opposition to President Wilson. So far as the German vote is concerned, most of those who are loud in their opposition to President Wilson would not have supported him under any circumstances as they are staunch republicans, and their opposition will tend to strengthen Wilson. Other opposition will peter out before the elections, though the republicans will surely make the most of all the popular agitations of the past year. Yet, President Wilson can defend his course on the ground of "America First" and that ought to be good enough for a country that is now having a great patriotic revival.

Two considerations above all others commend the president to the country. He has put through congress laws that prevented panic and depression at the outbreak of war and, while saving America's honor before the world, he has kept us at peace. Should the war end tomorrow or a year from now, all nations will be forced to admit that President Wilson knew where the best interest of this country lay and while he strove hard to maintain an honest neutrality he took a strong course against every power that menaced American liberties. Above all, the American people wished to keep out of a war that is devastating the world and he has brought the nation to the first place in world prosperity. He is sure of the favorable verdict of history, and he deserves the hearty endorsement of the American people next September.

No argument is stronger for President Wilson than that of the revised currency law. Without it we should have been plunged in panic when the war disorganized the international relations of the powers, and it enabled us to grow and prosper, making it possible for the small business to tide over dangerous times and giving our government the means to make the dollar supplant all other currency in international commerce.

Democrats do not fear the tariff issue and the more it is discussed the better for President Wilson. The country has never been more prosperous than now and even though there should be a dumping of foreign products here at the close of the war, the tariff commission approved by the administration ought to be able to adjust American business accordingly. The silence of Mr. Hughes has been a great asset to him until now, but when the campaign starts in earnest he will have to answer the pointed questions of democrats who have a candidate who has been found true as steel and who has done more than any other man to keep the country prosperous and at peace.

ITINERENT VENDORS

A law passed by the last general court if rigidly enforced would establish regulation and supervision over a type of business that has heretofore been too free and that consequently has imposed on the public and entered into unfair competition with established firms. This is the itinerent business which jumps into a city and out again over night and which uses unscrupulous methods of reaching the people. A common form of it is the leasing of empty stores temporarily and the setting up of fake auctions or fake sales. In future, no business of this nature can be established unless a state license is procured at a cost of $25 and a deposit of $300 made to the state authorities. It shall also be necessary for this type of business to secure a local license, and this feature if intelligently administered would protect the merchants and the public from unfair competition and the public from fake exhibitions.

One danger that must be avoided is the carrying of the new law to such extremes that it would defeat its purpose. The state commissioner of weights and measures under whose department the enforcement of the law will come states that it applies to establishments which are open at parks and beaches for the summer season. If these places come under the law and if their proprietors are required to hand over $325 to the state before doing business, the law shall practically kill off all summer business. Technically the law may apply to all such places but it would be folly for the authorities to so interpret it. A test case decided against the owner of a popcorn stand or picture postcard booth would merely call down a public protest that would lead to the repeal or amendment of the law. What the intent of the law is appears obvious, and let it not be killed by unwise application.

THE VERDUN DECISION

After two months of fighting, the struggle for Verdun is going on as fiercely as ever, with occasional lulls due to the exhaustion of human endurance. The allies affect to view it lightly, but they will fight, if necessary, to the last man before they will let the Germans take the fortress. The Germans on the other hand seem as anxious as ever to add Verdun to their spoils, though this country finds it hard to understand why. That there is some deep-seated reason is undoubted, else there would not be such a tremendous sacrifice of men at a time when men are the all important factor. In all probability the struggle at Verdun is the most decisive of the war and the end of the conflict may depend on the course of the outcome. Should Germany take it after fighting inch by inch nearer and nearer, there will be an enormous gain in German prestige, and the allies may decide that they cannot crush Germany on land. Should the Germans fail to take it, the world will say that the German cause is hopelessly lost. Whatever the outcome, France will be forever honored for the gallant fight at Verdun as the French defense has been admitted even by the Germans to be the most notable achievement of the war. Though the siege has been long, the present struggle cannot continue indefinitely and unless the war drags on for a much longer period, the time is approaching when the final announcement shall be made that Verdun has fallen or that Verdun is saved. The fight for Verdun looks now like an exemplification of the death struggle predicted early in the war.

WE WANT YOU

A leading member of the proposed Lynn association of manufacturers urges that body to adopt as its official slogan the appeal "We want you in Lynn." It is an appeal for co-operation between the various business interests of the city and it is meant for all those throughout New England or elsewhere who may be contemplating changing their place of business or going into business for the first time. Lynn has suffered through lack of co-operation to a considerable extent and it is now proposed to arouse a spirit such as has been in evidence in Lowell for some time past. Whether or not we shall adopt a similar slogan, it is well that we should give business everywhere to understand that it will be well off in Lowell and that we should go a step further by preparing for new business. Every new industry, large or small, means more people, more shoppers, more children in the schools, more pay envelopes, and more live, active citizens. Every new industry furthermore ensures a future free from industrial disturbance and does away with the danger of being dependent on one large business. Lynn is not the only city that envies Lowell its great diversity of thriving industries, and we should act so that our methods of promoting new business will be commented on and copied elsewhere. Some day in the not too distant future we may grasp our great opportunities so intelligently and earnestly that out of town business may want to come to Lowell just as strongly as we will welcome it.

THE DECORATIONS

Let the oldest resident say what he will, Lowell never looked lovelier than yesterday. Red, white and blue floated from flagpoles, hung from cornices, draped doorways and store fronts or carried the eye along in uneven lines from the square to city hall or from Merrimack street to the postoffice. The city was one great American flag, and the harmony of its brilliant colors was so evident that the very winds seemed to sing "The Star Spangled Banner" as they stirred its thousands of folds. Over church and store and mill, and home floated the flag of a patriotic people, thrilled for once into a deeper realization of what their country means. It was "Flag day," in fact as well as in name, and nowhere was its artistic appeal needed more effectively than in The Sun building which put out a flag from every window of its spacious front. Through the day hundreds crossed over to the square to admire the spectacle which was one of the most beautiful and most inspiring that Lowell has ever seen. In all there were thousands of flags, but they were all expressions of love for the one only flag that in the day of trial all good Americans will defend while there is a particle of meaning in its stars and bars.

BUT FEW HYPHENS

Speaking at the graduation of West Point cadets last Tuesday President Wilson came out strongly for preparedness, and though Theodore Roosevelt might find a few weasel words in his address, most readers can find several strong statements that stand for the best in the American spirit of the day. Declaring that it is our imperative duty to prepare so that we may resist possible aggression from any quarter, he expressed his conviction that an American awakening is sweeping through all classes and races in this country. He paid his respects to the "Hyphenated citizens" but stated that those who love other countries better than they love the country of their adoption are comparatively few in number. The man who could take offense at the sentiments or the words of President Wilson on this occasion ought to examine his conscience to see if his Americanism is of the right quality. The paramount duty of today is that we stand first and last for this nation, and whenever our sympathy with or love for any other nation stands in the way, then we are not true to the country or faithful to its most sacred and most important interests.

Senson at Revere

Counsel for the prosecution and defense, according to a member of the Massachusetts bar, had been allowed 15 minutes each to argue the case. Counsel for the defense had begun his arguments with the allusion to the old swimming hole of his boyhood days. He said in lower oratory of the balmy air, the singing birds, the joy of youth and delights of the cool water.—

And in the midst of it he was interrupted by the drawing voice of the judge:

"Come out, Chauncey," he said, "and put on your clothes. Your 15 minutes are up."

What He Didn't Know

A well known resident was walking along Fifth avenue the other Saturday night, when a half drunken man came up to him.

"Standing in his path, the man said: 'Mr. ———, you don't know me, do you?'"

"No," said the gentleman, "I don't," and he tried to pass.

"I am the husband of your washwoman," persisted the half sober individual.

"Well, what have I to do with that?" "You see, you don't know everything," went on the man in a confidential tone.

"What don't I know?" "You don't know I'm wearing one of your white shirts!"—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

The animals appeared in such a dangerously moody that Mr. Hicks immediately brought his car to a standstill and called out to the groom, "Can't you

The Quiet Little Place
The quiet little place in the corner of your life. Oh, how it helps you smile, through the struggle and the strife. To get away all cosy in its closefold And listen to the silver dances that its symphony of cheer Plays through the gentle shadows to your everlasting ear!

The quiet little places that you rush to day by day, Because there are so many things from which you must get away. And all the troubled spirit in its yearning years the most For just the chance to linger in the shadows like a ghost. And have the old heart feelings that are comforting and true When the days have been unhappy and the soul has been so blue.

The quiet little place in the lives of all is sweet, The corner of our being where with higher self we meet. And sitting there together in the beauty of the spell Feel a comfort stealing through us that no tongue can ever tell. And a higher resolution surging through our souls again To go forth and face the battle and be more courageous men.—Selected.

THANKS SAINT ANNE

YOUNG WOMAN ATTRIBUTES HER CURE TO PILGRIMAGE TO SHRINE IN QUEBEC

BOSTON, June 15.—After being almost totally blind since her birth, Miss Elizabeth Mary Murphy, daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth C. Murphy and sister of Joseph A. Murphy of the Canton board of selectmen, is now able to see and is enjoying her miraculous cure to a pilgrimage to the shrine of Ste. Anne de Beauspre, Quebec.

Miss Murphy, who is in her 19th year, had been attended by specialists for years with no result, when she decided that she would go to the shrine, expressing absolute confidence to her family that she would be cured if she went there. From her birth she had absolutely no sight in her left eye and but little in her right. Her health otherwise was poor and she was subject to convulsions.

Oculists Gave Up Hope

Numerous oculists and physicians examined her eyes and her general health and all gave her case up as hopeless. The oculists said she would never have any sight and the physicians were unable to diagnose her general physical condition to any degree of certainty. After all these examinations, made both at home and in hospitals, Miss Murphy decided that her only hope was in Ste. Anne de Beauspre. This was in May.

"On my return home from the hospital, with no improvement whatever, I suggested to my parents that they allow me to make a pilgrimage to the shrine of Ste. Anne," said Miss Murphy, telling of her cure. "They gladly consented to my wish, but were a little hesitant, fearing that I might be seized with convulsions on the way. I assured them that once I left the house for Ste. Anne's I would have no further trouble and that when I returned to my home I would be completely cured and that I would have my sight restored to my left eye which was blind from birth."

"I got out of bed on Wednesday, and my sister and I left Boston the following Saturday morning. We arrived at Ste. Anne's Monday morning."

"I made my vows devoutly as I knew how, and on Wednesday morning when I woke up I was very sick and was unable to attend holy mass. My left eye was also very painful and sore, and continued so all day. I went to the blessing at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, and just as I kissed the relic of Ste. Anne I felt a sharp pain start in my eyes and work up over my head. I stood up to leave the altar, and as I did so I felt the pain vanish. I knew at that moment that I was cured, and when I went back to my seat I placed my hand over my right eye and was able to see the large statue of Ste. Anne with my heretofore blind eye."

Eyes Were Straightened

"My eyes were also crossed, and as the priest said they became straight. I am today well and strong, and my eyesight is wonderfully improved. My health has never been better, and I am today a living example of one who has been the recipient of a most wonderful miracle."

Upon request of the authorities at Ste. Anne's for a statement as to her condition, Miss Murphy sent a letter signed by herself and four witnesses who saw her before and after the cure. The witnesses were Dr. James Kennedy, Dr. J. Leo Carroll, Rev. John J. Farrell and Rev. Edward T. McKenna, pastor and curate of the church which is the shrine of Ste. Anne.

BUFFALO BILL SHOW

IT WILL BE HERE WITH GREAT PREPAREDNESS FEATURES MONDAY

Major John M. Burke, "United States," a world-traveled cosmopolite, has arrived. As an illustration of the truism that coming events cast their shadows before, in his qualifying of the announcement that Col. Cody, "Buffalo Bill" (himself), was again in the saddle, and after several years' absence would be here "soon," questioned as to the fact, the major said: "Yes, Buffalo Bill, now General Cody of the Wyoming National Guard, where lately he has been assisting General Slinney to prepare the range element of the United States soldiers, cavalry and artillery to show that 'preparedness' for the tented field is as necessary an adjunct in these days of luxury as it was in the settling and developing of this continent into the present marvellously prosperous and envied Land of Plenty."

The major is full of preparedness, and was an early advocate for the developing of our first lines of east and west defense—a great double navy—and as a reserve line for national physical culture of the masses, a continental army.—"Fully prepared, this nation would be the world's dove cotter money spent would be a home circulation; it would be a mecca for investment of foreign capital; an economy in doctors' bills; a saving in criminal expenses and to the covetous would be a warning, and to our people a shield of security."

The sudden idea that has almost wrecked civilization, and wiped out Europe's two thousand years of progress, shows the fallacy of too much pacific passiveness; to be on guard is to be respected in these days of hysteria and lawless changeable that the man from Galilee's commissary magic at the leaves, wine and fish plied occurred today. He would likely be arrested and condemned as a lawless moonshiner. So, Wake up, America! Stop! Look! Listen! and Prepare."

The old scout has allied himself with a triple-decked merging of his old time wild west atmosphere with the last generation of frontiersmen, sons of the Indians and pioneers of the plains, and rough riders of Oklahoma's early days, led by Colonel Joe Miller, among the last of the range riders of the southwest, Colonel Cody's adventures in the frontier and his young associates' later experiences, cover the eras that might be called the birth of the central and the ripening of the great western America. To add to the lesson of the physical benefits of outdoor and camp life, a contingent of furloughed United States soldiers, cavalry and artillery to show that "preparedness" for the tented field is as necessary an adjunct in these days of luxury as it was in the settling and developing of this continent into the present marvellously prosperous and envied Land of Plenty.

TECH MEN HEAR NEWS AT BANQUET WHICH CONCLUDED CELEBRATION

BOSTON, June 15.—As a capstone to three days of wonderful celebration, the men of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology last night wound up their reunion with a dinner in Symphony hall, the speeches at which were heard by telephone by more than 5000 persons, scattered through 35 cities from coast to coast.

Quite as an incident, Pres. MacLaurin announced gifts to the institute totalling more than $3,500,000—a little more than the original gift of the "mysterious Mr. Smith," from which the new buildings were constructed.

PREMIER ASQUITH CAUSE OF WRECK

Calls Sea Fight Rout for Kaiser—Settlement Needed in Ireland

LADY BANK, Scotland, June 15.—In observance of the 30th anniversary of his election to the house of commons from East Fife, Premier Asquith yesterday visited his constituency for the first time since the outbreak of the war, addressing a great meeting of his supporters and many who in past years have been his opponents.

The premier made a touching reference to the death of Field Marshal Earl Kitchener as "leaving a place in our constitutional life that none else can fill and a memory that will live as long as the British Empire."

Lord Kitchener had bequeathed to the country an array of friends, said the premier, and it was for the country to make the best use of these.

In a survey of the situation, Premier Asquith declared that the Russian advance was one of the most brilliant features of the war.

The Italian resistance to the Austrian onslaught, Mr. Asquith said, every day was becoming more effective. As for the French, nothing could exceed the valor with which they were doing the detestable work of the war.

Co-operation among the general staffs of the allies was becoming more intimate and complete every month. British assistance had been offered to General Joffre, and the steps which would be taken were those dictated by sound strategy.

"This war is not merely a struggle of armies," the premier continued. It is a struggle of general and economic resources, and these will prove, in the long run to be the deciding factor."

After speaking of the effectiveness of the navy's blockade, Mr. Asquith said:

"Owing to the rashness of the enemy we were allowed to see another and more stirring, dramatic aspect of the navy's qualities a fortnight ago. The naval action on May 31 was worthy of the best and most treasured traditions of the British navy."

"The Germans were driven back into their ports without so much as making an effort to grapple with the main body of our grand fleet, and had the temerity to claim victory really was a rout as a complete victory."

"A couple more such victories and there will be nothing left of the German navy worth speaking about. The truth is slowly leaking out, and its full extent is not yet realized or appreciated."

In reference to Ireland Mr. Asquith said the recent rioting, leading to the loss of many innocent lives, had created a situation which seemed to a majority of responsible Irishmen of all parties to call for a settlement.

The history of the relations between Great Britain and Ireland exhibited a tragic series of missed or misused opportunities.

"Don't let us add another to their number," said the premier.

What he desired, he explained, was a provisional settlement, for when the war came to an end the country would have to take stock of its internal relations, the fabric of the empire would have to be refashioned and relations between Great Britain and Ireland and the dominions would of necessity be brought into close and connected review.

COCOANUT OIL FINE FOR WASHING HAIR

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain nutmeg coconut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get nutmeg coconut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

Flagman and Engineer Blamed for Disaster at Bradford, R. I.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Blame for the passenger wreck on the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad at Bradford, R. I., April 17, in which five persons were killed and 17 injured, was placed by the interstate commerce commission today on the failure of flagman Coombs and Engineer Mansfield to attend signals properly.

Old fashioned wooden cars and gas lights contributed to the fatalities, the report said.

It pointed out that had the cars been of modern steel construction they would not have been destroyed by fire and it would have been possible to save more lives.

The report presents a tabulation of nine accidents on the New Haven since July, 1911, wherein employees failed to obey signals or properly protect their trains as required by rules and showing that in all 56 persons were killed and 475 persons injured.

"The recurrence of such distressing accidents," says the report in conclusion, "directs attention forcibly to the fact that competent and experienced employees are not infallible, as it is to be noted in each instance that these accidents were due to the same fundamental cause, namely, fallibility of the human element responsible for the safe operation of trains."

"Wreck prevention is the highest duty of railroads. This obligation is not satisfied by merely making rules which prove insufficient in operation. If the human element repeatedly fails, then safety requires that the highest degree of mechanical skill be applied to properly supplement the human element as to the particular point of danger."

The commission's investigation developed that the wrecked train arrived at Bradford seven minutes before the accident, which allowed Flagman Coombs time in which to walk back a proper distance to protect his train. Tests showed that Coombs had time to go back 250 feet, but had gone only 120 feet when he was passed by the train which crashed into the halted train at Bradford.

"Had the flagman exercised the proper degree of care under the circumstances prevailing and hastened back immediately," the report says, "there is every reason to believe that he could and would have warned the engineer of the other train in plenty of time to have permitted him to stop before colliding."

Tests indicated that the electric signals were working properly, and while there is evidence that some fog existed it was not dense enough to obscure Engineer Mansfield's view of signals.

RATS IN CITY HALL

No, Not in Lowell, But in the Municipal Palace at Brockton.

BROCKTON, June 15.—City hall has been invaded by a small army of mice and rats. Some of the women clerks are on the ragged edge of nervous prostration. The office of Mayor John S. Burbank, and that of City Clerk Calvin R. Barrett, appear to be the favorite fields for the gambling rats and mice, which, according to varying estimates, are from an inch to two feet long.

City Messenger Seth L. French made an effort to stop the advancing army with a mouse trap, but with little effect, although he nailed seven yesterday. The board of health has been asked to take action.

BRIDGE FLOORING GAVE WAY

Traffic over the Pawtucket bridge was impeded for about half an hour this morning as a result of one of the rear wheels of a heavy cart loaded with coal going through the planking of the roadway. The accident happened about 8:30 o'clock and the wheel which sunk through the wood flooring up to the axle was so firmly wedged that it proved quite a task to extricate it. The street department was notified and Commissioner Morse soon had his "wrecking" crew on the scene and with the assistance of planks and jacks the wagon was raised and drawn to a place of safety on the Pawtucketville side.

AMUSEMENT NOTES

MERRIMACK SQUARE THEATRE
The beautiful Edna Goodrich is one of the famous stars who will appear at the Merrimack Square theatre during the rest of the week, starting with today's continuous performance to delight the patrons of the Merrimack Square theatre with her superb histrionic talent in her latest role of her latest success, "The Making of Maddelena," a five-act story of a beautiful Italian model who marries a young American. The play is replete with many beautiful scenes: the picturesque Roman streets with cobble pavements, the public fountain in the square before the Roman arch, the beggars, the brightly colored dresses together with the scenes of student life create a very interesting atmosphere. The foreign flavor surrounds the story of this beautiful Italian girl, Edna Goodrich as Maddelena, the model, stirs the imagination with the force of her sympathy and suffering and her heroism in the stormy scenes of emotion that follow make the story alive with the breath of vitality and reality.

Edna Goodrich's classic beauty is greatly enhanced by the artistic drapery which she wears as the Italian model in this absorbing story. Be sure to see the magnificent photoplay at your very first opportunity. You'll never regret having made a determined effort to see it.

Another splendid five-act feature play which will also be shown at the popular Merrimack Square theatre today, Friday and Saturday will be "The Reapers," starring that powerful stage and screen star, John Mason. It is to be noticed that whenever the name of John Mason appears on the program of the Merrimack Square theatre, the house is crowded to the rafters.

that this celebrated luminary will appear in one of his mightiest successes, "The Reapers." The word to the wise is attend as early as possible and avoid the disappointment of being turned away or being forced to stand through out the entire show. "The Reapers" is a play which goes to the very roots of human happiness, into the causes which make life worth living. The play ends with the restoration of man's belief in God and in woman. What theme could command more genuine interest? It is a play in which everyone will take a personal interest, for it is easy to imagine one's own self experience and romance in the west, in the same situation. Besides these two exceptional plays, just referred to, the performances for the rest of the week at the Merrimack Square theatre will consist of a very amusing 1-2-3 comedy, the educational Burton Holmes travel pictures of foreign lands and a number of other pictures, none of which you can afford to miss.

LOWELL WINS FROM LYNN

Lohman Pitched Masterly Game and His Teammates Landed on Harrington—Score 3 to 2

Special to The Sun.

LYNN, Mass., June 15.—Lowell's bunched hits in the second inning of yesterday's game at Ocean Park, which sent three runs across the plate proved sufficient to be too much for the far famed Spindle City crew, who were routed home with the malice 3-2.

Lowell battled hard to overcome Lowell's big lead and failed to puncture Zeke Lohman's delivery to any extent until the sixth game when two runs crossed the pentagon. Lowell's 15th run came in the ninth but the batter lacked the necessary punch to drive the thing tally over the platter.

Billy Harrington made his debut in a Lynn uniform after four years' absence and pitched a good game. He had his curve ball working well and many times got out of bad holes by good headwork making the Lowell men hit bad balls. Harrington also contributed a ringing double to the box score on his first appearance at the platter's work in the box was of the same character which has featured his pitching during the season thus far. Zeke was picked for five hits two of which were doubles but not any with the exception of Orcutt's safety to left in the sixth game. Lowell's run getting, Lohman was mainly responsible for. Lowell's win as it was his crash in the second which sent the Spindle City's third run home.

Jud Holey and Earl Stimpson rival batters contributed to the feature play of the Lowell man carrying off the honors, however, with a sliding catch off Prysock in the ninth. Daley also backed up on a couple of occasions and made two fine catches of long drives. Tom Devine was also in the killing of the onslaught with a double killing unassisted.

After Kane had died in the first Lord walked, but Briggs lined to Devine and Lord was doubled off the bag. In Lynn's half Gleason beat out a hit to Torphy but Orcutt forced him at second and Lord to Downey. Kane tried to steal but was nailed, Kilhullen to Torphy. Daley grounded to Kane.

The second saw all of Lowell's scores. Barrows opened with a drive for two bases to deep right. Downey died to Daley, Stimpson walked. Kilhullen hit into the right field bleachers for two bases scoring Barrows. Stimpson scored on Torphy's long hoist to Daley. Lohman scored Kilhullen with a stinger to left but Kane ended the inning by being thrown out by Conley. Prysock doubled with the down ball as Conley rolled out to Downey.

Lowell died easily in the third but with Harris out of the way Harrington

Fish had no difficulty in controlling the biplane.

Fish, who has done considerable flying in Mexico, planned to show the people of Lynn how easy it is for aeroplanes to bombard cities. He had no difficulty in rising from the old race track in Saugus.

The Lynn club was having a hard time trying to solve the pitching of Lohman of Lowell when the biplane flew above Ocean Park and the spectators derived much enjoyment by shouting to Lohman that he was due to make an ascension. Just as Lohman started to pitch Sprague dropped one of the bombs which exploded perfectly, scattering lamp black.

Fish then headed for Saugus, but before he got his bearings a heavy fog closed in on him.

For a while the pilot was at sea, literally as well as figuratively. He finally discovered that he was above the Point of Pines. Then the bombs began to explode and for a few seconds Fish and Sprague were in a bad way. After ascertaining that no great harm had been done, Fish continued his course. He believed that the vibration of the machine caused the acid in the bombs to wash against the fuses, in turn detonating the explosive.

LOWELL WINS EASY GAME

LAWRENCE HIGH SCHOOL TEAM PLAYED POOR BASEBALL AT SPALDING PARK—SCORE 13 TO 0

The Lowell-Lawrence high school game played at Spaulding park yesterday afternoon did not develop into the exciting contest that was expected between these two teams. It was an uninteresting game, both teams playing wild ball and failing to display any form that would class them as A schoolboy teams. The home team won the game by the score of 13 to 0.

The local aggregation hammered the Lawrence pitchers for 16 hits. Though the visitors led the score to half time, they were wild at times and issued eight free tickets to first base. Lowell also carried off honors in the error column, making six against five misplays of their opponents.

The batting of Lynch, Switzer and Falls featured for Coach Purdy's team, while Meyer and Fleming of the visitors turned in some classy stick work. Fielding features were contributed by Switzer, Haywood and Fleming.

Lowell scored four runs in the first inning and the rest of the game was uninteresting. They added three more in the fourth, four in the fifth and two in the eighth. Lawrence made a good up-hill fight, scoring seven runs in the last three innings. The score:

WILL MATTY COME BACK

FANS LOOK FOR THE GRAND OLD MASTER TO DUPLICATE CY YOUNG'S RECENT FEAT

Is Christy Mathewson going to flash the same sensational comeback that Cy Young did in 1907 just when everyone had figured him as completely through?

In many ways, the records of Mathewson and Young parallel each other. Just recently it seemed that they would diverge—that Mathewson had reached the end—but the great showing by "Big Six" during the past month, has led many to hope that he too will do as Young did.

Young broke into the majors back in 1890. For ten years he starred with the Cleveland club, then was transferred to the New York Giants, and, in 1901, was sold to the Red Sox. It was the brilliant pitching of Cy during 1903 and 1904 that enabled the Bostonians to win two pennants and one world's championship.

But in 1905 something went amiss with Young's arm. The old whippersnapper as it had in the other years; the old zipp was gone from the ball. The opposition clubbers found little or no difficulty in swatting the heaves of the veteran.

Just about then the "wise ones" began to chant the swan song. They pointed out that Young was through. They said about Cy pitching for sixteen years and no matter how good a man is he can't go on forever," they declared. "Furthermore, Cy is thirty-eight years old—an age far beyond the athletic prime."

When Young turned in his 1905 average it was the last of the 37 combats in which he had figured. Young's showing for 1906 was even worse. He won only 13 out of 34 games and didn't seem able to go the route. He finished the season with an average of .382—the worst he ever amassed. That convinced the bulk of the fans that Cy was through.

But the Red Sox manager wouldn't "can" Cy. He figured that his great work for the Red Sox in the other years merited his keeping him for another season, even if Cy did nothing but coaching duty.

And so Cy, then thirty-nine years old, was kept on the Red Sox roster, while the fans clamored for his banishment to the Old Man's Home. That probably peeved him a bit, because, after having his arm tinkered here and there, he begged for a chance to display his wares in 1907. He did and pitched an average of .365. The next season—1908—Cy won 21 out of 32 games for an average of .636, which is quite a healthy showing for a 41-year-old hurler. On June 30, 1908, he shut out the Yankees without a hit, only one man reaching first.

In 1909 he went back to the Cleveland club and won 19 out of 34 games. The following year—1910—he figured in 17 games and won 10. In 1911 he took unto himself a job with the Boston Braves and won four out of nine starts. He decided that he was getting a bit too old to pitch, being forty-four years old at the time, and the year from the fold.

Reviewing Young's record from the end of the 1905 campaign when he was considered "all through," until the time he actually quit, we find that he won 73 and lost only 56 games, giving him a grand average of .567 for the five years from 1907 to 1911 inclusive.

Now let us consider the case of Mathewson.

Matty joined the Giants in 1900. Over a sweep of 15 seasons—from 1900 until the end of the 1914 season, the big blond hurler was the king pin of the Giant-pitching staff. But late in the 1914 season he contracted "arthritis," as did Young at the end of his sixteenth year.

In 1915 Matty, then in his sixteenth year as a major performer, was of no real value to his club. His arm seemed gone. He won only eight out of his twenty-two starts and some of those victories were recorded in one inning.

Before the season ended, the "wise ones" declared that Matty was about through.

"He's been pitching for sixteen years and no matter how good a man is he can't go on forever," they said, repeating what their associate menbers said about Cy Young back in 1906. The folks pointed out also that Matty was quite an elderly person, as baseballers go, then approaching his thirty-sixth birthday.

But Matty in 1916 seems to be duplicating what Young did in 1907. He has started off this season in a great way. His arm frangible seems gone. In his first tryout of the year, "Big Six" didn't look overly good. That is because he merely was giving the wing a workout. But since then he has been pitching real baseball. He hasn't the old speed of yegone years, but he is using his leg and his brain, and he is mixing up his delivery, he is breezing along in a way that makes it seem as if he still has a number of years of major league usefulness in his system.

BOMBARDED BALL PARK

AVIATORS DROP BOMBS ON OCEAN PARK, LYNN, DURING LOWELL-LYNN GAME

LYNN, June 15.—Luckily for Parman P. Fish, a Saugus aviator, and his companion, George E. Sprague, of Chittenden, who essayed a bomb-dropping stunt over Lynn, late yesterday afternoon, five bombs which exploded simultaneously while the biplane was just in a fog bank above the Point of Pines were of a comparatively harmless type. Had they been bombs loaded with more than a small quantity of explosive, both occupants of the biplane probably would have been killed and the machine demolished at an altitude of several hundred feet.

Sprague was slightly burned on the legs, and his shoes and clothing were burned. He was sitting above the bomb box, but despite the unexpected explosion, retained self-possession, and

DRAMATIC EXIT

Kinney, Charged With Larceny, Rides to Trial in His Own Auto

BOSTON, June 15.—Edward E. Kinney, who while in the city established something of a record as a spender of cash, made a brand new record yesterday, when, a prisoner in custody, he sat at the wheel of his high-powered car and started to New York, with his "jaegers" as passengers.

Never before in the history of the commonwealth has a prisoner taken out of the state as a fugitive from justice been allowed to drive his own automobile, and thus bring himself to trial.

Kinney, sometimes called Kindred, shortly after 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon started into his big auto, took the wheel. Two New York detectives and a couple of attorneys accompanied him. Kinney is to be placed on trial on charge of stealing $122,173.75 from his employers, the Flann-O'Rourke company, last summer.

Becoming a Social Lion

Kinney arrived here by auto some months ago, while the police of New York and other states were searching for him under the name of Kindred. He rented an expensive suite at 784 Commonwealth avenue and started out to make himself known. He was becoming quite a social lion, when, last Monday evening, just as he was entertaining some friends, the police descended upon him.

Among the stunts Kindred or Kinney had pulled off was the gift of a $200 pool table to the Bay State Automobile association and a $1000 dinner at the Back Bay hotel. An unusually complete outfit of clothing, packed in several trunks, and a $1000 hunting outfit were found by the police in his flat.

When arrested Kinney protested his

SINKING OF LUSITANIA

CUNARD CO. CHARGED WITH NEGLIGENCE IN SUITS—MUNITIONS CARGO AS COMPLAINT

NEW YORK, June 15.—Entire new allegations of negligence against the Cunard Steamship Co., in connection with the sinking of the Lusitania by a German submarine on May 7, 1915, were contained in complaints filed here yesterday in two damage suits in instituted in behalf of the heirs of victims of the tragedy. The steamship company is charged with wilfully placing the lives of the vessel's passengers in danger.

The cargo carried by the Lusitania, together with the belligerent appearance given the vessel by a covering of gray paint, invited the submarine attack, according to allegations in the complaints.

The complaints also declare that the concussion of the torpedo explosion caused various explosions among the cargo of munitions, and that the "disturbance occasioned thereby in the sailing of the ship caused her to founder and sink."

The ship was not provided with a sufficient number of watertight compartments in the sides, or within her body, to keep her afloat after the attack. It is alleged, and there also was a shortage of lifeboats.

The suits are for $50,000 each and were filed by John M. Nolan, an attorney representing Sarah Lund, widow of Charles H. Lund and heirs of William Mounsey. Lund and Mounsey lost their lives by the sinking of the Lusitania. The plaintiffs in both cases are residents of Illinois.

TRIED TO KILL HIS WIFE

GROOM OF FIVE MONTHS THEN ENDED HIS LIFE BY TAKING POISON

BRIDGEPORT, June 15.—Henry Colbert, aged 29, of Westfield, Mass., last night made two attempts to kill his wife and then committed suicide by swallowing two kinds of poison, draining the contents of two bottles.

"It is better for himself that he is dead," said his wife, Ethel Dutcher Colbert of West Point. He has been drinking heavily since we were married, five months ago."

They eloped and were married in Chatham, N. Y. He turned on the gas while she slept during the night, but she awakened and turned it off. He tried to cut her throat with a razor last evening, when she ran out and escaped. When he came home last night his wife called him a coward.

"Watch me and you'll see I'm no coward," he said, as he lifted a bottle of poison and drained the contents. He then picked up the other bottle and swallowed its contents.

He was divorced some time ago in Westfield from Eva L. Barden.

Brooklyn Men Wager on Their Ability to "Touch" Their Friends—Rankin Beat Cohen

BROOKLYN, June 15.—A contribution of $10 was made yesterday to the fund for the Jewish war sufferers by Harry Cohen of 39 Otis street. This is his fourth contribution.

Julius Rankin of 35 Bay street bet $10 he could borrow more money from friends in 24 hours than could Cohen. Cohen took the wager, the understanding being that the winner should send the $10 to the relief fund.

Cohen and Rankin did some tall hustling. There was a stipulation that the funds raised must be in cash, and that the lenders were not to be informed of the reason for the "pressing need."

Yesterday the two men, with several others, opened bags and carried with them $2644 in bills, while Cohen had only $1301. It took 30 minutes to count the money, which will now be paid back in full.

DANCED AT THE KASINO

U. S. Cartridge Co. Welfare Association Conducted Big Social Event After Parade

At the close of last evening's parade the employees of the United States Cartridge Co. with their four brass bands held a parade of their own, marching through the principal streets of the city to the Kasino in Thorndike street, where they held a social gathering.

The event, which was in the form of a dancing party, was conducted under the auspices of the Welfare Association for the benefit of the association, and it proved an unprecedented success. So large was the gathering that one time during the evening the hall was taxed to its capacity and dancing was almost impossible. It was figured that over 1800 men and women attended.

The United States Cartridge Co. orchestra of ten pieces furnished music for the dancing, and all present spent a most enjoyable evening. There were no decorations about the hall, but the stage, where the orchestra was seated, had been converted into a veritable flower garden. The national colors were much in evidence and the scene was a pretty one.

The financial success of the evening was very flattering to the organizers, who were well repaid for their untiring efforts. They were also highly complimented by the numerous members of the organization. Those responsible for the success of the evening were as follows: General manager, William Regan; assistant general manager, Frank Gold; on floor director, Daisie O. Abbott; chief aids, Misses M. Morgan, M. Murray, R. Gilchrist, M. O'Hare, Mrs. M. R. Ley, Mrs. J. Farrell, Mrs. V. Duffy.

NEARLY 20,000 MARCHED
Continued
of the Massachusetts mill furnished a section of over 100 men after which came the John Hancock Insurance Co., the Metropolitan Insurance Co. and the Lowell Gas Light Co. All marched excellently. The Metropolitan leaders wore dress suits and tall silk hats and looked decidedly slick. This feature was headed by John F. Saunders, Jr., and he has reason to be proud of the showing made by his company.

SIXTH DIVISION
The Sixth division, led by Marshal Bernard McArdle, displayed a real spirit of patriotism that deeply impressed all who watched it pass by. In the different sections of this division were Poles, Armenians, Italians, Germans, Greeks, Hebrews and the nationalities who with American flags over their shoulders, marched proudly by the applauding spectators. Some of the men have been in this country but a short while, others are naturalized citizens, but all showed last night that they were true Americans. The natives of the different foreign countries marched along almost shoulder to shoulder and all honored the Stars and Stripes which they carried. This made an inspiring climax to the great parade and sent the spectators of all classes home with a spirit of patriotism that will not soon die out.

Chelmsford Street Delegations
The Roxbury Mission band, one of the "hits" of the parade, followed Marshal McArdle and his aides. Then came the Chelmsford street delegation, over 100 young men from that section of the city who volunteered to march and did their work well. A group of the men carried a large flag, at the front of the procession and the others held a smaller flag. Richard Donoghue and George Haggerty were at the head of the Chelmsford street men.

Broadway Club

Yorick Club
The Yorick club whose members responded in goodly numbers, provided a feature of this division. They were headed by the famous Concord and Lexington Fife and Drum corps, with three men typifying the spirit of the Civil war, and dressed in uniforms of Colonial days. The 100 or more members of the Yorick club in line were led by Dr. J. V. Melges, president of the club. The music furnished by the Lexington corps was purely patriotic and aided the members materially in marching. Hon. Samuel P. Hadley, former justice in the local police court, started the march with the Yorick club. Like some others who have not come half the distance in life that he has, Judge Hadley found the pace too fast and slackened. He is believed to have finished with the following division, however. Charles N. Allen, formerly assistant secretary of the navy and governor of Porto Rico, also marched with the Yorick club.

Highland Club
Next in line came the Highland club marching in fine step under the direction of their president, A. G. McCurdy. Each man was dressed in a dark suit and a straw hat. James Scott, a club porter, carried the banner at the head of the delegation.

Mystery Club
The Mystery club of Centralville was led by President John Scanlon and the baseball team in uniform. Following the members of the baseball team, about 40 men marched in business suits.

Lowell Chauffeurs
One of the novel features of the parade was the Lowell chauffeurs' section, comprised of over 50 men. This part of the division was led by H. S. Girard, who was followed by 11 men carrying a large flag, loaned for the occasion by Judge Lilley. Each man in line wore a white carnation in his buttonhole. St. Joseph's Fife and Drum corps of Lawrence provided music for the chauffeurs.

The Polish Workers
With over 300 men in line, uniformly dressed, the United Polish Workers of Lowell made an attractive showing marching with a military style that characterized the whole representation. Their uniforms were dark trousers, black shirts and black caps with white ties. Jacob Targ led the workers and the Polish Cadet band played the music for them.

Armenian Club
The Armenian Military and Athletic club turned out something like 50 men. The company wore olive drab uniforms and was led by Capt. Paul Manassian, a former U. S. cavalry officer.

Greek Community
About 350 members of the Greek community, marching under the direction of President Thomas Noulas, made a fine showing as they passed along the street. They were headed by the Bellini band, the members of which were dressed in blue uniforms which were covered by sparkling trimmings. The music furnished by this band was also worthy of especial note.

German-American Club
Next in line was the German-American club, with about 50 members in line. The club was led by Carl Heldreich and marched well.

Jewish Community
The Jewish Community was one of the prominent sections of the division. Over 200 men wearing dark suits and straw hats followed their leader, Benoit Silverblatt. There were also girls in line, several of whom supported a large flag. The Lawrence Military band furnished music for this group.

Loomfixers
The next unit was the Loomfixers' union of this city, 734, with over 200 members marching. The union marched as though it had gone through some military training. Last in line was Anthony's society, escorted by the Lowell Italian band. The members of this society, 70 in number, wore attractive uniforms with bright sashes and were led by Fred Durrezzo, Vincent Marotta and J. Musa.

Two Noted Heroes
The only two men in Lowell who wear the Congressional Medal of Honor and the Little 13-starred button of the American Legion of Honor occupied a reviewing stand at the rear of the parade. They were Brigadier General Adelbert Ames, who won his medal in the Civil war, and Chief Gunner George Charette, who received his for distinguished service in the Spanish-American war. Chief Gunner Charette was the only representative of the navy on the parade. He is still in active service though entitled to retirement, and it was the first time in 15 years that he has appeared in full uniform in his native city. Chief Gunner Charette was not "dolled up" in regiments simply for the purpose of displaying his uniform, but his appearance in full dress was obligatory upon him, under the rules of the navy. Upon receiving the mayor's invitation to review the parade, he was required to submit it to his commandant, who is a rule of the navy that officers attending such functions must appear in full dress, which included, in this case, the famous and much coveted Congressional Medal of Honor.

Chief Gunner Charette's last appearance in full uniform in this city was on the occasion of a banquet tendered him in Associate hall 18 years ago.

Ex-Servicemen in Line
The following named ex-servicemen marched in the soldiers, sailors and marine division:
Frederick C. Tucker, (masco) age 7 years. Carried a sign "My Mother Raised her Boy to be a Sailor." He was dressed in full regulation "Blue-Jackets Uniform." Son of the Navy Recruiting officer, Lowell.
H. C. Tucker, Chief Yeoman, U. S. Navy. In charge of Navy Recruiting station, 1 Merrimack street. In charge, P. V. J. Mullin, older, U. S. Navy assistant navy recruiting officer, carried the navy Jack.

W. H. Berry, ship fitter 1st class, U. S. Navy, carried the American ensign.
L. P. Clancy, ex-soldier and A. G. Benoit, apprentice seaman, U. S. Navy, Newport Training station, carried the navy recruiting banner.

James Arthur Brown, ex-sergeant, U. S. hospital corps, had charge of a platoon composed of ex-servicemen.
The army recruiting banner was carried by Corpl. C. Nichols, U. S. Infantry assistant recruiting officer at Lawrence, Mass., and Sgt. H. L. Douglas, U. S. Army detailed for this duty. Sergt. C. Koch, U. S. Infantry, in charge of an army recruiting station at Lawrence, Mass., had charge of the Lawrence detail.

The success of this detail was due to the local navy recruiting officer and James Arthur Brown (ex-sergeant, U. S. hospital corps) employed by Baker, Jaynes Drug Co., this city.

PARADE NOTES

America First.
Lowell is prepared.

The demonstration was one of patriotism without regard to politics. That Salem Cadet band is some band.

The cowgirls attracted their share of attention.

The Knights of Columbus certainly made a very fine appearance.

The employees of Shaw hosiery made a fine appearance.

The Matthews "preparedness" feature made a great hit.

The O.M.T. cadets came in for considerable applause all along the route.

Uniform dressing was much in evidence along all parts of the line.

The decorations along the line were very original as well as elaborate.

There were no accidents and no fires.

Those electric lighted flags were pretty cute.

The parade exceeded the expectations of all who had a part in the affair.

"Eyes right" was carried out with the effect of a "regret" by the women passing the reviewing stand.

Daniel Cosgrove looked a whole lot like Teddy Roosevelt clean shaven in the parade last night.

The absence of disorderly persons on the street last night was a credit to the city.

There was "preparedness" in every sense of the word in that first division.

There was no finer looking man in the line of march than Commissioner James E. Donnelly.

penditures including music, signs and incidentals just equalled that amount.

One of the features of the parade was that it started promptly on time. This was an exception to the rule of parades.

Dr. Joe V. Melges took longer steps last night than ever before since his college days. He made a fine chief marshal for the Yorick club.

Many of those large flags were showered with enough money to pay for them. This demonstrates how the Stars and Stripes are respected.

The most impressive feature of the evening came at 8.30 o'clock when the line halted and all bands played "America" as the crowds sang.

The parade was unquestionably the best Lowell has ever had, and all those who assisted in any way in making it the "best ever" are entitled to congratulations.

Lieut. George Howard, the well known letter carrier, carries himself just as soldierly as he did 15 years ago when he returned from Porto Rico with the Sixth regiment.

The United States Cartridge company's chief of police is some leader. Martin was right at home. He had marched in the Preparedness parade in Boston.

The merchants, mill men and other employers of help did their "bit" in making the parade a success.

It was fitting that a preparedness parade should start on time, and it certainly did.

The fact that the merchants and mill men contributed to help defray the expenses of the uniforms worn by those in line shows the great spirit of co-operation between employer and employee.

The Yorick club members did themselves proud, not only as paraders but as hosts. They kept open house after the parade and those fortunate enough to be their guests enjoyed a most pleasant evening.

The Metropolitan Insurance men following their marshal, Mr. Redway, for appearance, dress and marching won general plaudits along the route. Nobody supposed there were so many of them.

When it came to keeping step, straight line and grace in turning corners Company A of the Pawtucketville Ladies, headed by Mrs. Edward P. Saunders, made a hit. Mrs. Saunders, a fine woman, was particularly taking in drilling the members of her company.

Hats off to the members of the Business Men's battalion. They certainly made a fine showing and their knowledge of military tactics after so few drills certainly reflects much credit on them and shows that there is no lack of enthusiasm on their part.

The Chelmsford street young men made a fine showing in last night's parade behind the Mission church band of Boston. They expressed their deep gratitude to Manager Garrity of the Washington Tavern who furnished automobiles to transport the band from Boston.

As the members of the Mathew Temperance Institute marched past St. Peter's church all uncovered, and Rev. W. George Mullin, who was standing nearby began clapping, and all others quickly followed. The applause continued until the "Mats" were out of sight.

Proprietor Garrity of the Washington Tavern introduced an original feature into the patriotic celebration last evening when he had a quartet sing "America" in the office of his hotel. The feature became so catching that in a short time everybody in the cafe crowded into the office and with bared heads joined in singing the national anthem. The singing was kept up until after 11 o'clock when it was transferred to the sidewalk and attracted a crowd of hundreds of people.

The following bulletin was posted in the various departments of the United States Cartridge Co. this morning:
"We must congratulate each other this morning on the wonderful showing we made in the preparedness parade. Without harmony and co-operation such a demonstration would have been impossible."

"Let us continue the good work and may peace and prosperity be our portion in years to come."

Signed:
U. S. Cartridge Co.

THE VICTIM OF RAIDS

TOWN SACKED BY GOTHS, BURGUNDIANS AND VANDALS BEFORE TAKEN BY THE FRANKS

WASHINGTON, D. C., June.—Toul, the scene of the recent German air raid, is the subject of today's war geography bulletin of the National Geographic society, issued from its Washington headquarters, which says:

"From the beginning of the Christian era Toul, known in Roman days as Tullum, has been the victim of raids. It had been sacked by Goths, Burgundians, Huns, and Vandals before it was taken by the Franks in the middle of the fifth century. In the meantime its people had been converted to Christianity by the Irish monk, St. Manau, in the fourth century, and it played an important part in the annals of the church until its bishopric, after nearly fourteen centuries, was suppressed during the early days of the Napoleonic era."

The history of Toul recalls one of the most sanguinary fratricidal strife of the early years of the seventh century, centering around the strong-willed Brunhilda, daughter of a Visigoth ruler who married Sigebert, a Frankish king reigning at Metz. The name of this wedding, King Sigebert, an Italian poet, kindled the jealousy of Chilperic, Sigebert's brother, who shortly thereafter married Brunhilda's sister. The new bride being murdered at the behest of Chilperic's favorite, a war between the two brothers occurred.

After Sigebert's assassination, Brunhilda, escaped from the clutches of Chilperic through the machinations of a new husband, the son of a conqueror. Following her own son's death, Brunhilda spurred her two grandsons to war with her brother, Theudebert II, deposing Theudebert at Tolbiac and Toul, and putting him to death, in 612. This unnatural grandmother met a horrible fate a few months later, when she fell into the hands of the son of Fredegond, the woman who had married Chilperic, to assassinate his wife, Brunhilda's sister. This royal strife breeder was condemned to be dragged at the heels of a wild horse until death released her from the torture.

Toul was a free German town during the middle ages until 1552 when Henry II of France seized it together with Metz and Verdun, the three towns comprising the territory known as Trois-Eveches. This victory of the French was one of the factors instrumental in determining Charles V to abdicate, leaving his imperial throne to his brother, Ferdinand and his Spanish-Netherlands possessions to his son Philip. During this century Toul was twice scourged by the plague which swept over Europe.

"In the Franco-Prussian war of 1870 Toul played an honorable part for Major Hock, commanding 200 intrepid troops, withstood a siege of 40 days' duration, capitulating only after 13,000 men, employing 100 guns, had bombarded the city for 12 days. Four years after this war France began to build new forts to take the place of Vauban's defenses constructed in 1700. At the outbreak of the present struggle the ring of forts surrounding this town made it the most formidable French fortress on the Meuse-Moselle frontier.

"In times of peace this city of 10,000 inhabitants is noted for its porcelain. It is situated between the Marne-Rhone canal and the Moselle, the latter flowing to the east of the town, which is 14 miles west of Nancy, in an air line. Verdun lies 45 miles to the northwest."

SUFFRAGISTS MARCH THE WHOLESALE GROCERS

CANVASED MEMBERS OF THE RESOLUTIONS COMMITTEE—BAKER HAS PLANK IN HIS POCKET

ST. LOUIS, Mo., June 14.—Under a sweltering sun and intense humidity, 5000 suffragists today carried out their "Golden Lane" demonstration over 12 blocks of Locust street leading to the Convention hall. They were enthusiastically received by the thousands of delegates and convention visitors who passed between their white and yellow garbed lines, ranged on the two sides of the street, and not a single untoward incident marked the occasion.

Only members of the National Woman Suffrage association participated in the display. Meantime representatives of the woman's party continued to canvass members of the resolutions committee in behalf of their cause.

Reports came to both suffrage camps today that the plank which Secretary Baker carries and which is said to have the president's endorsement is not as strong as that submitted to the suffragists last night through Secretary Daniels and endorsed by widely known democrats. The plank Mr. Baker has, it is understood, declares strongly for suffrage but does not advocate the immediate passage of a constitutional amendment by congress.

BOSTON, June 14.—Edward C. Kindred, charged with the theft of $22,000 in New York last August to pay off his city where he had spent part of the money in establishing himself as a "good spender" to return to answer an indictment against him. With two New York police inspectors as fellow passengers, Kindred made the trip in his racing automobile and carried most of the expensive wardrobe from his Back Bay apartments. He had already turned over to the police $7000 in cash and some valuables.

The prisoner, after valuing extradition proceedings in court today, admitted his identity, according to Police Captain Armstrong and said he was glad to go back.

TARIFF PLANK OF THE DEMOCRATS

LARGELY WORK OF A. MITCHELL PALMER

ST. LOUIS, June 15.—A. Mitchell Palmer of Pennsylvania, former representative in congress and close personal and political friend of President Wilson, brought here the tariff plank of the democratic platform. The forecasts had it that it would contain a strong "anti-dumping" section, to protect American producers from an unusual influx of cheap foreign goods expected on feared at the close of the war. Bruce Kremer, secretary of the national committee, and Henry Morgenthau, former ambassador to Turkey, who will, it is predicted, have charge of the financial end of the democratic campaign, have been conspicuous figures at the convention. Senator John W. Kern of Indiana, home state of Vice President Marshall, has been one of Mr. Marshall's able supporters. He was the vice-presidential candidate with Bryan in 1908.

Standing in front of West Point's famous battle monument, on which are engraved the names of West Pointers who have died gloriously for their country, and within a few yards of Washington's statue, President Wilson delivered to the graduates of the military academy and thousands of others an address on patriotism and preparedness. The president's address was heard by the largest audience that ever attended a West Point graduation. The graduating class numbered 124. The exercises included a review of the entire cadet body by the president, who was accompanied by Colonel Towner, the retiring superintendent of the academy; Major General Scott, chief of staff of the army; Major General Bliss, assistant chief of staff, and other high officers. The exercises took place June 13.

SENATOR WASHBURN RETIRES

THE HUGHES CAMPAIGN

NO DEFINITE PLAN FIXED—NATIONAL CHAIRMAN TO BE SELECTED SOON

NEW YORK, June 14.—With no definite appointments in prospect during the day, but prepared to confer with many leaders with political and personal missions, Charles E. Hughes, republican candidate for president, entered his headquarters in a hotel here shortly before noon. He had spent the early hours opening large numbers of letters and telegrams which arrived over night.

Early callers included John Hays Hammond and Geo. W. Wickersham, Jr., and a number of western republicans. Mr. Hughes' campaign plans were still indefinite today. He will remain here until Saturday afternoon, when he will go out of town over the week end, and on Monday will start for Providence to address the Brown university graduates.

Everett Colby of New Jersey, a progressive leader, was expected to call on Mr. Hughes today. There was an insistent report today that Mr. Colby, Oscar S. Straus and Samuel W. Fairchild, president of the Union League club and a personal friend of both Mr. Hughes and Theodore Roosevelt, were working hard to bring the candidate and the colonel together.

Among the subjects which Mr. Hughes is discussing with callers is the problem of selecting a national chairman. Men understood to be under consideration include Herbert Parsons, national committeeman from New York, Frederick C. Tanner, New York state chairman, Frank H. Hitchcock, a leader of the Hughes forces at Chicago, William Hayward, a public service commissioner of this city, and Ralph E. Williams, national committeeman from Oregon.

Mr. Hughes today reconsidered his decision not to meet suffrage leaders making his speech at the notification ceremonies and indicated his willingness to meet representatives of the Congressional Union for Woman Suffrage.

DR. P. N. GATSPOPOULOS

LOWELL YOUNG MAN GRADUATES WITH HONORS AT MARYLAND UNIVERSITY

The Greek colony of this city is rejoicing over the arrival in Lowell of Dr. Peter N. Gatsopoulos, who this week graduated from the Maryland university at Baltimore, Md., as a physician and surgeon. The new doctor is the nephew of Dr. John C. Gatsopoulos, and formerly resided here. Sometime in the near future he will take the state board examination in Massachusetts and New Hampshire and will establish his home in this city or Manchester, N. H.

Dr. Gatsopoulos was the only Greek student at the Maryland university and he graduated with distinction. He was awarded first prize for surgery, and was warmly congratulated by the governor of Maryland, who presented the diplomas and prizes. The dean of the university, Dr. Thomas Fall, presented the young doctor a valuable collection of surgical instruments as a token of esteem on the part of the students and faculty of the university. In the course of his presentation address, Dr. Fall said he was proud to offer the gift to Dr. Gatsopoulos, who is a real descendant of Hippocrates and Aesculapius, and he said the achievement by a young Greek student is a great honor for his people and also for the university.

DR. PETER N. GATSPOPOULOS

Dr. Peter N. Gatsopoulos came to the city six years ago and then entered the American International college at Springfield. He remained there one school term and later entered the Maryland university. He is now the guest of his uncle, Dr. John C. Gatsopoulos and as soon as he has passed the state board examination he will begin practicing in Lowell and Manchester. The young man is a linguist, being able to speak, read and write English, Greek, Italian and French. His many friends wish him success in his new career.

CONFERENCE OF ALLIES

CONSIDERATION OF TRADE POLICIES FOR MUTUAL BENEFIT TO BE ADOPTED AFTER THE WAR

PARIS, June 14.—Premier Briand delivered an address of welcome today to the delegates to the economic conference of the entente allies. "It is not enough to conquer by military union," he said, "there must also be diplomatic and economic union, which will bring about intensive development of the material resources of the allies, exchange of their products and distribution among the markets of the world. We have to assure economic liberation of the world, to restore healthy commercial methods and to recover our commercial independence."

The conference, which opened today is for the direct interchange of views among the governments concerned, which are represented by leading members of the cabinet of each allied country.

The sessions, which are secret, will continue for several days. The main purpose is to evolve a general policy, which will be applicable after the war, to secure the trade relations of the allies and to prevent renewal of Germany's commercial expansion in the markets of the allied nations.

CHAIRMAN M'COMBS

SPEECH IN CALLING THE DEMOCRATIC NATION CONVENTION TO ORDER

In calling the democratic national convention to order at noon today Chairman William F. McCombs of the democratic national committee, spoke as follows:

"We are in an atmosphere of victory. We have no feeling of gloom, but a spirit of certainty. We are to celebrate the marvelous achievements of the democratic party since it came into power and to place a milestone upon the path of its future success."

"Over two thousand years ago, an old slave related the fable of the frog who wanted to grow to the size of all animals. Such was the ambition of his soul that his body swelled to a marvelous proportion. Indeed, Aesop went so far as to predict that the frog, upon reaching the size of the elephant, would burst. I commend to your minds the wisdom of Aesop. It took over two thousand years for his prophecy to come true. Only last week the frog elephant—or the elephant frog—exploded. The republican party for years succeeded in deceiving the country. Now it is successfully deceiving itself. In its platform it offers pulchritudinous promises—but with vacuous intent. It promises the country in the main, what the democratic party has already done or is in the process of doing, saving always the hocus word 'protection.' It has cloaked its policy with a jumbled robe but the cloven hoof of special interest still protrudes."

"The board of directors has sat in Chicago and again resolved that they are the country. They have adopted the doctrine of foreordination and predestination, but have made it applicable only to themselves."

"The rest of the people are their wards—for profit."

"Ambition is a noble attribute but when it is adulterated with greed, it becomes a deadly poison. We have recently witnessed the painful spectacle of two great American parties in Chicago, putting self in place of ideals; self glorification in place of national honor; republicanism and progressivism so-called, in place of our only ideal—Americanism."

"We have witnessed the drab spectacle of two groups of men, trading principles like competitors in a fish market, in the hope that some compromise would win public support. They have not come together—they have fallen out over the sawdust. For the sake of victory, many of these men, essentially opposite in principle, have been willing to become friends with false masks. The result is inevitable. The whole country is proud in the thought that 'united we stand.' We welcome the pent-up Americanism of the real progressives individually to our ranks; offering them a haven; in a principle. Their leader has abandoned them with crass cruelty."

"A gentleman from Oyster Bay in a recent letter to Chicago quotes Abraham Lincoln as saying 'May not all, having a common interest, reunite in a common effort to save our common country.' Ladies and gentlemen, I beg to call your attention to the word 'reunite.' The word 'unite' has been the disguise of the opposition for years. There may be a political war today, in this country, but that war only exists between factions. Why did the gentleman quote the words of Lincoln? In the hour of reunion, the American people are reunited as never before. He means by reuniting that two factions of his party should reunite. These two factions or parts of them hoped to join for self-aggrandizement. Leaders of these factions, factions powerless as entities—hoped to join hands, however strained and however divided on irreconcilable principles, for the insidious purpose of overthrowing a third entity, which for the past four years stood united in a common cause, whose shield is one for all and all for one; equal rights and special privileges to none; whose chief tenet of faith is that America is American and Americans are Americans."

"This is a crucial hour in the history of the world. It is an hour when every man should take stock of himself and his country. This is an hour when every one should see whether in his inner consciousness he squares with the ideals of 1776, and the later periods of dramatic episode, when this country resolutely maintained peace with honor."

"The democratic party in the face of so many and vicious attacks, has maintained this great American ideal. While for peace, it has steadily and surely worked for sound and powerful preparedness. It has maintained a solemn, calm dignity in the face of circumstances which might have driven it into the vortex of world destruction. Though vilified by self-seekers, it has maintained friendly relations throughout the world; it has been true to the spirit of America; it has been true to the great principles of Washington, Jefferson, Madison and Jackson; it has allowed no selfish interest to blind it to the fundamental faith and the country has found that its confidence has been well bestowed."

"The democratic party has proven itself a party of principles, a party of constructive ability, a party of performance. It has proven that ideals can be realized. United we stand for America."

Ladies and gentlemen of this convention, the elephant is dead, the moose is dead. Long live the American eagle."

The first real demonstration greeted Mr. McCombs' declaration: "The elephant is dead, the moose is dead, long live the American eagle!"

ST. LOUIS, June 15.—A. Mitchell Palmer of Pennsylvania, former representative in congress and close personal and political friend of President Wilson, brought here the tariff plank of the democratic platform. ST. LOUIS, June 15.—A. Mitchell Palmer of Pennsylvania, former representative in congress and close personal and political friend of President Wilson, brought here the tariff plank of the democratic platform. The forecasts had it that it would contain a strong "anti-dumping" section, to protect American producers from an unusual influx of cheap foreign goods expected on feared at the close of the war. Bruce Kremer, secretary of the national committee, and Henry Morgenthau, former ambassador to Turkey, who will, it is predicted, have charge of the financial end of the democratic campaign, have been conspicuous figures at the convention. Senator John W. Kern of Indiana, home state of Vice President Marshall, has been one of Mr. Marshall's able supporters. He was the vice-presidential candidate with Bryan in 1908.

NOTRE DAME GRADUATION

Fourteen Young Ladies Given Diplomas at High Mass—Sermon by Rev. W. J. O'Brien

With beautiful and impressive ceremonies fourteen members of the graduating class of Notre Dame academy, Adams street, received their diplomas this morning, and another group of accomplished young ladies went forth to carry the training received in the various halls of life. The main feature of the program consisted of the solemn high mass in the chapel, during which the diplomas were awarded by Rt. Rev. William O'Brien, and the address to the graduates delivered by Rev. W. J. O'Brien of Brockton.

The setting for the solemn and inspiring scene was strikingly beautiful, reflecting the spirit of the occasion adequately. At 10 a. m. the chapel was crowded by the large number of relatives, friends and former pupils in attendance. The altar was brilliant with clusters of cut flowers, among which were two great masses of crimson peonies, and there were hundreds of candles and other special decorative features. At the stroke of 10, the thrilling procession by Massanel was played and the graduating class marched in two by two, each girl wearing a white dress and a veil. The front seats in the chapel had been reserved, and the girls made a pretty picture when they had taken their places.

Solemn high mass was celebrated by Rev. Joseph A. Curtin of St. Patrick's, with Rev. Frs. Callahan and Kerrigan as deacon and sub-deacon, respectively. Rt. Rev. Monsignor O'Brien sat within the sanctuary, Rev. M. C. Gilbride, St. Mary's, Collinsville; Rev. E. A. Costello, St. Augustine's, South Boston; Rev. W.

J. O'Brien, Brockton; Rev. B. C. Shea, St. Mary's, Long Branch, N. J.; Rev. Thomas W. Buckley, St. Columba's, Pawtucketville, and others.

calling forth many expressions of commendation from the visiting priests and other guests. The mass was solemn Gregorian and the choir and orchestra of Notre Dame sang the various sections with devotion and appreciation of musical values. The shading and graduation of tone was beautifully effective, the voices dying away softly in waves of sound, or swelling out in full volume according to the appeal of the text. During the mass Tozer's "Veni Sanctus Spiritus" was beautifully rendered and at the offertory Singlingberger's "Ave Maria" was sung most effectively. At the close of the mass of Pentecost, the usual Te Deum and the Recessional were sung very impressively.

Address
The address to the graduates was preached by Rev. W. J. O'Brien of Brockton, and was an eloquent discourse on Catholic education. To the graduates personally he addressed words of congratulation. To the graduates he said:

"Now, dear graduates, fortune has kindly favored you in placing you here for a sound Catholic education. You have been chosen from among thousands and placed under the tender and watchful care of the good sisters of Notre Dame. They, who have consecrated their lives to the service of God and put forth all their energies in the acquisition of that knowledge which they have imparted to you, know full well that you are going forth well equipped to fight the battles of life. But you must remember that there is an obligation on you always to carry yourselves in every phase of life as graduates of Notre Dame. And as you go forth inspired by the exemplary lives of your pious instructors who have been to you as guiding angels during the happy years you have spent here under this hallowed roof, your lives hereafter must have a great influence for good or evil on those with whom you come in contact in your daily intercourse. Therefore, it remains for you to bear in mind the lessons you have been taught and no doubt learned well to so live that every thought and action of yours may not only reflect credit on your alma mater but also merit the approval of those around you and as we trust above all, the approval of Him who will one day be our Judge.

The following young men served as ushers throughout the ceremony: Thomas A. Delmore, John E. Stapleton, James T. Flannery and William Donohue. At the close of the formal exercises in the chapel, all present repaired to the class hall where a wonderful exhibition of art and fancy work done by the pupils was inspected. Members of the graduating class and other pupils then took their friends through the various rooms of the academy and through the beautiful grounds, and the day was ended by all on memory's tablets as one of the happy days that shall always be connected with Notre Dame and the good sisters in charge.

Police Court Cases
Only three arrests since yesterday forenoon—minor cases in court.

Albert Allie, Abraham Allie, Mohamed Fadel, Kasen Harnmouh and Mohamed Selman were arraigned before Judge Enright in police court this morning on complaints charging them with assault and battery on Mohamed Omar and Hassan Allie. By agreement of counsel the case was continued until next Wednesday, each of the defendants being held under $200.

The arrests were made as a result of the free-for-all fight which took place near the corner of Fletcher and Worthen streets about 7 o'clock Tuesday morning, an account of which was exclusively reported in The Sun on the same day. According to information given out, knives were used and one person is said to have heard a shot fired.

An investigation by the police brought to light that the men mixed up in the fracas had figured in several feuds and inasmuch as the principals in each and every one of these fights resided either in Perry's court, this city, or in Collinsville, the local police sought the assistance of Officer William Cullinan of Dracut and he succeeded in making five arrests. It is understood that several other arrests will follow.

When the defendants were arraigned in court this morning Counsel Neal called the attention of the court to the condition of the two complainants. Each bore marks on the face and neck which might have been inflicted by knives, fists, etc., which will be determined when the case goes on to trial. There were but three arrests for drunkenness from 10 o'clock yesterday till 10 this morning. They were released.

Concealment of Property

EUROPEAN WAR NEWS

Intense Artillery Activity on Verdun Front—Russians Advancing—Greeks Denounce Allies

Intense artillery activity is reported on both banks of the river Meuse on the Verdun front. The Germans are directing a heavy fire on Fort Souville, north of the fortresses, whose guns have so far lent powerful aid in halting the efforts of the crown prince to push the French back to their inner line of defense.

West of the river, Chateaucourt, south of Cumieres, where the Germans have already driven a wedge into the French lines, is an especial point of attack. No infantry action has occurred on either bank. The Paris afternoon bulletin states in their offensive on the eastern front, the Russians are apparently making steady headway although still some distance from Lemberg, their immediate objective in Galicia. Last reports place them just across the border some 10 miles north of the city. Kovel, the railway junction point where the link between the German and Austrian forces on this front is formed, has been more closely approached by General Brusiloff's armies. In Bukovina, Czernowitz, the capital, apparently is cut off from all directions but the south.

GERMANS CONTINUE THE VIOLENT BOMBARDMENT NORTH OF SOUVILLE

PARIS, June 15, 1:55 a. m.—The Germans are continuing the violent bombardment of the French positions north of Souville, the key to the inner defenses of Verdun, the official statement issued by the French war office today, said:

No infantry fighting occurred on either bank of the Meuse last night. On the Vosges front some minor German attempts to attack the French line were made, but completely failed, according to the official statement. "On both banks of the river Meuse there was cessation of infantry activity last night. On the other hand the German and French artillery branches showed activity in the region of Chateaucourt as well as in the sector to the north of Souville.

"In the Vosges a strong detachment of the enemy which was supported by a spirited bombardment, endeavored to approach our line, but was driven back by the fire of our machine guns, another surprise attack by the enemy upon our positions to the northwest of Benhomme resulted in complete failure."

ATTITUDE OF ALLIES TOWARD GREECE DENOUNCED IN ATHENS

ATHENS, June 14, via London, June 15.—The attitude of the entente allies toward Greece, was denounced at meetings held here today. Resolutions were passed expressing loyalty to King Constantine, and confidence in the policy of Premier Skoufodis. The resolutions protested against the blockade of Greek ports established by England and France and denounced the conduct of the allies toward neutral nations and "especially toward the president of the United States of America."

A feature of the resolutions was that the king was referred to as "our glorious sovereign, King Constantine XII." This title placed the monarch in the line of the ancient rulers of Constantinople.

BELGIAN FORCES ARE ADVANCING IN GERMAN EAST AFRICA

HAVRE, June 15, via Paris.—Substantial progress for the Belgian forces invading German East Africa, giving them control of the entire northwest section of the colony, is claimed in an official statement issued by the Belgian war office today. The statement is as follows:

The German forces, having effected a retreat to the south, seem to be concentrating in the Kilega region. Gen. Tombour's army, continuing the pursuit of the enemy, has reached the Nyanza and Tanganyika at three points. "The right column after occupying Usumbura on June 5 is continuing its march toward Kilega. In the centre two columns have reached respectively Usarak and Kasima, the latter locality being about 125 miles east of Usumbura. The left column has reached Kagera where it holds the approaches to Lake Tanganyika.

Aviator Lieutenants Benhaeghe and Colignon flew over the German fort Kilega in a seaplane on June 10, and dropped bombs on the gunboat Graf von Goetzen. Two bombs hit and considerably damaged the vessel."

ADMINISTRATOR'S SALE OF REAL ESTATE AT PUBLIC AUCTION

ON THE PREMISES SITUATED AT NOS. 39-41-43 JEWETT STREET, CENTRALVILLE

ON NEXT SATURDAY, JUNE 17, 1916

AT 3 O'CLOCK, P. M.

By virtue of a license issued by the Probate court, the administrator of the estate of Peter L. Denault, late of Lowell, has instructed the auctioneer to sell at absolute auction sale to whomsoever will bid the most this attractive home and investment property, located within 12 minutes' walk of Merrimack Square.

The property comprises a two-story house of nine rooms with bath, pantry and furnace heat at No. 42 Jewett street, and a two-story two-tenement house of five rooms, separate entrances to each, bathroom and furnace in lower tenement at Nos. 39-41 Jewett street.

The lot has an area of about 4553 square feet of land, more or less, with a frontage of about 50 feet on Jewett street.

This sale should attract any person contemplating buying real estate this spring, when you take into consideration a full two-story house, now occupied as a home, that one could if desired convert into a two-apartment property at a low cost, its present plan making it an easy problem. There are four large rooms besides bath and pantry on the first floor, and two good sized chambers and storeroom on the second floor; building is heavily timbered, has a high-posted cellar, cemented in part, and on the same lot a two-story, two-tenement house of five rooms each, that will practically pay the carrying charges of the entire property.

The buildings are in 3-1 condition, and the location, within easy walking distance to the largest of Lowell's manufacturing plants, also to the very center of the city, will assure one of a steady and continuous occupancy.

If you are looking for a home, and wish a chance to purchase at the same time, on the same lot, and in no way connected with your home, an investment that will make your rent cost you almost nothing, and pay you interest on your money, then be on hand next Saturday at this sale. Terms $300 must be paid to the auctioneer just as soon as the property is struck off. Other terms at sale.

RENOMINATE WILSON TONIGHT

TO RE-NOMINATE WILSON AND MARSHALL TONIGHT

Convention Changes Program—

When Sen. James Recounted Diplomatic Achievements of Wilson, Convention Launched Into an 18 Minute Uproar in Which Bryan Joined—President Wilson's Conduct of Foreign Affairs Approved—Convention to Meet at 9 O'Clock—McComick to Succeed McCombs—Bryan to Take Stump for Wilson

COLISEUM, St. Louis, Mo., June 15.—The democratic national convention today changed its program of procedure and agreed to make nominations for president and vice president tonight instead of tomorrow.

The rules were amended and the convention will assemble at 9 o'clock tonight to remain in continuous session until nominations are made.

With one demonstration after another today the democratic national convention registered its approval of President Wilson's conduct of foreign affairs which has kept the country at peace.

When permanent Chairman James recounted the diplomatic achievements of the president in the negotiations with Germany the convention launched into an 18 minute uproar of cheering, cheering and waving of flags, in which William J. Bryan, from his seat in the press section, joined.

There were calls for a speech from Bryan, but it was found that he had slipped out while the demonstration was going on.

Jerry C. South, clerk of the house of representatives, a delegate from Arkansas, announced that he would raise a point of order if consent were asked of Bryan to speak.

The convention machinery was all ready to be thrown into high gear by a report from the rules committee recommending that nominations be made tonight. All the leaders were agreeable to the new plans.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., June 15.—While the democratic national convention was in its second session today, adopting a permanent organization and hearing the speech of Senator Ollie James as permanent chairman, the platform makers were working with President Wilson's "own draft" and various suggested planks, hoping to have a completed draft of the platform ready for submission to the full resolutions committee late this afternoon.

By unanimous vote the democratic rules committee today recommended that nominations for president and vice-president begin at 9 o'clock tonight.

The proposal was carried after an extended argument in its behalf by Chairman William A. Glasgow, Jr., of Pennsylvania. His chief contention was that it would be impossible to hold the delegates later than tonight and that it would be poor politics to make the nominations with seats empty.

Charles B. Strecker of Massachusetts opposed a change of program. He insisted it was due the St. Louis business men who had given the national committee a bonus of $100,000 for the convention, that delegates be kept until tomorrow night. Eventually, he too agreed to Mr. Glasgow's plan.

When the platform will be considered has not been definitely decided. The tentative plan of the rules committee was to recess at the conclusion of Senator James' speech until 8 o'clock at which time nominations would begin. Whether the platform should be considered tonight after the nominations or tomorrow was left to the rules committee.

PROPOSE ARBITRATION

R. R. OFFICIALS CANNOT MEET DEMANDS OF THEIR EMPLOYEES

NEW YORK, June 15.—The railroad managers today notified the heads of the four railroad brotherhoods of employees that they could not meet their demands for an eight-hour day and time and a half for overtime work. They proposed arbitration as a solution of their difficulties or submission of the dispute to the interstate commerce commission.

A. B. Garretson, head of the conductors' organization, announced on receiving the railroad's answer that the arbitration proposition was not acceptable and that the proposition to submit the matter to the interstate commerce commission was impracticable, because that body had no power to settle the dispute.

Mr. Garretson finally announced that the reply of the roads would be reported back to the men.

"Upon the verdict they render our future actions will be based," he said.

HEAD OF WOMEN'S CLUBS LYNN, June 15.—Mrs. Herbert J. Garney of Quincy, was nominated for president of the Massachusetts Federation of Women's Clubs at the 24th annual meeting here today. The election of officers takes place tomorrow.

Lowell, true to her traditions, sent forth to the nation last night the message that Americanism means today just what it meant in 1776.

Through the city's streets, from 7:15 o'clock until 10:45, marched more than 15,000 men and women, row after row of them, thundering the message home to the rhythm of tramping feet piling conviction upon conviction that a solid American citizenship is determined that Americanism, by national preparedness, shall live forever.

The potent force of it all struck deep. Thousands of spectators, banded at the edges of this human torrent, caught up the message and shouted it out in one of the greatest demonstrations of patriotism ever witnessed in this or any other city.

Not a man, woman or child will forget the impressiveness of the scene and the feeling that went with it when the parade halted and the thousands of voices joined in singing "America." Recollections of that moment will not die until the end comes, regardless of how many the years. And high above the heads of all was the emblem which symbolized the spirit of it all—Old Glory.

The parade started at 7:15 o'clock sharp. Long before that hour the route of parade was choked with the largest crowds of humanity ever assembled in Lowell's history. The windows of every building, home or office along the line of march were the frames for countless more faces. Roofs were black with people and young America cheered from perilous positions. Not a tree or post but held its quota of spectators.

Through the long line of packed humanity there ran a tripartite and the onlooker watched a sight that will live always in memory—an inspiration all through life. Words cannot paint the picture; superlatives seem weak. Now it would be row upon row of uniformed men. Now it would be row upon row of women in white, transformed by the fluttering flags they carried into a great human wave of red, white and blue.

Now it would be row upon row of white-garbed women, sweeping into view like a huge white cloud, and women never looked lovelier than those who marched last night.

Trained, uniformed men, or recruits from plain civil life—everyday men and women—it was all the same. The same spirit prevailed and actuated them. Shoulders straightened, eyes fired, as they strode by the reviewing stand under the eyes of the mayor, the lieutenant, governor and others, including army officers, active and retired.

There was nothing frivolous about the bearing of these men and women. They did not laugh. They did not salute acquaintances along the way. Earnest, fired with patriotism and ex-nessness for their cause, they surged spontaneously from the city's everyday life—they, the men and women who make the wheels go round—and now they marched as living testimonials of their belief.

Veterans of Civil War

Probably no more enthusiastic group of spectators along the line of march was to be found than the G.A.R. Veterans of the various posts, who reviewed the parade from in front of the Green school, where seats had been provided for them. The greatest sight in Lowell's history was the unanimous opinion of every veteran.

There were a few G.A.R. men in the parade, a small detail of them, hardly a handful, men old only in years, still young in spirit. And gazing on them the thousands of spectators had it poignantly thrust home that these same men back in the days of '61—fired with Americanism—held this country welded together and may point to it today and say, "We did it; made it what it is today. We gave our sons, our brothers for it. We risked our lives for it. We're too old now, so we've handed the trust down to you. Be guided by us—prepare!"

Cheers for the Women

The spectacle that thrilled the most thought was the spectacle of the marching women. Platoon upon platoon, company upon company, they

TWO U.S. TROOPERS SHOT IN FIGHT ON THE BORDER

Mexicans Hurlled Back After 30 Minute Battle—Villa Chief is Captured—Note to Carranza

LAREDO, Tex., June 15.—One hundred Mexican bandits crossing the Rio Grande forty miles northeast of here, early today attacked the American border patrol near San Ignacio, killing two and wounding five, according to reports sent to Fort McIntosh, here, over the field telephone.

The Mexicans expected to find an insignificant detachment of Americans. Instead, they were met by Troops I and M, of the 14th Cavalry, 140 strong, under Major Alonzo Gray. They were hurled back across the river, losing six dead and several wounded.

The bandits first attacked Troop M, Troop I, a short distance up the river, heard the shooting and hurried to the scene. The attackers soon lost heart and retreated southward along the river, keeping on the American side for some distance before crossing back to Mexican soil.

The attack began at 2 a. m., and the fighting lasted about thirty minutes. The Americans were only partly surprised. The Mexicans succeeded in making their way around to the rear of the patrol's camp and fired the shot at a sentry.

The names of the dead soldiers were not reported to military headquarters at Fort McIntosh. It was taken for granted here that Major Gray would pursue the bandits until they crossed into Mexico and it would not be surprising if the Americans should follow the "hot trail" across the river.

Other troops of cavalry have been ordered in readiness to proceed to the San Ignacio section.

PROMINENT VILLA CHIEF CAPTURED BY AMERICANS

FIELD HEADQUARTERS, June 14, via radio to Columbus, N. M., June 15.—Col. Pedro Lujan, one of the most prominent Villa chieftains remaining alive, was captured yesterday by Capt. F. G. Turner, commanding Troop M, 13th Cavalry, at Hacienda Tepahaknes, Lujan was one of the leaders in the raid at Columbus, N. M., March 9. His capture nearly completes the extermination of the Villa leaders in the raid across the border.

A bridal couple, staying into headquarters camp on a honeymoon, revealed the hiding place of Lujan who was ill. Before daybreak Capt. Turner and his troop rode into Hacienda Tepahaknes and found Lujan. The chieftain denied his identity, declaring he was a poor peon. He had almost convinced the Americans when they caught sight of the gold teeth as he protested. He was brought here a prisoner and subsequently admitted his identity.

NOTE TO CARRANZA COMPLETED BY LANSING

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Secretary Lansing laid before President Wilson today the completed draft of a note to Gen. Carranza, replying to the demand that American troops be withdrawn from Mexico. The president and Mr.

came down the hill in Gorham street, through Merrimack square and by city hall—the mothers and prospective mothers who won't be afraid to raise their boys to be soldiers.

These women, and the women along the way who cheered them and they were legion—proved beyond all doubt that the American women of today, like Nell Pitcher of history, are behind their men, ready to raise and give them to their country if their country needs them.

roaring cheer, the kind of cheer that comes from the heart, unbidden, met these women on every hand. It was theirs when they came down the hill in Gorham street. It was theirs when they finished. There wasn't one who fell out of line—not one that complained. Like the men they, too, marched for a big idea—and mud and cobble held no terrors.

There were many other features, impressive and unique; but next to that of the marching women in impressiveness was the enormous numbers of men and women in the division legion—proved beyond all doubt that the American women of today, in splendid style, as did the business men, the large stores and the fraternal organizations.

Weather Clerk a Bear

A woman at city hall said the weather clerk was "a perfect bear" to hold back the rain which threatened all the afternoon until the parade was over. Not a drop of rain was felt until the last unit had passed the reviewing stand and then a heavy mist settled over the city, but there was no downpour.

Parade the Best Ever

Lieut. Col. Beaumont B. Buck, U.S.A., and Justice James B. Carroll of Springfield, of the supreme court, were among those on the reviewing stand. Lieut. Col. Buck was chief marshal of Boston's big Preparedness parade and he said last night that Lowell's parade was a close second. The number of marchers in the Boston parade was 100,000.

Lansing conferred at length on the situation. Unless some new development forces the reply will not be sent until next week, at the earliest. President Wilson and his advisers are anxious to deal with the Carranza note in such fashion that action can not be attributed to domestic politics.

As prepared by Secretary Lansing, it is understood the note fully declines to withdraw American troops until the de facto government has shown both its willingness and its ability to police the border states properly. It also is said to make sharp rejoinder to suggestions of the Carranza communications which officials regard as discourteous and uncalled for. Carranza questioned the good faith of the Washington administration and openly hinted that President Wilson had his eyes on the American political situation in dealing with the situation beyond the border.

Carranza's request for a new statement of the intentions of the United States toward Mexico probably will be complied with. It is understood, however, that the declaration will be so framed that the de facto government can have no doubt that the United States government regards such a request as wholly unnecessary in view of the consistency in view of all previous utterances of President Wilson, the acts of his administration and the behavior of the troops now beyond the border. It will be pointed out that a friendly spirit constantly has been manifested towards Mexico and Carranza will be told that failure of Mexican and the American troops to cooperate for the extermination of bandits was due to the hostility and suspicion exhibited by the Mexicans.

2000 REFUGEES ARRIVE IN JUAREZ FROM CHIHUAHUA

EL PASO, Tex., June 15.—Two thousand refugees including four Americans are in Juarez, today, having fled from the Chihuahua district around Torreón. The Americans declare that famine conditions prevail around Torreón and that the civil population would welcome any measure that would relieve them from the dangers of starvation. The news is of Carranza currency they say, is without purchasing power.

Caputo Reyes and Jose Isabel Robles, former Villa followers, who made their peace with the de facto government, are reported to have again revolted.

TO RENOMINATE WILSON

gressive remedial legislation than the nation has ever had written upon its statute books since its birth. In former national contests in the last two decades our party came as a prophet. Today we come with deeds, not words; with performance, not promise. The democratic party has kept its word with the American people. We have made good."

The chairman reviewed at length the legislative records of the administration and eulogized the president for his direction of foreign affairs. The democrats, he said, had enacted a tariff law under which monopolies were crushed and unexampled prosperity attained; a banking law taking the money control out of the hands of an oligarchy and making panics no longer possible; and many reform measures of lesser importance.

He declared President Wilson's Mexican policy and his course in protecting American rights against the encroachments of European belligerents had shown all the world that the president "neither bullies the weak nor fears the strong."

In a concluding appeal for the triumph of patriotism above politics, Senator James said the renomination of such a president in partisan convention ought not to be necessary, and that to discredit him might paralyze the hand that could write the peace treaty of the world.

At the outset the senator referred briefly to President Wilson's campaign against lobbying in congress and pointed out that under this administration the constitution has been amended for the first time since the Civil war when "we freed the senate from the control of the great interests by making it elective by the people at the polls." He then eulogized the Underwood-Simmons tariff act as one of which the party was justly proud.

"Not a schedule in it fosters a monopoly," he said. "Our republican friends told us it would close the factories, fill the streets with idle men, produce a panic, create soup houses and distress would reign everywhere; but we rejoice today to point to an unexampled prosperity in the nation, labor more generally employed, at higher rates, shorter hours, and better conditions than ever before. Our republican friends tell us that after the war is over poor, stricken, prostrate, torn, bleeding Europe will take our home market from us. I have no such fear. America is going to take no market of the world. But we shall cut from them the last hope of having even a false issue, for we shall pass a bill creating a tariff board to gather the facts created by new war conditions."

Turning to the federal reserve law, Senator James declared that it should averted a panic at the outbreak of the European war.

"What would have been the result if the old republican system had been in effect," he asked. "The stock exchanges in every city in the world were closed. Europe poured its vast hoards in piteous streams upon our shores. Who thinks that the old republican system of finance under the guidance of those patriotic guardians would have been able to withstand this mighty cataclysm? But what was the result? Not a bank closed its doors; not a laborer was thrown out of employment; not a business was forced into bankruptcy; but there stood strong, serving the masses of mankind, this great legislative achievement of the democratic party. As the master achievement of Woodrow Wilson, to my mind, next to keeping a hundred million people at peace with the world, the historian will record the federal reserve law."

Declaring that "self-defense and preparation for it is as necessary now as ever before," the speaker pointed to the administration's preparedness program as a proof that the party believed in "preparedness without militarism."

"In 1906," he continued, "I attended the great peace conference held in London. I thought that the millennium of peace had come and such a thing as the world's war was impossible; but that day when the Christian heart shall rule the world is not in sight. We must not mistake dishonor for peace, as we cannot make oppression for peace. Woodrow Wilson and the democratic party advocate an army big enough to make aggressors think the second time before they strike a blow. Democracy wants an army and a navy in keeping with the dignity, preservation, and worth of this great republic. We do not want a foot of anybody's else soil, and, by the eternal God, they shall not take a foot of ours."

"During this administration we have done more to build up an army and navy in three years than the republican party did in 40 years of its existence. More has been done to give the American people a navy and army in three months than Col. Roosevelt and Mr. Taft did in 11 years."

Senator James spoke of the republican platform declaration for a continuous policy of national defense, declaring that only two propositions for a continuous policy ever had been made in American history, one, by the general board of the navy in 1903, which was pigeon-holed by a republican secretary of the navy, and the other by President Wilson in his address to congress last December.

"But what happened when this matter was under consideration in the naval affairs committee of the house?" continued the senator. "Every republican member on the committee decided to oppose the president's 'continuous program' and would vote for no program longer than one year. After 16 years of failure, even to let the public know of the 'continuous policy' proposed by naval experts, much less to carry out such a policy, and after the republicans on the house naval affairs committee in June, 1916, unanimously opposed the president's policy, they now say they favor the 'continuous policy.'"

The republican plank, declaring for "an effective system of credit" as opposed to the ineffective law proposed by the present democratic administration, was assailed by Senator James, who declared that almost every republican in the house and senate had voted for the administration's rural credits bill and that none had charged that it was ineffective or had proposed a substitute.

The senator also replied to republican criticism of the administration's shipping bill which, he declared would have given the United States an adequate merchant marine by now had it not been killed at the last session of congress by a republican filibuster.

"For the first time in the history of our country," said Senator James, after reviewing briefly democratic legislation which he declared had made prosperity possible, "the United States leads the world in exports. We are more prosperous than ever, and mills which have not turned a spindle for years are now busy. All the laborers of the United States are employed as never before. With the world-war raging, our country is the only neutral one that is not in distress and the only that has not declared a moratorium. Every demand of the stress of war, the democratic party has met quickly. We have freed business from the blackmail of the politician as we have emancipated it from the clutch of monopoly."

The senator likened President Wilson's Mexican policy to that of Lincoln, and quoted from a declaration of the latter to show that he had declined to intervene when conditions were much the same as now.

"It is a perfectly easy thing," he continued, "for the president of the United States to plunge his country into war if he is a politician before he is a patriot. He would seek his own reelection as he came upon horseback up the bloody highway of contending armies. Of course our army could invade Mexico and march in triumph to its capital, but after the war was over other armies would march—an army of widows and orphans, an army of cripples and men broken in health, an army of pensioners, and an army of tax collectors gathering up the earnings of the people to pay the great war debt."

The president had acted quickly, the senator said, when there was an invasion of American territory, and the punishment expected now was doing all that this country could do with honor in Mexico.

"No president during the life of this republic," said the senator, "has ever had to deal with so many delicate and dangerous problems as those which have confronted President Wilson. With more than half of the world in arms, Europe, with Mexico in revolution at our border, these difficult and complicated problems have confronted him almost daily, and he has handled them as becomes a patriot and a statesman. When the Lusitania was sunk the militant voice of Theodore Roosevelt cried out for war, and if he had been president of the United States at that time, today 500,000 brave American sons would be contending around the forts of Verdun in this mighty maelstrom of blood—thousands would have been buried in ditches. Our president, patient, patriotic, far-sighted, the real statesman, handled this question with the greatest ability, and won for America its greatest diplomatic victory. "There are happily two kinds of courage, the courage of the man who is willing to undertake the dangers himself and the courage of the man that sends others to the conflict. Woodrow Wilson has both kinds of courage—the courage of conflict and the courage to act coolly and sensibly when he is dealing with the lives of others—the fate of a nation."

"Four years ago they sneeringly called Woodrow Wilson the school teacher. Today he is the world teacher. His subject is the protection of American life and American rights under international law. And without orphaning a single American child, without wounding a single American mother, without firing a single gun, he wrung from the most militant spirit that ever brooded over a battlefield, an acknowledgment of American rights and an agreement to American demands. He has elevated himself to that lofty, but lowly eminence, occupied by George Washington, Abraham Lincoln and Woodrow Wilson, the three worst abused and best loved Americans the republic ever grew."

MOVE TO MAKE CHANGE

Many Want Nominations to Take Place Tonight—Others Favor Original Plan

ST. LOUIS, June 15.—Still fired with the enthusiasm stirred up yesterday by the keynote speech of former Governor Glynn of New York on Americanism, preparedness, peace and prosperity, delegates today crowded into the Coliseum where the democratic national convention is being held, to hear more party doctrine expounded by leaders of the democracy.

While the sub-committee of the resolutions committee was engaged in its work of platform building, the organization called for the permanent organization of the convention, another keynote speech by the permanent chairman, and the delivery of addresses by well known party leaders. The day's plans provided for the opening of the convention at 11 o'clock by Temporary Chairman Glynn, with a prayer by the Right Rev. John J. Glennon, archbishop of St. Louis. The report of the committee on credentials was expected to take up but a few minutes.

James Chairman

The committee on permanent organization recommended Senator Ollie James of Kentucky for permanent chairman, who was prepared to deliver an address that was looked forward to with much interest.

The committee on rules and order of business had recommended no serious changes in the rules of the governing former democratic national conventions. The rules of the house of representatives are to be adopted. President Wilson will be nominated by acclamation and Vice President Marshall, leaders say, will have more than two-thirds of the 1926 votes in the convention for renomination.

Nomination Friday Night

No change is expected in the program to nominate President Wilson late Friday night, though William A. Glassow, Jr., the Pennsylvania member of the rules committee, may offer a resolution in the convention providing that nominations be made the order of business at 8 o'clock tonight, it was said. The resolutions committee, however, has pointed out that the platform will not be ready for the consideration of the convention until probably Friday morning.

Bryan Going on Stump

Managers of the convention said considerable time probably would be given over to a declaration of war and party orators. That William J. Bryan, who is attending the convention as a newspaper correspondent, will be called upon for a speech, no one doubts. Mr. Bryan, it is known, would respond and make a speech of support for the president before he is a partisan. He would seek his own reelection as he came upon horseback up the bloody highway of contending armies. Of course our army could invade Mexico and march in triumph to its capital, but after the war was over other armies would march—an army of widows and orphans, an army of cripples and men broken in health, an army of pensioners, and an army of tax collectors gathering up the earnings of the people to pay the great war debt."

The president had acted quickly, the senator said, when there was an invasion of American territory, and the punishment expected now was doing all that this country could do with honor in Mexico.

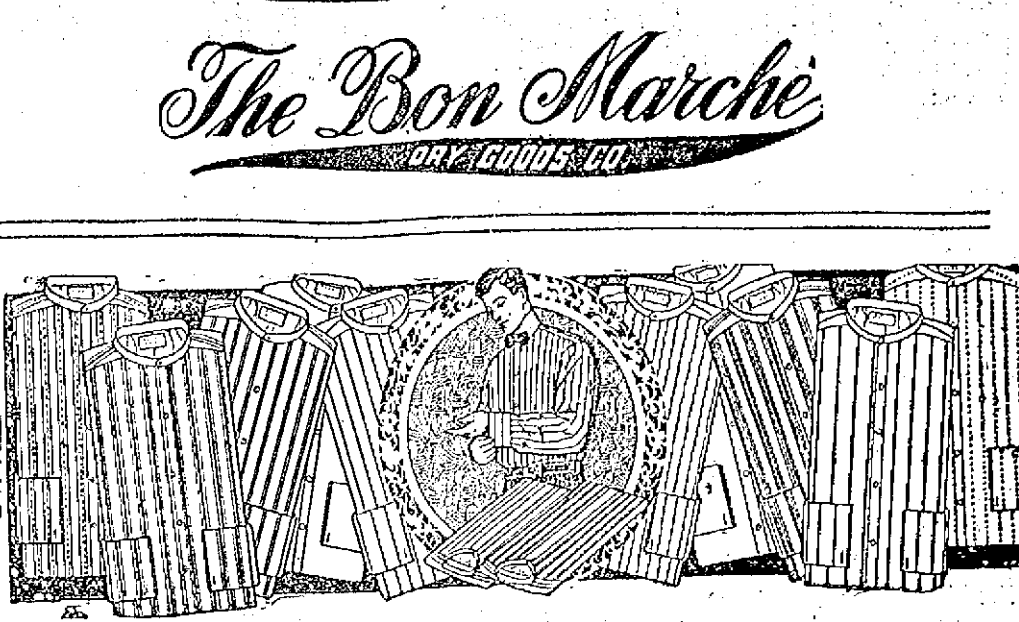

Committee On Resolutions

The sub-committee on resolutions met today and planned to sit until its work was ready for the full committee, which will meet at 3 o'clock this afternoon to receive the report. The sub-committee is composed of Senator Stone of Missouri, chairman; Representative Rainey, Illinois; Senator Walsh, Montana; Senator Hollis, New Hampshire; Representative Fitzgerald, New York; Senator Pomerenne, Ohio; Former Representative A. Mitchell Palmer, Pennsylvania; Senator Martin, Virginia and Gov. Stanley, Kentucky. When the members began work today they had a fair idea what the platform should contain. A declaration on Americanism appeared to be of paramount interest among the delegates and the president's flag day speech at Washington yesterday received some attention. It was said that President Wilson's idea of what the plank on Americanism should be was telegraphed here last night. It virtually charged conspiracy on the part of some foreign-born citizens to influence foreign and domestic affairs and condemned organizations that sought to propagate such alleged conspiracy, it was said. It is understood that President Wilson has not suggested in any definite language approval of his action in maintaining peace.

Planks prepared by the president have been turned over to the sub-committee by Secretary of War Baker. It is learned there will be no specific mention of Mexico in the declaration of principles but that the question will be covered in a general way in the plank dealing with foreign affairs. This plank will declare that every nation has a right to regulate its own internal affairs.

Protection For Americans

Adequate protection for Americans at home and abroad will be among the pronouncements and a permanent peace tribunal will be favored. There will be a preparedness plank and an unequivocal expression against war for aggrandizement. If there is any friction in the resolutions committee it will come over the equal suffrage question. There are some committeemen who are opposed to any reference to the equal rights question; some want a declaration along the lines of the plank in-

FIGHT FOR SUFFRAGE

Suffragists Regard Committee Appointment as None Too Favorable to Their Cause

ST. LOUIS, Mo., June 15.—Suffragists fighting for an equal rights plank in the democratic national platform today regarded the resolutions sub-committee appointed last night as none too favorable to their cause. Only three of its members, Representative Rainey of Illinois, Senator Walsh of Montana, and Senator Hollis of New Hampshire, are outspoken for suffrage, it was declared.

The sub-committee was declared by democratic leaders to be inclined enough toward suffrage to give it only about the same measure of inforcement as is contained in the republican platform. Such a declaration would be entirely satisfactory to the National American Woman Suffrage association, but unsatisfactory to the women's party. Hence, the latter organization today expects every influence to convince members of the sub-committee that democratic success next fall in the 12 states in which women are enfranchised depended largely on the democrats going further in their platform than the republicans have gone.

PLANK ON AMERICANISM

President Wilson Condemns Citizens of Foreign Birth for Political Activity in Behalf of Native Land

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Out of the flood of messages reaching the White House today from the democratic national convention at St. Louis, those of special interest to President Wilson told of the reception of his proposed plank concerning citizens of foreign birth for political activity in behalf of their native land.

The president yesterday sent to convention leaders a request that the plank on Americanism include an unequivocal challenge to so-called "hyphenates," who seek to embarrass the national government in its dealings with foreign nations. He came out strongly for such an attitude in his flag day address yesterday, when he charged that a small group of foreign-born citizens are seeking to levy political blackmail to accomplish their purpose.

The president's wish is to pledge the democratic party against any change in policy on account of activity of these propagandists and thus virtually challenge the republican nominee to take a similar stand.

TO SUCCEED MCCORMICK

Vance McCormick of Pennsylvania Selected by President Wilson—Administration Leaders Notified

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Vance McCormick of Pennsylvania has been selected by President Wilson as chairman of the democratic national committee. Administration leaders in St. Louis were notified today by the president.

It is believed here that Mr. McCormick will be able to solidify the party and harmonize different elements. The president looks upon him as progressive and thoroughly in harmony with his ideas of how the coming campaign should be run.

The democratic national committee elects its chairman, but there is no doubt that the president's choice will be formally ratified.

McCormick, who is a native of Harrisburg and 44 years old, owns the Harrisburg Patriot and has been identified with democratic policies since his youth. He was mayor from 1902 to 1905 and this year was the party's candidate for governor.

At very little cost any woman can rid her face of hairy growths if she will use the delatone treatment. This is made by mixing some water with a little powdered delatone. No harm results from this treatment, but care should be used to buy real delatone.

PRES. WILSON'S WARNING

Defies Disloyal Foes—Charges Germans With Political Blackmail in Election

WASHINGTON, June 15.—A charge that foreign-born citizens of the United States are trying to levy political blackmail and to undermine the influence of the national government was made by President Wilson in a flag speech here yesterday.

His assertion sounded the keynote of one of the foremost issues on which he will go before the country for re-election, and touched upon a platform declaration which will be submitted by the administration to the St. Louis convention.

The president spoke before a crowd of thousands gathered at the foot of the Washington monument after he had reviewed for five hours a great preparedness parade, at the head of which he himself had marched down Pennsylvania avenue. He declared that not since the Civil war had it been tested as it now is being tested, whether the Stars and Stripes stood for any one, united purpose.

Loyalty to Flag First Test

"There is disloyalty active in the United States and it must be absolutely crushed," declared the president, speaking emphatically. "It proceeds from a minority, a very small minority, but a very active and subtle minority."

"It works underground, but it also shows its ugly head where we can see it; and there are those at this moment who are trying to levy a species of blackmail, saying, 'Do what we wish in the interest of foreign sentiment or we will wreak our vengeance at the polls.'"

"That is the sort of thing against which the American nation will turn with a might and triumph of sentiment which will teach these gentlemen once for all that loyalty to this flag is the first test of tolerance in the United States."

The president's words were taken as an open challenge to foreign-born Americans who, he had learned from foreign language newspapers and other sources, are opposing him for re-election.

Flag Raised on Monument

While the democratic convention was being opened at St. Louis Mr. Wilson devoted the entire day to the flag day and preparedness demonstration. Carrying a large American flag, he walked from the capitol to the White House at the head of more than 50,000 marchers, including many high government officials, government employees, employees of the capital's business houses, companies of cadets, National Guardsmen, Union and Confederate veterans, and members of commercial and social organizations.

The parade started from the capitol grounds. At the White House, the president took his place in the reviewing stand and was joined there by Secretaries McAdoo, Redfield, Lane and Wilson, Postmaster General Burleson, Atty Gen. Gregory and Sec. Lansing.

Before he began speaking cannon fired a national salute of 21 guns and the Marine band played the "Star Spangled Banner" while a huge flag was drawn slowly to the top of the white monument, 550 feet above the ground. Sec. Lansing presided, and in introducing the president emphasized the duty of present-day Americans to preserve unimpaired ideals handed down by the founders of the republic.

Sentiment That Needs Action

Mr. Wilson first referred to the "very moving spectacle of the morning—an almost unpremeditated outpouring of thousands of sober citizens to manifest their interest in the safety of the country and the sacredness of the flag."

"I need not remind you," he said, "how much sentiment has been poured out in honor of the flag of the United States. Sentiment is a propulsive power, but it does not propel in the way that is serviceable to the nation, unless it has a definite purpose before it. This is not merely a day of sentiment. It is a day of purpose."

Interpret your thoughts, merely trying to put into inadequate words the purpose that is in your hearts. I regard this day as a day of reeducation to all the ideals of the United States.

Shows Feeling of the Nation

"I took the liberty a few weeks ago to ask our fellow-citizens all over the United States to gather together in celebration of this day, the anniversary of the adoption of our present flag as the emblem of the nation."

"I had no legal right to declare it a holiday, I had no legal right to ask for the cessation of business; but when you read the papers tomorrow morning I think you will see that authority was not necessary; that the people of the country were waiting for an opportunity to cease their ordinary business and gather together in united demonstration of their feelings as a nation."

"It was a very happy thought that the committee of gentlemen who had charge of the demonstration of the forenoon to choose the 14th of June for the parade which most of us have witnessed. It is a tiresome thing, my fellow-citizens, to stand for hours and see a parade go by, but I want to take you into this secret: It was not half as tiresome as the inauguration parade."

Violence Honor of United States

"The inauguration parade is a very interesting thing, but it is painfully interesting to the man who is being inaugurated because there he ahead of him the hues of responsibilities whose horoscope cannot be cast by any man. But today was interesting because the inauguration parade of the day of my inauguration is more than three years gone by. I have gone through deep waters with you in the meantime."

"This parade was not a demonstration in honor of any man. It was an outpouring of people to demonstrate a great national sentiment. I was not the object of it, I was one citizen among millions whose heart beat in unison with it."

"I felt caught up and buoyed up along the great stream of human purpose which seemed to flow there in front of me by the stand by the White House, and I shall go away from this meeting as I came away from that parade, with all the deepest purposes of my heart renewed; and as I see the winds lovingly unfold the beautiful lines of our great flag, I shall seem to see a hand pointing the way of duty, no matter how hard, no matter how long, which we shall tread while we vindicate the glory and honor of the United States."

WOMAN KNIFES THREE

VICIOUS ATTACK MADE IN BOSTON STORE—PROPRIETOR, WIFE AND SON ARE VICTIMS

BOSTON, June 15.—An unknown woman stabbed three persons in the dry goods store at 384 Hanover street last evening, and made her escape, leaving no trace of her identity. Her victims were taken to the Relief hospital, suffering from painful though not serious wounds. Up to a late hour the police had not been able to locate the assailant.

The victims were Samuel Slavin, 46, his wife, Mary, 42, and their son Benjamin, 21. The husband suffers from wounds of the cheeks and left chest; the wife from a wound in the left breast, and the son from a wound in the chest.

The woman entered the store conducted by the Slavins just before 8 last evening, and Mrs. Slavin waited on her.

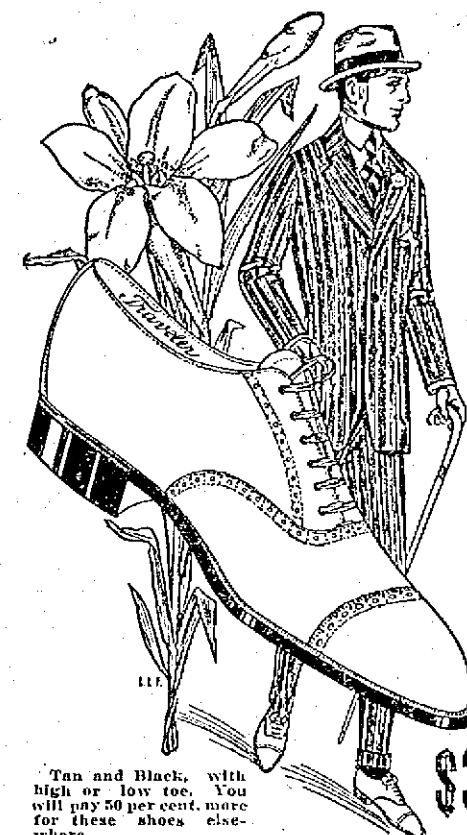

A dispute arose, and the woman suddenly drew a knife and stabbed Mrs. Slavin. The O'Sullivan woman and her husband ran to her assistance. The woman at once turned on him, and stabbed him twice. Then the son attempted to aid his parents, only to be met by the ever-ready assailant.

The woman then rushed from the store, hiding her knife in the folds of her skirt as she ran.

BROADWAY CLUB

The Broadway Social & Athletic association held open house at its rooms after the parade. Exercises appropriate to the day were carried out. President T. F. O'Sullivan complimented the members upon their large numbers in the parade and the fine appearance they made. Messrs. Kane & Rourke, old time vaudeville artists, entertained the members during the evening. Refreshments were served and the occasion ended with a song with all standing and singing "America" and waving Old Glory.

THE SPELLBINDER

Mayor O'Donnell demonstrated his ability to put through successfully a big project on short notice, in planning and carrying out the Preparedness parade of last evening, within two weeks' time. His chief aide in the undertaking was "General Cooperation," for everybody took a hand, and considering the fact that it was the biggest thing in the parade line that Lowell has ever witnessed, the parade was comparatively little of a disappointing nature and less dissatisfaction over the affair.

Of course there were some who didn't like the places in line assigned them, but Solomon himself, couldn't have pleased everybody under similar circumstances. The idea of the committee in arranging the roster was to divide up the music evenly so that all would have an opportunity to march within a reasonable distance of a band or drum corps. This was done because many of the organizations couldn't afford to engage a band or drum corps, and in order to insure good marching all organizations had to march to music.

That was one reason why the roster was made out as it was. Another reason was certain obligations of the committee to the industrial plants in the city. The Elks, all over the country observe Flag day; it is a matter of ritual. The Elks, therefore were obliged to hold exercises on that day, and on no other. They agreed to postpone their exercises until after the parade and only asked in return that they be assigned a position as near the front of the line as possible, in order that they might get back to their hall before the night had gone. The Welfare association of the United States Cartridge Co. conspired for a grand ball, and had sold 3000 tickets. The plant shut down for the evening to accommodate its employees and all arrangements had been made before the Preparedness parade idea was broached. Hence the Cartridge shop people were unable to get back to their hall, and desirous of parading requested that they be given a position in the front part of the parade in order that they might get back to the Casino in time. But as a general rule everybody was satisfied with the position assigned them. During the parade the committee learned that the post office employees lead the parade by reason of the fact that they were federal employees. But he did not represent the employees, who were satisfied with a position that would permit their brethren from Boston to get back to the depot in time for the last train.

The Middlesex street business men wanted the parade to pass along the white way of that section but the committee found it impossible to grant their request on account of the length of the parade; the fact that there were hundreds of women and young people in line, making a short route necessary and because of the grade crossing there. It was suggested that the parade could be formed on the South common and proceed down Thorndike street to Middlesex street, but again the length of parade put this suggestion out of commission for in order to form properly it was necessary to have a number of side and intersecting streets for the different divisions to occupy in lining up, and Davis square at the junction of Gorham, Central and Thorndike streets furnished an ideal forming point for so large a lineup.

A parade of the magnitude of last night's affair made up for a large part of undisciplined organizations has never been attempted before in this city, and surely its promoters deserve great credit.

The Bridge Contract

The contract for the new Pawtucket bridge has been given out and that means that the bridge will be a reality at last. After a lengthy discussion yesterday afternoon the municipal council formally voted the contract to the National Engineering company, and no further time will be lost in beginning the work which has been under discussion for over a year. This year's government found itself up against a succession of obstacles, and obstructions but finally overcame all of them and to the probable disappointment of some who desired to see the government fall down on the proposition as its predecessors did, is ready to proceed with the work.

Of course the public is naturally interested in the identity of the contractors who are to do the work. Among contractors and building interests they are already favorably known by their work in this city. The National Engineering company was organized in Lowell, in the latter part of 1915 to absorb the contracting business of F. G. Barrows & Company. The officers of the company are all well known in the contracting field. Mr. Barrows, the vice-president and general manager, is a Harvard graduate, class of 1906; formerly associated with the Hennebique Construction company, of New York and Paris. Mr. Page, the general superintendent, was formerly superintendent of construction for the Swift interests in Chicago. Mr. McGahay, the secretary was formerly active in the dredging business in Boston and Portland, and Captain Dor, who is the president of the company represents the local interests.

In Lowell, last year this company did nearly $1,000,000 worth of work for the U. S. Cartridge Co.; the R. B. Phillips Co., the Newton Mfg. Co., and the American Hide and Leather company besides other industrial plants in Worcester, Portsmouth and Boston. The remarkable speed record made by them on the South Lowell plant of the U. S. Cartridge Co. is still a topic of discussion among builders, and at the same time the company is reported to have put up a five story concrete building in Boston for the American Steam Gauge and Valve company in 40 days. While with the Hennebique company Mr. Barrows and some of his associates had a wide experience in bridge building in many important structures both in the United States and in France. Mr. Van Dearth, formerly chief engineer of the Hennebique company is chief engineer of the N.E.C., and with Mr. Ramsey, local superintendent of construction of the company is already well known in local circles.

Mayor O'Donnell put up a hard and persistent fight to get the bridge started this year, as he had promised to do before election. Last year's government after discussing the project for a whole year, left the matter in a state of chaos for its successors and only by continuous and persistent effort has the municipal council finally disposed of the multitudinous preliminaries without which no bridge could ever be built.

Demand for More Policemen

The demand for additional policemen becomes greater each day. Since the warm weather came the Sunday auto traffic is becoming tremendous and traffic officers are needed at least at Central and Merrimack streets and in Merrimack square on Sundays. There are also demands for traffic officers at Moody and Aiken streets and at Pawtucket square, and at the present time there is an open traffic post. Then there are demands for police on the parks and commons during the summer months. The introduction of the deer family at Fort Hill park has been followed by a great increase in the number of visitors to the park and those who have gone there to see the deer have become so favorably impressed with the beauty of the park that they have returned and brought others and now the largest crowds that have ever been known to visit Fort Hill are gathering there daily. It would seem that after many years Lowell's most picturesque breathing spot, is at last appreciated by the public. On account of the restrictions on the old Fair Grounds, the circus and Wild West show cannot hire that land this year, and hence when the advance men came here to look for locations, one of them sought out Shedd park, and going to the summit of Fort Hill surveyed the area beneath him, with a view to locating there, which of course he subsequently found was out of the question. Speaking of his visit to Fort Hill to Secretary John H. Murphy, of the board of trade, the circus man said: "I have visited all of the parks of the principal cities of the United States but I want to say for your Fort Hill park, that for a park of its size this country does not contain a finer park, for natural beauty and picturesque layout. I should think it would be crowded with people all the time."

With a view to providing a few extra officers without necessitating the raising of more money this year, Mayor O'Donnell has asked the superintendent of police to make an analysis of his appropriation, together with an estimate of his departmental expenses for the remainder of the year to ascertain if there will be a sufficient amount of money left in the appropriation to permit of the employment of a few more men, for the summer months. During the first half of the year the expenses of the police department have been kept down to a minimum, and for that reason the mayor is of the opinion that it may be possible to put on a few men, as they are badly needed. Lowell has one of the smallest police forces per population of any city in the country.

WORCESTER, June 15.—Senator Robert M. Washburn of the first Worcester district, who was obliged to give up his duties at the state house early in the recent session of the general court and go to Baltimore for a rest in an attempt to recover his health, announced yesterday his retirement from politics, temporarily at least. He will not be a candidate for re-election to the senate next fall.

ton parade was 42,000 and it was, in reality, a state affair, so that Lowell's showing last night, considering size and all else, was away ahead of Boston. Asked what he thought of the parade, Justice Carroll said: "It was the finest parade I have ever seen outside of New York."

Parade Started on Time

It was 7:45 o'clock, and not a minute later, when Chief Marshal John Jacob Rogers gave the order to march, and the staff moved forward, followed closely by the military division. Thirty-five minutes later, two mounted policemen, advance agents for the parade, passed the reviewing stand. Stiles' Military band of Lynn appeared next, playing Reeves' "Second Connecticut" march, and this was the march played by most of the bands as they passed the reviewing stand.

CONGRESSMAN JOHN JACOB ROGERS,

Congressman John Jacob Rogers, Thomas J. O'Donnell, chief of staff, and 36 aides next drove into view. In the front rank were three young women riding line horses. The young women wore the western cowgirl costume. They were Misses Margie Arnold, Florence Foster and Mabel Quinn. The other aides were:

Maj. Charles Stevens, M.V.M., John McDonough, John P. Quinn, Frank Destler, Patrick Cogger, Herbert Horne, Perry Thompson, Patrick Ryan, Henry Reynolds, Frank Ricard, Jeremiah Ryan, Herbert Simmons, John T. Sparks, Abel R. Campbell, Peter Flood, L. V. Fairbanks, Daniel J. O'Brien, James H. Sharkey, Michael Cahill, Martin Galvin, Sig. Rostler, David Ziskind, Daniel Martin, Frank Goldman, Daniel Redding, Dr. Joseph McMan, Florence Foster, Harry Thomp-

Decorations

The decorations throughout the city were profuse and beautiful, and some of the big stores had elaborate displays. Although bunting and flags were artistically arranged on different buildings throughout the city, inasmuch as yesterday was Flag day, the decorations on The Sun building, which consisted entirely of flags, was in keeping with the day. Flags were displayed from every window on the front of the building, while from the parapet on the roof there was a line of flags. There were 115 flags in all, not including the large American flag which floated from the top of the flagpole 150 feet above the street, and the American flag which hung over the entrance to the building. During the day the flags, wafted by a gentle breeze, floated to and fro, and when the wind died down in the evening they hung straight downward making a very pretty as well as patriotic decoration.

FIRST DIVISION

The first division, which might be termed the military division, presented an imposing sight. It being composed of the four local companies of the 6th regiment, M.V.M., the Lowell section of battery C, Field Artillery, the three Irish semi-military organizations, six companies of the Angel Guardian cadets, several other guards, the business men's battalion, Spanish War veterans, a detachment of former soldiers and sailors, Sons of veterans, high school regiment, Boys' brigade, Boy Scouts, the O.M.I. cadets, and clerks and carriers of the local post office.

The militia companies appeared to advantage and the entire line of this division presented a sight that will long be remembered. It impressed those who witnessed the parade, especially from a standpoint of "preparedness." It was also one of the longest divisions, as it took about half an hour to pass a given point at a good marching pace.

Chief Marshal Pearson

The division was headed by Gen. Gardner W. Pearson, as chief marshal, together with the members of his mounted staff which consisted of Lieut. W. C. MacBrayne of the governor's staff, chief aide; Capt. Lewis G. Hutton, Sixth regiment; Capt. Harold G. Peiken, Eighth regiment; Capt. Charles A. Harlett, formerly of the Eighth regiment; Capt. Mason D. Bryant, Sixth regiment medical corps; Sergt. Harry G. Roberts and a detachment of Sixth regiment scouts.

Then came the Sixth Regiment band led by Sergt. Major George D. Crowell, who acted as drum major and under the direction of Chief Musician Z. I. Bissonnette. The selections played along the line of march were greatly enjoyed by everyone. It was inspiring to say the least and sent a thrill of patriotism to the hearts of the people.

National Guard Companies

Next in order came the four companies of the National Guard headed by Major Colby T. Kittredge of the second battalion of the Sixth regiment with Lieut. Harry G. Sheldon, battalion adjutant as his aid. The members of the companies with one exception wore the olive drab uniforms. The excep-mary organizations, namely: The Wolfe Tone Guards, Sheridan Guards and Meagher Guards. Capt. Francis J. Kierce and Lieut. Michael Monahan and Thomas Kenney were at the head of the Wolfe Tone Guards. There were forty men in line, all attired in blue full dress uniforms.

The Sheridan Guards, headed by Capt. C. H. Daley and Lieut. James O'Gara and Michael McDermott wore blue uniforms.

The Meagher Guards, forty strong, wearing the regulation blue, were headed by Capt. Jeremiah Leary and trousers. Garde Sacre Coeur presented a neat sight with their blue uniforms with white braid and white stripes, each member carrying a sword. The members of the Garde St. Louis wore neat uniforms of blue and carried guns.

The officers of the A. G. cadets were as follows: Major Alcide Bellefeuille, Co. A, Capt. Charles Rondeau, Lieut. Joseph Barilbault and Armand Belanger; Co. B, Capt. Rodolphe Rondeau, Lieut. Arthur Lemay and Bernard Bernier; Co. C, Capt. Albert Corcoran, Lieut. Leo Mongeau; Co. D, Capt. Ar-

best organizations of its kind in this part of the country, commanded by Jean Missud, headed the Business Men's battalion. This battalion, which was only recently organized, presented a beautiful sight and they were cheered all along the route of parade. There were four companies in the battalion, and a total of 280 men were in line. Despite the fact that the members had but four or five practice drills they kept an excellent line and every man was in step.

The battalion was led by Col. Butler Ames, A. D. Milliken and Collins Van-

attention in the Fourth of July parade in this city last year.

Army and Navy

Next in order came a detachment of former regular soldiers and sailors with Yeoman H. E. Tucker of the United States naval recruiting station at its head. There were 26 men in line and Yeoman Tucker was assisted in commanding by former Sergt. J. A. Brown of the hospital corps.

Sons of Veterans

The Sons of Veterans to the number of fifty and headed by Commander L. P. Munro, followed. The members were attired in camp uniforms of blue and wore white gloves. Assisting in the command were Fred Fletcher and Charles H. Foote.

High School Regiment

The High School regiment, composed of 12 companies, made an excellent appearance. It was headed by the High School Five and Drum corps. The young soldiers were in command of Col. Herbert T. Kerrigan, with a staff comprising Lieut. Col. Raymond P. Bourgeois, Regt. Adjt. R. B. Nichols, Regt. Quartermaster William Barlosky and Capt. C. H. O'Donnell and Lieut. R. E. Cardell as regimental orderlies.

Boys' Brigade

Next in order came the Boys' Brigade of the First Trinitarian church, led by Commander George F. Lockhart and the chaplain, Rev. Raymond C. Clapp. Following the brigade were eight members of the Nashua, N. H., Boys' Brigade headed by Capt. Harry S. Cutter.

Boy Scouts

Another feature of this division was the 25 troops of the Boy Scouts. The regulation scout uniforms were worn and almost every boy carried an American flag. The scouts were led by Scout Commissioner Luther W. Faulkner and Scout Executives Alex Williams and James Kiberd. They made an excellent showing in numbers, marching and general appearance.

O.M.I. Cadets

The O.M.I. Cadets, who were next in line, presented a splendid alignment. Their marching, from the largest boy to the smallest, was truly marvelous. Owing to some misunderstanding the Cadets were without their corps. It having previously been engaged by the United States Cartridge Co. Nevertheless, even without the band, the boys kept good step. Major William Conroy was in command. The boys were attired in their new uniforms, blue brass-bulleted coats, West Point style, and white duck pants. One of the features of this detachment was a number of boys dressed all in white, carrying large American flags held by the edges.

Postoffice Employees

One of the big features of this division was that of the employees of the local postoffice, headed by the Letter Carriers' band of Boston. The men marched excellently and maintained a good line.

The postoffice men were headed by Postmaster Edwards Cheney, owing to the absence of Postmaster Meehan in St. Louis. On Mr. Cheney's staff were Lieut. George S. Howard, as adjutant; Supt. of Mails Edwin H. Cooke and Supt. of Delivery Albion S. Ashworth. The letter carriers wore their regulation uniform, with red carnations in their buttonholes and each carried a along the line hats went off and cheer after cheer went up. Yet there was nothing of show or of ostentation in their manner. They marched like drilled ranks and their marshals and aides had the various divisions in perfect control. After the sober uniforms of the soldiers in the first division, the dresses of the women gave refreshing variety, but what was admired most was their spirit and their splendid discipline. There was also a wonderful lesson of democracy in the spectacle. Daughter of veteran, nurse, college graduate, mill girl, society leader and office girl marched along under the Stars and Stripes in one grand American sisterhood. No mention of the parade can be made for years to come that will not recall the splendid showing of the women of Lowell, and those who made the showing possible are entitled to a hearty share of credit.

D.A.R. Lead

The Lowell Military band was followed by one of the most inspiring divisions in the parade, the Daughters of the American Revolution, Molly Varum, Lydia Darrah and Old Bay State chapters. Marching in true soldier fashion, dressed in white with sashes of red, white and blue and headed by a captain with the motto "D.A.R.—for Home and Country," borne by Mrs. Joseph Barber, they made a splendid showing. Commanding the three chapters were Mrs. Burton H. Wiggin, major, Mrs. Charles E. Howe, color bearer, and escorts, Mrs. Charles K. Miller and Mrs. Robert Pitton. In command of the various companies were Mrs. A. W. Thompson, Miss Belle Horner, Mrs.

Company K of the Sixth regiment was commanded by Capt. James N. Greig; Company G, Sixth, by Capt. Walter R. Joyce; Company C, Sixth, by Capt. George W. Patterson and company M of the Ninth regiment, was led by Lieut. Daniel M. Christian.

Next in order came the Lowell section of battery C, Field Artillery, whose headquarters are at Methuen, Mass. There were 25 men in this feature. They were attired in olive drab uniforms and were commanded by Lieut. Sumner H. Needham, Sergt. Edward Watts and Corp. George Emley.

Irish Semi-Military Companies

Then came the three Irish semi-mil-

Angel Guardian Cadets

Then came the Angel Guardian cadets led by the Angel Guardian band of 22 pieces. Arthur Gmel was the director of the band. There were six companies of the A. G. cadets and four companies of French-American military organizations.

The cadets were commanded by Major Alcide Bellefeuille. There were about 25 men in each company, their uniforms being blue with gold trimmings. They also wore white gloves.

The members of Garde Frontenac wore blue uniforms trimmed with yellow braid while the members of the Garde d'Honneur were attired in grey

Spanish War Veterans

Then came the United Spanish War Veterans, led by Commander Alexander D. Mitchell. A feature of this contingent was a large American flag, 36 by 26 feet which was carried by a number of the veterans, it being the same flag that attracted so much flag. The clerks were dressed in dark colored suits and wore white ties and white gloves and carried flags.

SECOND DIVISION

The enthusiasm created by the marching part of the First Division was as nothing compared to that aroused by the Second Division. This was due in greatest part to the presence of the women in the parade. Two by two, four by four, in tens, in scores, in hundreds they marched along in splendid order, earnestly and seriously showing their interest in the patriotic call. The women in the parade were nothing short of magnificent, and as they swung into sight all

John K. Whittier, Miss Leslie, Pullen and Mrs. Charles C. Barron. The dress of the woman in this division was simple but effectively uniform.

Mrs. Wiggin, Mrs. Dudley L. Page and Mrs. Charles K. Miller were the chapter regents.

From Tewksbury

The state hospital at Tewksbury made an impressive showing with a dozen doctors, about 100 nurses and many other employees of the institution. The nurses were dressed in their attractive uniforms and caps with immaculate aprons, and the physicians were in sanitary white gowns. All carried American flags. The delegation was in charge of Dr. G. A.

"THE STORE OF QUALITY"

Continued

Pierce and Dr. John H. Nichols and the nurses were in charge of their sub-section, Miss Laura McEachern. The public cheered lustily as this splendid group swept by.

City Districts

Then followed groups of ladies from Belvidere, Centralville and Pawtucketville in orderly array. An especially effective showing, was made by the ladies of Belvidere, one group of whom wore silk sweaters of every conceivable shade. Contrasted with the severe uniforms and dresses of most of the marchers this group looked like an animated bouquet of summer flowers, especially as tiny flags fluttered over each shoulder. The ladies in charge of the various divisions in this section were "on to their job" and lookers on at the square remarked how they marked time while waiting for instructions.

Singing of "America"

When the ladies from the various city sections reached the square, the order was given to halt and the first section bands struck up "America." The crowd all along the line of march took up the refrain, the high rich voices of the women blending with the strong voices of the men as the solemn anthem rose from the first division to the last. Stirred by patriotic emotion, the men on the sidewalks took off their hats and all joined in the singing.

College Club

Impressive in a different sort of way was the college club, under the general direction of Mrs. R. F. Marden and Mrs. Alvah Burgess, who had charge of the "suburban section." The serious marching women kept splendid order and their caps and gowns gave them unique distinction. No group in the parade was more impressive. About 40 were in line under the direction of Miss Mary Kilpatrick. To this section Tewksbury contributed a score of marchers in charge of Rev. Sarah Dixon and the Mystery club of Billerica contributed 30 or so in charge of Miss Elizabeth Walker.

Daughters of Liberty

Lady Franklin council, Daughters of Liberty, made a fine showing with their float, the first in the parade. It represented the famous story of Molly Pitcher, the gallant, and it took 25 women and 10 men to present the tableau. Many members of the council marched and carried flags. Leading the Daughters of Liberty were State Councilor Mrs. Ethel Whitney and Mrs. Caroline Crawford. Then came the Daughters of Veterans and the Lothrop Camp, Campfire Girls of America from North Chelmsford, their Indian costumes making a charming picture.

Business Women

Serious, alert and splendidly disciplined marched the business women, led by Miss Martha H. Worcester, Miss Ella M. Wells, Miss Nora Donohoe and Miss Florence Hartshorn. First came the stenographers, fifty or so, in charge of Miss Alice Cox, assisted by Miss Irene Cote. All the girls in this section were in white and carried flags. A large flag six feet by ten was borne. The milliners made an exceptionally fine showing, headed by the stately Miss Ella M. Burke, with Miss Mary Louise Delude as captain. Nurses from the Lowell hospitals made a splendid showing.

each group in its distinctive uniform. Mrs. E. D. Holden and Mrs. A. J. Murkland were the captains.

Industrial Section

No section of the parade appealed more strongly to those looking on than the industrial section in which marched so many groups of enthusiastic working girls. Practically all of the mills were represented, and as they marched, headed by the municipal band of Lynn, they were cheered to the echo. Mrs. H. B. Pickering, Mrs. William B. Mitchell, Mrs. George E. Garvity and Mrs. Thomas B. Doe were in charge of this division and they had every reason to feel proud of it. The Tremont and Suffolk and the U. S. Worsted company had large representations. Among the women turned small from the Massachusetts cotton mills of whom over 100 were Polish women, who have been drilling for a week or more. Dora Ciesla was marshal of the Polish group, assisted by Victoria Welch and Florence Ozlok. The Shaw Stocking company made a good showing with a delegation of 200, and then followed groups of employees from the Lawrence Manufacturing Co., Scripture's laundry, Barber Mfg. Co., Ideal Comb Co., Merrimack Mfg. Co., Federal Shoe Co., and George H. Snow Co.

THIRD DIVISION

The most effective note of preparedness was sounded in the third division, in which participated about 5,000 men and women, whose business it is to manufacture ammunition of war. According to many this division was one of the most important in the entire parade and it came in the nature of a surprise. The officials and employees of the United States Cartridge Co. spared no time, efforts or money to make their end of the parade one of the largest and most attractive and to their credit it may be said that they succeeded. The men and women devoted considerable time to drilling, the large garage of the company having been placed at their disposal and their training brought good results. Over 3,000 small American flags and 2,000 yards of red, white and blue bunting were used in the decorative features, the women wearing the bunting about their bodies, while each marcher carried the national colors. The appearance of this body of workers was very fine, while the marching was also good.

The U. S. Cartridge Co. employees were headed by Albert Lybrand, who

It may be stated in justice to the employees of the U. S. Cartridge Co. that they have delayed their own expenses in the parade, and that over $1000 had been raised by voluntary subscription through the shops.

Lowell Lodge of Elks
Following the cartridge makers came the members of the Lowell Lodge of Elks, headed by James E. Donnelly as marshal. The officers of the lodge at first in frock coats and wearing silk hats came first and they were followed by about 200 members of the organization, who wore straw hats and carried flags. This body of men made a fine appearance and their marching was attractive.

The Haverhill Military band supplied music for the Elks and the officers of the lodge were William Scott, Eugene V. Brown, E. W. Kilpatrick, Harry Pitts, Joseph Haggerty, C. F. Gilmore, C. J. Hagan, Charles H. Moore, W. T. Mahan, H. H. Bourke, W. D. Regan, F. A. Tilling and A. W. Churchill.

Knights of Pythias

A feature of the Knights of Pythias division, which was composed of four local lodges of the organization in one unit, was the carrying of a huge American flag by 30 members. This section was composed of about 200 men. The roster was as follows:

Daniel E. Starky, marshal
Charles B. Pettigrew, aide
Samuel H. Hines, lodge
Lowell lodge
Wameet lodge

Mathews

The members of the Mathew Temperance Institute turned out 150 strong, and they made a fine showing. The men wore white gloves and straw hats and carried flags. A feature of the marchers was the word "Preparedness" spelled on cards, one letter on the breast of each man in the first row. All members wore the society badges. Patrick J. Kane was marshal of this section.

Newton Mfg. Co.

The rear of this division was taken up by the employees of the Newton Mfg. Co., about 200 in number, headed by John G. Burrows as marshal. Charles Winkler impersonated "Uncle Sam." The lineup of the company was as follows:

John I. Burrows, marshal
Uncle Sam (Charles Winkler)
Private Police Force

Heads of Departments: Claude Bortman, Harry Copp, James Spray, William Vaughn, Alfred Hiesler, Arthur Dean.

FOURTH DIVISION

The fourth division was composed of employees of the Lowell Bleachery Co., the Saco-Lowell shops, Lowell acris of Eagles and Knights of Columbus and A.O.U. This division was headed by William F. Thornton as marshal and proved very interesting, especially the K. of C. and Eagles' sections. This division was featured with two floats, one by the Lowell Bleachery Co. and the other by the Saco-Lowell shops, two splendid pageants.

The front of the division was taken up by the employees of the Lowell Bleachery Co., who had a Liberty bell float emblematic of the spirit of 1776. It was made up of bunting appropriately arranged with miniature incense-burners of varied colors, Uncle Sam and Columbia.

Saco-Lowell

The employees of the Saco-Lowell shops came next with several hundred men in line. A miniature Zeppelin mounted on a truck, richly decorated with the national colors was the feature of this section. Howard Wood acted as marshal and his aide was William E. Eney. The division commanders were Stewart Shaw and Michael Monahan, while the captains were Harry Allen, William Kelly, Edward Hamden, Frank Osborne, John Ready, Eugene Page, Paul Fawcett, Patrick Monahan, Charles Smith and John Jennings.

The division commander for the K. of C. section of the Saco-Lowell was John Conley, while the captains were Shepard Harrall, William H. Cronin, William F. Savage and George W. Faneut.

Eagles

The Eagles were well represented in the fourth division, for over 700 members of the order turned out. A feature of this section was the front, which was taken up by 30 members, uniformed, of the organization, 10 policemen, 10 firemen and 10 street car conductors and motormen. Thomas H. Corcoran acted as marshal. The Lowell Cadet band headed the organization and following the street car men were the degree staff of the Eagles in uniforms. The members of the order followed, all wearing straw hats and carrying flags. This section made a very fine showing.

K. of C.

The rear of the fourth division, but not the least in appearance, was taken up by the members of the Knights of Columbus, headed by the Lawrence Brass band. Thomas B. Delaney was marshal and he was escorted by Jos. F. Roarke, grand knight and Dr. Hugh Walker, navigator.

The members of the fourth degree, attired in Prince Albert coats and wearing silk hats, baldric, grey gloves and ties and carrying swords appeared in the front of the line. They were followed by about 225 members of the society, all neatly dressed and presenting a fine appearance.

A.O.U.

A detachment of the local divisions of the Ancient Order of Hibernians formed a section of the fourth division.

The men carried small flags and they marched exceedingly well. They were headed by the Irish Volunteer Drum corps and their marshal was Daniel Cosgrove and other division officers.

FIFTH DIVISION

The industrial section of the city was well represented in the fifth division, which was marshalled by Frank Haggerty. First came Teel's band of Boston which played the strains of a march for the 200 or more employees of the Lowell Electric light corporation. Men from the offices and plant of the company joined together and displayed a knowledge of military marching.

Following the electrical employees marched a delegation from the Lowell board of trade, led by Secretary John Murphy. True the marchers represented but a small part of the board membership, but it was explained that the majority of the members are connected either with the industries of the city or the business men's battalion. The members in line marched with a military step, however, and some of them carried a huge American flag horizontally caught by the edges.

Featured by an electric auto truck showing the spirit of '76, the American Express Co. was very conspicuous. The employees of the company marched in line, each carrying an American flag.

For some reason there was a break in the parade at this point and the presence of children in the street led many to believe that the parade was once. Not so, however, for in a few minutes appeared a banner bearing the arrival of the New England Telephone & Telegraph Co. employees. In the telephone section was a large number of young women attired in white, operators and employees of the counting department. Besides two large handsome flags spread out and upheld by the girls, each person in the section carried a small American flag lighted by an incandescent bulb. The male employees of the company, more than a hundred strong, followed. They won applause along the lines and many hellos were launched at the girls.

The J. L. Chaffoux store employees contributed one of the most pleasing spectacles of the division, if not of the entire parade. Over 200, by actual count, marched under the banners of this store. The young women, who turned out in fully as large numbers as the men, wore white dresses and carried sweaters and the men were dressed in white duck trousers, dark coats and straw hats. Each person carried a small American flag with tiny red, white and blue lights which showed up with fine effect even at a distance. The Chaffoux department marched to music furnished by the Municipal band.

The Gilbride Company

The Gilbride employees, both men and women, came next. The young women were neatly attired in white and together with the men marched in the same precision that marked the other sections. They were led by Mr. John

A. G. Pollard Co.

Headed by a score of young men supporting a huge American flag, the A. G. Pollard Co.'s employees made an attractive appearance. There were in line nearly a hundred young women attired in white and a large body of men, all of whom marched well.

There were 250 employees of the company in line representing the various departments of this mammoth store. Each of the departments was well represented and certainly the proprietors of the store as well as the heads of the different departments had reason to feel proud of the splendid turnout.

Divers Features

Then followed employees of the Turner Centre creamery and a section of bakers, more bakers than one would think were needed to provide the city with its bread, all dressed in white suits and white caps. The Lowell Rotary club was in line after which appeared the Woburn Brass band leading the city departments. Commissioner of Fire and Water Sewell F. Putnam led the line. Chief Saunders and about 50 firemen followed. Then there were men from the water works, the street department, the sewer department and other departments of the city.

Saunders' Market
Saunders' market provided a pleasing feature. The young men and women employees of the store marched with flags and marched well. The beavers Continued to page nine

THE DEMOCRATIC OUTLOOK

Democrats in all parts of the country are not striving to create the impression that the re-election of President Wilson will be easy. They know that the republicans have a strong candidate and that mighty efforts will be made to heal the split of 1912. Nevertheless, they feel absolutely confident that when the campaign is well under way and when the record of the administration is analyzed before the eyes of the American people, fairness and justice will prevail and President Wilson will be once again the choice of the country.

Backed by the full strength of the democratic party, President Wilson stands on his record, and whether he is attacked for his domestic policies or for his conduct of foreign affairs, he is able to give an account of his stewardship. To attack a candidate who is in office is not difficult, but when the people ask Mr. Hughes and the republican party what they would substitute for the policies they condemn, there will come the real test. Putting aside the unpatriotic criticism of men who have ulterior motives in their opposition to President Wilson, the purely political criticism will not carry weight with the thinking men of the country, no matter what party they belong to.

It is easy to overestimate the strength of the racial opposition to President Wilson. So far as the German vote is concerned, most of those who are loud in their opposition to President Wilson would not have supported him under any circumstances as they are staunch republicans, and their opposition will tend to strengthen Wilson. Other opposition will peter out before the elections, though the republicans will surely make the most of all the popular agitations of the past year. Yet, President Wilson can defend his course on the ground of "America First" and that ought to be good enough for a country that is now having a great patriotic revival.

Two considerations above all others commend the president to the country. He has put through congress laws that prevented panic and depression at the outbreak of war and, while saving America's honor before the world, he has kept us at peace. Should the war end tomorrow or a year from now, all nations will be forced to admit that President Wilson knew where the best interest of this country lay and while he strove hard to maintain an honest neutrality he took a strong course against every power that menaced American liberties. Above all, the American people wished to keep out of a war that is devastating the world and he has brought the nation to the first place in world prosperity. He is sure of the favorable verdict of history, and he deserves the hearty endorsement of the American people next September.

No argument is stronger for President Wilson than that of the revised currency law. Without it we should have been plunged in panic when the war disorganized the international relations of the powers, and it enabled us to grow and prosper, making it possible for the small business to tide over dangerous times and giving our government the means to make the dollar supplant all other currency in international commerce.

Democrats do not fear the tariff issue and the more it is discussed the better for President Wilson. The country has never been more prosperous than now and even though there should be a dumping of foreign products here at the close of the war, the tariff commission approved by the administration ought to be able to adjust American business accordingly. The silence of Mr. Hughes has been a great asset to him until now, but when the campaign starts in earnest he will have to answer the pointed questions of democrats who have a candidate who has been found true as steel and who has done more than any other man to keep the country prosperous and at peace.

ITINERENT VENDORS

A law passed by the last general court if rigidly enforced would establish regulation and supervision over a type of business that has heretofore been too free and that consequently has imposed on the public and entered into unfair competition with established firms. This is the itinerent business which jumps into a city and out again over night and which uses unscrupulous methods of reaching the people. A common form of it is the leasing of empty stores temporarily and the setting up of fake auctions or fake sales. In future, no business of this nature can be established unless a state license is procured at a cost of $25 and a deposit of $500 made to the state authorities. It shall also be necessary for this type of business to secure a local license, and this feature if intelligently administered would protect the merchants of any city from unfair competition and the public from fake exploitation.

One danger that must be avoided is the carrying of the new law to such extremes that it would defeat its purpose. The state commissioner of weights and measures under whose department the enforcement of the law will come states that it applies to establishments which are open at parks and beaches for the summer season. If these places come under the law and

If their proprietors are required to hand over $25 to the state before doing business, the law shall practically kill off all summer business. Technically the law may apply to all such places but it would be folly for the authorities to so interpret it. A test case decided against the owner of a popcorn stand or picture postcard booth would merely call down a public protest that would lead to the repeal or amendment of the law. What the intent of the law is appears obvious, and let it not be killed by unwise application.

THE VERDUN DECISION

After two months of fighting, the struggle for Verdun is going on as fiercely as ever, with occasional lulls due to the exhaustion of human endurance. The allies affect to view it lightly, but they will fight, if necessary, to the last man before they will let the Germans take the fortress. The Germans on the other hand seem as anxious as ever to add Verdun to their spoils, though this country finds it hard to understand why. That there is some deep-seated reason is undoubted, else there would not be such a tremendous sacrifice of men at a time when men are the all important factor. In all probability the struggle at Verdun is the most decisive of the war and the end of the conflict may depend on the course of the outcome. Should Germany take it after fighting inch by inch nearer and nearer, there will be an enormous gain in German prestige, and the allies may decide that they cannot crush Germany on land. Should the Germans fail to take it, the world will say that the German cause is hopelessly lost. Whatever the outcome, France will be forever honored for the gallant fight at Verdun as the French defense has been admitted even by the Germans to be the most notable achievement of the war. Though the siege has been long, the present struggle cannot continue indefinitely and unless the war drags on for a much longer period, the time is approaching when the final announcement shall be made that Verdun has fallen or that Verdun is saved. The fight for Verdun looks now like an exemplification of the death struggle predicted early in the war.

WE WANT YOU

A leading member of the proposed Lynn association of manufacturers urges that body to adopt as its official slogan the appeal "We want you in Lynn." It is an appeal for co-operation between the various business interests of the city and it is meant for all those throughout New England or elsewhere who may be contemplating changing their place of business or going into business for the first time. Lynn has suffered through lack of co-operation to a considerable extent and it is now proposed to arouse a spirit such as has been in evidence in Lowell for some time past. Whether or not we shall adopt a similar slogan, it is well that we should give business everywhere to understand that it will be well off in Lowell and that we should go a step farther by preparing for new business. Every new industry, large or small, means more people, more shoppers, more children in the schools, more pay envelopes, and more live, active citizens. Every new industry furthermore ensures a future free from industrial disturbance and does away with the danger of being dependent on one large business. Lynn is not the only city that envies Lowell its great diversity of thriving industries and we should act so that our methods of promoting new business will be commented on and copied elsewhere. Some day in the not too distant future we may grasp our great opportunities so intelligently and earnestly that out of low business may want to come to Lowell just as strongly as we will welcome it.

THE DECORATIONS

Let the oldest resident say what he will, Lowell never looked lovelier than yesterday. Red, white and blue festooned doorways and store fronts or carried the eye along in uneven lines from the square to city hall or from Merrimack street to the postoffice. The city was one great American flag, and the harmony of its brilliant colors was so evident that the very winds seemed to sing "The Star Spangled Banner" as they stirred its thousands of folds. Over church and store and mill, and home floated the flag of a patriotic people, thrilled for once into a deeper realization of what their country means. It was "Flag day" in fact as well as in name, and nowhere was its artistic appeal heeded more effectively than in The Sun building which put out a flag from every window of its spacious front. Through the day hundreds crossed over to the square to admire the spectacle which was one of the most beautiful and most inspiring that Lowell has ever seen. In all there were thousands of flags, but they were all expressions of love for the one only flag that in the day of trial all good Americans will defend while there is a particle of meaning in its stars and bars.

BUT FEW HYPHENS

Speaking at the graduation of West Point cadets last Tuesday President Wilson came out strongly for preparedness, and though Theodore Roosevelt might find a few weasel words in his address, most readers can find several strong statements that stand for the best in the American spirit of the day. Declaring that it is our imperative duty to prepare so that we may resist possible aggression from any quarter, he expressed his conviction that an American awakening is sweeping through all classes and races. In this country. He paid his respects to the "Hyphenated citizens" but stated that those who love other countries better than they love the country of their adoption are comparatively few in number. The man who could take offence at the sentiments or the words of President Wilson on this occasion ought to examine his conscience to see if his Americanism is of the right quality. The paramount duty of today is that we stand first and last for this nation, and whenever our sympathy with or love for any other nation stands in the way, then we are not true to the country or faithful to its most sacred and most important interests.

Sesson at Revere

Counsel for the prosecution and defense, according to a member of the Massachusetts bar, had been allowed 15 minutes each to argue the case. Counsel for the defense had begun his arguments with the allusion to the old swimming hole of his boyhood days. He told in flowery story of the balmy air, the singing birds, the joy of youth and delights of the cool water.

And in the midst of it he was interrupted by the drawing voice of the judge:

"Come out, Chaucery," he said, "and put on your clothes. Your 15 minutes are up."

What He Didn't Know

A well known resident was walking along Fifth avenue the other Saturday night, when a half drunken man came up to him.

Standing in his path, the man said:

"Mr. ———, you don't know me, do you?"

"No," said the gentleman, "I don't," and he tried to pass.

"I am the husband of your washwoman," persisted the half sober individual.

"Well, what have I to do with that?"

"You see, you don't know every thing," went on the man in a confidential tone.

"What don't I know?"

"You don't know I'm wearing one of your white shirts!"—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

See Strange Sights

That cheery English actor, Seymour Hicks, is an expert motorist, and some time ago he and a friend were driving along a country road in his car, both of them wearing the most correct styles in the way of fur coats, goggles, and so on.

On suddenly rounding a curve, they came upon a groom, who was exercising the couple of very restive horses.

The animals appeared in such a dangerous mood that Mr. Hicks immediately brought his car to a standstill and called out to the groom: "Can't you

YOUNG WOMAN ATTRIBUTES HER CURE TO PILGRIMAGE TO SHRINE IN QUEBEC

BOSTON, June 15.—After being almost totally blind since her birth, Miss Elizabeth Mary Murphy, daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth C. Murphy and sister of Joseph A. Murphy of the Canton board of selectmen, is now able to see and is enjoying almost perfect health. She attributes her miraculous cure to a pilgrimage to the shrine of Ste. Anne de Beaupre, Quebec.

Miss Murphy, who is in her 19th year, had been attended by specialists for years with no result, when she decided that she would go to the shrine, expressing absolute confidence that her family that she would be cured if she went there. From her birth she had absolutely no sight in her left eye and but little in her right. Her health otherwise was poor and she was subject to convulsions.

Oculists Gave Up Hope

Numerous oculists and physicians examined her eyes and her general health and all gave her case up as hopeless. The oculists said that they never have been able to diagnose her general physical condition to any degree of certainty. After all these examinations, made both at home and in hospitals, Miss Murphy decided that her only hope was in Ste. Anne de Beaupre. This was in May.

"On my return home from the hospital, with no improvement whatever, I suggested to my parents that they allow me to make a pilgrimage to the shrine of Ste. Anne," said Miss Murphy, telling of her cure. "They gladly consented to my wish, but were a little hesitant, fearing that I might be seized with convulsions on the way. I assured them that once I left the house for Ste. Anne's I would have no further trouble, and that when I returned to them I would be completely cured and that I left eye which was blind from birth."

"I got out of bed on Wednesday, and my sister and I left Boston the following Saturday morning. We arrived at Ste. Anne's Monday morning. I made the novena devoutly as I knew her and I was very sick and was unable to attend holy mass. My left eye was also very painful and sore, and continued so all day. I went to the blessing at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, and just as I kissed the altar, my eyes and work up over my head. I stood up to leave the altar, and as I did so I felt the pain vanish. I knew at that moment that I was cured, and when I went back to my seat I placed my hand over my right eye and was able to see. I have a sharp pain start in my heretofore blind eye."

Eyes Were Straightened
"My eyes were also crossed, and as the days wore on they became straight. I am today a wonderfully improved. My health has never been better, and I am today a living example of one who has been the recipient of a most wonderful miracle."

Although the cure was effected more than a year ago, Miss Murphy and her family, Miss Murphy went to a letter written by herself and four witnesses who saw her before and after the cure. The witnesses were Dr. James Kennedy, Dr. J. Leo Carroll, Rev. John J. Farrell and Rev. Edward T. McKenna, pastor and curate of the church which.

Un request of the authorities at St. Anne's for a statement as to the condition, Miss Murphy sent a letter signed by herself and four witnesses who saw her before and after the cure. The witnesses were Dr. James Kennedy, Dr. J. Leo Carroll, Rev. John J. Farrell and Rev. Edward T. McKenna, pastor and curate of the church which.

Major John M. Burke, "United States," a world-traveled cosmopolite, has arrived. As an illustration of the truism that coming events cast their shadows before, in his qualifying of the announcement that Col. Cody, "Buffalo Bill" (himself), was again in the saddle, and after several years' absence would be here soon, questioned as to the fact, the major said:

"Yes, Buffalo Bill, (now General Cody of the Wyoming National Guard, where lately he has been assisting General Slinney to prepare the range element in 'Preparedness') is coming allied with the newly constructed Miller government-endorsed military contingent, real furloughed United States soldiers from the Rio Grande, is the one sure bet that doubting Thomases must fight shy of."

The old scout has allied himself with a triple-decked merging of his old-time wild west atmosphere with the last generation of frontiersmen, sons of the Indians and pioneers of the plains, and rough riders of Oklahoma's early days, led by Colonel Jay Miller, among the last of the range riders of the southwest. Colonel Cody's adventures in the fifties and his younger associates' later experiences, cover the era that might be called the birth of the central and the ripening of the great western America. To add to the lesson of the physical benefits of outdoor and camp life, a contingent of furloughed United States soldiers, cavalry and artillery to show that "preparedness" for the tented field is as necessary an adjunct in these days of luxury as it was in the settling and developing of this continent into the present marvelously prosperous and envied Land of Plenty.

The major is full of preparedness, and was an early advocate for the developing of our first line of coast and west defense—a great "double navy"—and as a reserve line for national physical culture of the masses, a continental army. "Fully prepared, this nation would be the world's dove cot; money spent would be a home circulation; it would be a merca for investment of foreign capital; an economy in doctors' bills; a saving in criminal expenses and to the covetous would be a warning, and to our people a shield of security."

The sudden idea that has almost wrecked civilization, and wipes out Europe's two thousand years of progress, shows the fallacy of the matter to be respected in these days of hysteria and is—so changeable that if the Man from Galilee's commissary magic at the leaves, wine and fish plenic occurred today, He would likely be arrested and condemned as a lawless moonshiner. So, Wake up, America! Stop! Look! Listen! and Prepare!"

PREMIER ASQUITH CAUSE OF WRECK

Flagman and Engineer Blamed for Disaster at Bradford, R. I.

LADY BANK, Scotland, June 15.—In observance of the 30th anniversary of his election to the house of commons from East Fife, Premier Asquith yesterday visited his constituency for the first time since the outbreak of the war, addressing a great meeting of his supporters and many who in past years have been his opponents.

The premier made a touching reference to the death of Field Marshal Earl Kitchener as having a place in our constitutional life that none else can fill and a memory that will live as long as the "British empire."

Lord Kitchener had bequeathed to the country an array of armies, said the premier, and it was for the country to make the best use of them.

In a survey of the situation, Premier Asquith declared that the Russian advance was one of the most brilliant features of the war.

The "British" resistance to the Austrian onslaught, Mr. Asquith said, every day was becoming more effective. As for the French, nothing could exceed the valor with which they were maintaining the defense of Verdun. Co-operation among the general staffs of the allies was becoming more intimate and complete every month.

British assistance had been offered to General Joffre, and the steps which would be taken were those dictated by sound strategy.

"This war is not merely a struggle of armies," the premier continued. "It is a struggle of general and economic resources, and these will prove in the long run to be the deciding factor."

After speaking of the effectiveness of the navy's blockade, Mr. Asquith said: "Owing to the rashness of the enemy we were allowed to see another and more stirring, dramatic aspect of the navy's qualities in a fortnight ago. The naval action on May 31 was worthy of the best and most treasured traditions of the British navy."

"The Germans were driven back into their ports without so much as making an effort to grapple with the main body of our grand fleet, and had the temerity to claim what really was a rout as a complete victory."

"A couple more such victories and there will be nothing left of the German navy worth speaking about. The truth is slowly leaking out, and its full extent is not yet realized or appreciated."

In reference to Ireland Mr. Asquith said the recent rioting, leading to the loss of many innocent lives, had created a situation which seemed to a majority of responsible Irishmen of all parties to call for a settlement. The history of the relations between Great Britain and Ireland exhibited a tragic series of missed or misused opportunities.

"Don't let us add another to their number," said the premier. "What we desired, he explained, was a provisional settlement, for when the war came to an end the country would have to take stock of its internal relations, the fabric of the empire would have to be refashioned and relations between Great Britain and Ireland and the dominions would necessarily be brought into close and connected review."

COCOANUT OIL FINE FOR WASHING HAIR

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulish coconut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless) is much better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulish coconut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Blame for the passenger wreck on the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad at Bradford, R. I., April 17, in which five persons were killed and 17 injured, was placed by the Interstate commerce commission today on the failure of Flagman Coombs and Engineer Mansfield to attend signals properly.

Old fashioned wooden cars and gas lights contributed to the fatalities, the report said.

It pointed out that had the cars been of modern steel construction they would not have been destroyed by fire and it would have been possible to save more lives.

The report presents a tabulation of nine accidents on the New Haven since July, 1911, wherein employees failed to obey signals or properly protect their trains as required by rules and showing that in all 66 persons were killed and 475 persons injured.

"The recurrence of such distressing accidents," says the report in conclusion, "directs attention forcibly to the fact that competent and experienced employees are not infallible, as it is to be noted in each instance that these accidents were due to the same fundamental cause, namely, fallibility of the human element responsible for the safe operation of trains."

"Wreck prevention is the highest duty of railroads. This obligation is not satisfied by merely making rules which prove insufficient in operation. If the human element repeatedly fails, then safety requires that the highest degree of mechanical skill be applied to properly supplement the human element as to the particular point of danger."

The commission's investigation developed that the wrecked train arrived at Bradford seven minutes before the accident, which allowed Flagman Coombs time in which to walk back a proper distance to protect his train. Tests showed that Coombs had time to go back 2600 feet, but had gone only 1120 feet when he was passed by the train which crashed into the halted train at Bradford.

"Had the flagman exercised the proper degree of care under the circumstances prevailing and hastened back immediately," the report says, "there is every reason to believe that he could and would have warned the engineer of the other train in plenty of time to have permitted him to stop before colliding."

Tests indicated that the electric signals were working properly, and while there is evidence that some fog existed it was not dense enough to obscure Engineer Mansfield's view of signals.

RATS IN CITY HALL

No, Not in Lowell, But in the Municipal Palace at Brockton—Board of Health Asked to Take Action

BROCKTON, June 15.—City hall has been invaded by a small army of rats and mice. Some of the women clerks are on the ragged edge of nervous prostration. The office of Mayor John S. Burbank, and that of City Clerk Calvin R. Barrett, appear to be the favorite fields for the gambling rats and mice, which, according to varying estimates, are from an inch to two feet long.

City Messenger Seth L. French made an effort to stop the advancing army with a mouse trap, but with little effect, although he nailed seven yesterday. The board of health has been asked to take action.

BRIDGE FLOORING GAVE WAY

Traffic over the Pawtucket bridge was impeded for about half an hour this morning as a result of one of the rear wheels of a heavy cart loaded with coal going through the planking of the roadway. The accident happened about 8:30 o'clock and the wheel which sunk through the wood flooring up to the axle was so firmly wedged that it proved quite a task to extricate it. The street department was notified and Commissioner Morse soon had his "wrecking" crew on the scene and with the assistance of planks and jacks the wagon was raised and drawn to a place of safety on the Pawtucketville side.

LOWELL WINS FROM LYNN

Lohman Pitched Masterly Game and His Teammates Landed on Harrington—Score 3 to 2

Special to The Sun.

LYNN, Mass., June 15.—Lowell's bunched hits in the second inning of yesterday's game at Ocean Park, which sent three runs across the plate, proved sufficient to be too much of a lead for Lynn to overcome and Harry Lord's Spindle City crew romped home with the matinee 3-2.

Lynn batted hard to overcome Lowell's big lead and failed to puncture the Lohman delivery to any extent until the sixth chapter when two runs crossed the pentagon. Thereafter Lynn got men on the sacks twice but the hitter lacked the necessary punch to drive the tying rally over the plate.

Billy Harrington made his debut in a Lynn uniform after four years' absence and pitched a good game outside of the fatal second spasm. Billy had his curve ball working well and many times got out of bad holes by good headwork making the Lowell batsmen hit head butts. Harrington also contributed a ringing double to the box score on his first appearance at the plate.

Lohman's work in the box was of the same character which has featured his pitching during the season thus far. Zeke was nicked for five hits two of which were doubles but not any with the exception of Orcutt's safety to left in the sixth figured in Lynn's run getting. Lohman was mainly responsible for Lowell's win as it was his crash in the second which sent the Spindle City third run home.

Jud Daley and Earl Stimpson rival left gardeners, contributed feature plays, the Lowell man carrying off the honors, however, with a sliding catch off Prysock in the ninth. Daley also backed up on a couple of occasions and made two nice catches of long drives. Tom Denoville was also in the glare of the spotlight with a double killing unassisted.

After Kane had died in the first Lord walked, but Briggs lined to Denoville and Lord was doubled out the base. In Lynn's half Gleason beat out a hit to Torphy but Orcutt forced him at second Lord to Downey. Orcutt tried to steal but was nailed. Killhullen to Torphy. Daley grounded to Kane.

The second saw all of Lowell's scores. Barrows opened with a drive for two bases to deep right. Downey flied to Daley. Stimpson walked. Killhullen hit into the right field bleachers for two bases scoring Barrows. Stimpson scored on Torphy's long home run to Daley. Lohman drove Killhullen with a stinger to left but Kane ended the inning by being thrown out by Conley. Prysock doubled with two down but was left as Conley rolled out to Downey.

Lowell died easily in the third but with Harris out of the way Harrington ton doubled to left and took third on Gleason's out but Orcutt failed to produce. Lowell threatened to score in the fourth but Harrington put on steam and kept them away from the plate. Stimpson hit to center and Killhullen flied to Conley. Torphy doubled to the right field bleachers but Lohman flied out to Masterman in short right. Kane got hit by Harrington filling the sacks. Lord fouled to Denoville. Lynn died in order Killhullen making a fine running catch off Daley close to the Lowell bench.

Nothing happened in the fifth but after Lowell had been retired in the sixth Lynn scored two runs. Harrington opened the inning with a short fly to Torphy. Gleason walked and Orcutt singled to left. Both moved up on a wild pitch. Daley rolled out to Downey. Gleason trotting across the plate unharmed and when Downey fumbled Denoville's roller, Orcutt reached the plate. Downey threw out Masterman for the third out.

Lowell was easy in the seventh and Lynn was likewise easy for the eighth. Lowell represented in the eighth but Orcutt singled and stole in Lynn's half but was left as Daley flied to Stimpson in short left. Lowell got two men on in the ninth but when they seemed sure to score Daley made a fine catch off Kane. For Lynn Denoville reached on Torphy's error. Masterman fanned and Stimpson made a great catch off Prysock. Conley ended the game being thrown out by Downey. The score:

Is Christy Mathewson going to flash the same sensational comeback that Cy Young did in 1907 just when everyone had figured him as completely through?

In many ways, the records of Mathewson and Young parallel each other. Just recently it seemed that they would diverge—that Mathewson had reached the end—but the great showing by "Big Six" during the past month, has led many to hope that he too will be as young as Cy.

Young broke into the majors back in 1890. For ten years he starred with the Cleveland club, then was transferred to the St. Louis Cardinals, and, in 1901, was sold to the Red Sox. It was the brilliant pitching of Cy during 1903 and 1904 that enabled the Bostonians to win two pennants and one world's championship.

But in 1905 something went amiss with Young's arm. The old whip wouldn't crack as it had in the other years; the old zip was gone from the ball. The opposition clubbers found little or no difficulty in swatting him.

Just about then the "wise ones" began to chant the swan song. They pointed out that Young was through. "He's been pitching for sixteen years and no matter how good a man is he can't go on forever," they declared. "Cy Young is a thirty-eight years old man, far beyond his athletic prime."

When Young turned in his 1905 average it was found that he has won only 15 of the 27 combats in which he had figured. Young's showing for 1906 was even worse. He won only 12 out of 22 games and did not seem able to go the route. He finished the season with an average of .382—the worst he ever amassed. That convinced the bulk of the fans that Cy was through.

But the Red Sox manager wouldn't "can" Cy. He figured that his great work for the Red Sox in the other years merited his keeping him for another season, even if Cy did nothing but enacting duty.

And so Cy, then thirty-nine years old, was kept on the Red Sox roster, while the fans clamored for his banishment to the Red Sox Home. That probably proved him a bit, because after having his arm tinkered here and there, he begged for a chance to display his wares in 1907. He did—and won 22 out of 37 combats, for a pitching average of .555. The next season—1908—Cy won 21 out of 32 games for an average of .555, which is quite a healthy showing for a 41-year-old hurler. On June 30, 1908, he shut out the Yankees without a hit, only one man reaching first.

In 1909 he went back to the Cleveland club and won 19 out of 34 games. The following year—1910—he figured in 17 games and won 16. In 1911 he took unto himself a job with the Boston Braves and won four out of nine starts. He decided then that he was getting a bit too old to pitch, being forty-four years old at the time, and he retired from the trolly.

Reviewing Young's record from the end of the 1905 campaign when he was considered "all through," to the time he actually quit, we find that he won 73 and lost only 56 games, giving him a grand average of .567 for the five years from 1907 to 1911 inclusive.

Now let us consider the case of Mathewson.

Matty joined the Giants in 1900. Over a season of 15 seasons—from 1900 until the end of the 1914 season, the big blond hurler was the king pin of the Giant pitching staff. But late in the 1914 season he contracted "arthritis" as did Young at the end of his sixteenth year.

In 1915 Matty, then in his sixteenth year, as a major performer, was of no real value to his club. His arm seemed gone. He won only eight out of his twenty-two starts and some of these victories were of the fluke order. Before the season ended, the "wise ones" declared that Matty was about through.

"He's been pitching for sixteen years and no matter how good a man is he can't go on forever," they said, repeating what their associate members said about Cy Young back in 1906. The folks pointed out also that Matty was quite an elderly pitcher, as declared "Cy Young" at his thirty-eight years old—age far beyond his athletic prime."

When Young turned in his 1905 average it was found that he has won only 15 of the 27 combats in which he had figured. Young's showing for 1906 was even worse. He won only 12 out of 22 games and did not seem able to go the route. He finished the season with an average of .382—the worst he ever amassed. BOMBARDED BALL PARK

LYNN, June 15.—Luckily for Farnum F. Fish, a Saugus aviator, and his companion, George E. Sprague of Chilton, who essayed a bomb-dropping stunt over Lynn, late yesterday afternoon, five bombs which exploded simultaneously while the biplane was lost in a fog bank above the Point of Pines were of a comparatively harmless type. Had they been bombs loaded with more than a small quantity of explosive, both occupants of the biplane probably would have been killed and the machine demolished at an altitude of several hundred feet.

Sprague was slightly burned on the legs, and his shoes and clothing were burned. He was sitting above the bomb box, but despite the unexpected explosion, retained self-possession, and

Fish had no difficulty in controlling the biplane.

Fish, who has done considerable flying in Mexico, planned to show the people of Lynn how easy it is for aeroplanes to bombard cities. He had no difficulty in rising from the old race track in Saugus.

The Lynn club was having a hard time trying to solve the pitching of Lohman of Lowell, when the biplane flew above Ocean Park and the spectators derived much enjoyment by shouting to Lohman that he was due to make an ascension. Just as Lohman started to pitch Sprague dropped one of the bombs which exploded perfectly, scattering lamp black.

Fish then headed for Saugus, but before he got his bearings a heavy fog closed in on him.

For a while the pilot was at sea, literally as well as figuratively. He finally discovered that he was above the Point of Pines. Then the bombs began to explode and for a few seconds Fish and Sprague were in a bad way.

After ascertaining that no great harm had been done, Fish continued his course to Saugus. He believes that the vibration of the machine caused the acid in the bombs to reach against the fuses, in turn detonating the explosive.

LOWELL WINS EASY GAME

The Lowell-Lawrence high school game played at Spalding park yesterday afternoon did not develop into the exciting contest that was expected between these two teams. It was an uninteresting game, both teams playing wierd ball and failing to display any form that would class them as All-sporting teams. The home team won the game by the score of 13 to 9.

The local aggregation hammered the Lawrence pitchers for 15 hits. Though Falls held the visitors to half that number, he was wild at times and issued eight free hits. The first base, Lowell also carried off honors in the error column, making six against five misplays of their opponents.

The batting of Lynch, Switzer and Falls featured for Coach Pulsifer's team, while Meyer and Fleming of the visitors turned in some classy slick work. Fielding features were contributed by Switzer, Haywood and Fleming.

Lowell scored four runs in the first inning and the rest of the game was uninteresting. They added three more in the fourth, four in the fifth and two in the eighth. Lawrence made a good up-hill fight, scoring seven runs in the last three innings. The score:

Kinney, Charged With Larceny, Rides to Trial in His Own Auto

BOSTON, June 15.—Edward E. Kinney, who while in the city established something of a record as a spender of cash, made a brand new record yesterday, when, a prisoner in custody, he sat at the wheel of his high-powered car and started to New York, his "jailers" as passengers.

Never before in the history of the Commonwealth has a prisoner taken out of the state as a fugitive from justice been allowed to drive his own automobile, and thus bring himself to trial.

Kinney, sometimes called Kindred, shortly after 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon stepped into his big auto and took the wheel. Two New York detectives and a couple of attorneys accompanied him. Kinney is to be placed on trial on charge of stealing $22,119.75 from his employers, the Filmm-O'Rourke company, last summer.

SYRACUSE THE DARK HORSE IN INTERCOLLEGIATE ROWING REGATTA

ROUGHKNEPSIE, N. Y. June 15.—The eyes of the rowing world are now centered on the intercollegiate rowing regatta to be held here on the Hudson, Saturday, June 17. The majority of the rowing experts pick Cornell to win the big event, but state that the boys from Syracuse are the dark horses in the varsity eight race. The Syracuse eight, the one that seems destined to play a leading role in the big race, is made up in a large measure of the men who pulled the sweeps in the freshman eight last spring. It is stroked by Whiteside, the stroke oar of the 1915 freshman combination. He is a man of wide experience, having, like several of his mates in the varsity shell, rowed in the crews of the Dutch Rowing club under the coaching of young Jim Ten Eyck. In physique the Syracuse boatload is not over large, averaging in weight something like 155 pounds, about three pounds under the Cornell crew. Likewise, they row the short, hard stroke taught by the Ten Eycks. It is a stroke with little body swing, but with tremendous leg drive, one that requires men of the highest physical type. The boat is always high and the boat maintains its pace more because of the rapidity of the stroke than as a result of a vicious drive at the finish, such as Rice demands at Columbia. Upper picture in layout shows Syracuse varsity eight out for a spin. One in oval, crew putting shell in water. One on left shows Captain Collier of Syracuse varsity eight.

NOTRE DAME GRADUATION

With beautiful and impressive ceremonies fourteen members of the graduating class of Notre Dame academy, Adams street, received their diplomas this morning, and another group of accomplished young ladies went forth to carry the training received in the beloved halls of Notre Dame into their various walks of life. The main feature of the program consisted of the solemn high mass in the chapel, during which the diplomas were awarded by Rt. Rev. William O'Brien, and the address to the graduates delivered by Rev. W. J. O'Brien of Brockton.

The setting for the solemn and inspiring scene was strikingly beautiful, reflecting the spirit of the occasion adequately. At 10 a. m. the chapel was crowded by the large number of relatives, friends and former pupils in attendance. The altar was brilliant with clusters of cut flowers, among which were two great masses of crimson peonies, and there were hundreds of candles and other special decorative features. At the stroke of 10, the thrilling procession by Massenet was played and the graduating class marched in two by two, each girl wearing a white dress and a veil. The front seats in the chapel had been reserved, and the girls made a pretty picture when they had taken their places.

Solemn high mass was celebrated by Rev. Joseph A. Curtin of St. Patrick's, with Rev. Mrs. Callahan and Kerrigan as deacon and sub-deacon, respectively. Rt. Rev. Monsignor O'Brien sat within the sanctuary, and the following clergyman also occupied places within the sanctuary: Rev. M. C. Gilbride, St. Mary's, Collinsville; Rev. E. A. Costello, St. Augustine's, South Boston; Rev. W.

calling forth many expressions of commendation from the visiting priests and other guests. The mass was solemn Gregorian and the choir and orchestra of Notre Dame sang the various sections with devotion and appreciation of musical values. The shading and graduation of tone was beautifully effective, the voices dying away softly in waves of sound or swelling out in full volume according to the appeal of the text. During the mass Tozer's "Veni Sanctus Spiritus" was beautifully rendered and at the offertory Singingbiller's "Ave Maria" was sung most effectively. At the close of the mass of Pentecost, the usual Te Deum and the Recessional were sung very impressively.

Address
The address to the graduates was preached by Rev. W. J. O'Brien of Brockton, and was an eloquent discourse on Catholic education. To the graduates personally he addressed words of congratulation. To the graduates he said:

"Now, dear graduates, fortune has kindly favored you in placing you here for a sound Catholic education. You have been chosen from among thousands and placed under the tender and watchful care of the good sisters of Notre Dame. They, who have consecrated their lives to the service of God and put forth all their energies in the acquisition of that knowledge which they have imparted to you, know full well that you are going forth well equipped to fight the battles of life. But you must remember that there is an obligation on you always to carry yourselves in every phase of life as graduates of Notre Dame. And as you go forth inspired by the exemplary lives of your pious instructors who have been to you as guardian angels during the happy years you have spent here under this hallowed roof, your lives hereafter must have a great influence for good or evil on those with whom you come in contact in your daily intercourse. Therefore, it remains for you to bear in mind the lessons you have been taught and no doubt learned well to so live that every thought and action of yours may not only reflect credit on your alma mater but also merit the approval of those around you and as we trust above all, the approval of Him who will one day be our judge."

EUROPEAN WAR NEWS

Intense artillery activity is reported on both banks of the river Meuse on the Verdun front. The Germans are directing a heavy fire on Fort Souville, north of the fortress, whose guns have so far been silent and in the efforts of the crown prince to push the French back to their inner line of defense.

West of the river, Chantonnay, south of Cumieres, where the Germans have already driven a wedge into the French line, is an especial point of attack. No infantry action has occurred on either bank, the Paris afternoon bulletin states. In their offensive on the eastern front, the Russians are apparently making steady headway although still some distance from Lemberg, their immediate objective in Galicia. Last reports place them just across the border some 40 miles north of the city. Kovel, the railway junction point where the link between the German and Austrian forces on this front is formed, has been more closely approached by General Brusilov's army. In Bukovina, Czernowitz, the capital, apparently is cut off from all directions but the south.

GERMANS CONTINUE THE VIOLENT BOMBARDMENT NORTH OF SOUVILLE

PARIS, June 15, 11:55 a. m.—The Germans are continuing the violent bombardment of the French positions north of Souville, the key to the inner defenses of Verdun, the official statement issued by the French war office today.

No infantry fighting occurred on either bank of the Meuse last night. On the Vosges front some minor German attempts to attack the French line were made, but completely failed, according to the official statement.

The text of the statement follows: "On both banks of the River Meuse there was cessation of infantry activity last night. On the other hand the German and French artillery branches showed activity in the region of Chantonnay as well as in the sector to the north of Souville."

"In the Vosges a strong detachment of the enemy which was supported by a spirited bombardment, endeavored to approach our lines, was driven back by the fire of our machine guns, another surprise attack by the enemy upon our positions to the northwest of Bonhomme resulted in complete failure."

ATTITUDE OF ALLIES TOWARD GREECE DENOUNCED IN ATHENS

ATHENS, June 14, via London, June 15.—The attitude of the entente allies toward Greece, was denounced at meetings held here today. Resolutions were passed expressing loyalty to King Constantine, and confidence in the policy of Premier Skouloudis.

The resolutions protested against the blockade of Grecian ports established by England and France and denounced the conduct of the allies toward neutral nations and "especially toward the president of the United States of America."

A feature of the resolutions was that the king was referred to as "our glorious sovereign, King Constantine XII." This title placed the monarch in the line of the ancient rulers of Constantinople.

RELIGIOUS FORCES ARE ADVANCING IN GERMAN EAST AFRICA

HAVRE, June 15, via Paris.—Substantial progress for the Belgian forces invading German East Africa, giving them control of the entire northwest section of the colony, is claimed in an official statement issued by the Belgian war office today. The statement is as follows:

The German forces, having effected a retreat to the south, seem to be concentrating in the Kilega region. Gen. Tumbura's army, continuing the suit of the enemy, has reached the Nyanza and Tanganyika at three points.

The right column after occupying Usumbura on June 3 is continuing its march toward Kilega. In the centre two columns have reached respectively Lusanki and Kasima, the latter locality being about 125 miles east of Usumbura. The left column has reached Kagera where it holds the approaches to Lake Tanganyika.

"Aviator Lieutenants Behaghe and Goldson flew over the German fort Kilega in a seaplane on June 10, and dropped bombs on the gunboat Graf von Gotzen. Two bombs hit and considerably damaged the vessel."

He is expected to accept the portfolio, according to the understanding, but not to sever entirely his connection with the ministry of munitions.

ON NEXT SATURDAY, JUNE 17, 1916 AT 3 O'CLOCK, P. M.

By virtue of a license issued by the Probate court, the administrator of the estate of Peter L. Donahue, late of Lowell, has instructed the auctioneer to sell at public auction, for cash, the real estate and personal property, located within 12 minutes' walk of Merrimack Square.

The property comprises a two-story house of nine rooms with bath, pantry and furnace heat at No. 41 Jewett street, and a two-story two-tenement house of five rooms, separate entrances to each, bathroom and furnace in lower tenement at Nos. 39-41 Jewett street.

The lot has an area of about 4533 square feet of land, more or less, with a frontage of about 50 feet on Jewett street.

This sale should attract any person contemplating buying real estate this spring, when you take into consideration a full two-story house, now occupied as a home, that one could if desired convert into a two-apartment property at a low cost, its present plan making it an easy problem. There are four large rooms besides bath and pantry on the first floor, and five good sized chambers and storeroom on the second floor; building is heavily timbered, has a high-ceilinged cellar, and is in part, and on the same lot a two-story, two-tenement house of five rooms each, that will practically pay the carrying charges of the entire property.

The buildings are in A-1 condition, and the location, within easy walking distance to the largest of Lowell's manufacturing plants, also to the very center of the city, will assure one of a steady and continuous occupancy.

If you are looking for a home, and wish a chance to purchase at the same time, the same lot, and in no way connected with your home, an investment that will make your rent cost you almost nothing, and you interest on your money, then be on hand next Saturday at this sale.

Terms—$300 must be paid to the auctioneer just as soon as the property is struck off. Other terms at sale.

TWO U. S. TROOPERS SHOT IN FIGHT ON THE BORDER

LAREDO, Tex., June 15.—One hundred Mexican bandits crossing the Rio Grande, forty miles southeast of here, early today attacked the American border patrol near San Ignacio, killing two and wounding five, according to reports sent to Fort McIntosh, here, over the radio telephone.

The Mexicans expected to find an insignificant detachment of Americans. Instead, they were met by Troops 1 and 2, of the 14th Cavalry, 140 strong, under Major Alonzo Gray. They were hurled back across the river, losing six dead and several wounded.

The bandits first attacked Troop 1, Troop 2, a short distance up the river, heard the shooting and hurried to the scene. The attackers soon lost heart and retreated southward along the river, keeping on the American side for some distance before crossing back to Mexican soil.

The attack began at 2 a. m., and the fighting lasted about thirty minutes. The Americans were only partly surprised. The Mexicans succeeded in making their way around to the rear of the patrol's camp and fired the shot at a sentry.

The names of the dead soldiers were not reported to military headquarters at Fort McIntosh. It was taken for granted here that Major Gray would pursue the bandits until they crossed into Mexico and it would not be surprising if the Americans should follow the "hot trail" across the river.

Other troops of cavalry have been ordered in readiness to proceed to the San Ignacio section.

PROHIBITED VILLA CHIEF CAPTURED BY AMERICANS

FIELD HEADQUARTERS, June 15, via radio to Columbus, N. M., June 15.—Col. Pedro Duran, one of the most prominent Villa chieftains remaining alive, was captured yesterday by Capt. F. J. Turner, commanding Troop 1, 13th Cavalry, at Hacienda Tepahaknes. Lujan was one of the leaders in the raid at Columbus, N. M., March 9. His capture nearly completes the extermination of the Villa leaders in the raid across the border.

The chief, a man of about 35, was taken to headquarters camp on a honeymoon, revealed the hiding place of Lujan who was ill. Before daybreak Capt. Turner and his troop rode into Hacienda Tepahaknes and found Lujan.

The chieftain denied his identity, declaring he was a prisoner. He had almost convinced the Americans when they caught sight of a gold tooth as he protested. He was brought here a prisoner and subsequently admitted his identity.

NOTE TO CARRANZA

COMPLETED BY LANSING

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Secretary Lansing today completed a note to Gen. Carranza, replying to the demand that American troops be withdrawn from Mexico. The president and Mr. Lansing conferred at length on the situation.

Under some new development forces the situation, the reply will not be sent until next week, at the earliest. President Wilson and his advisers are anxious to deal with the Carranza note in such fashion that action can not be attributed to domestic politics.

As prepared by Secretary Lansing, it is understood the note flatly declines to withdraw American troops until the de facto government has shown both its willingness and its ability to police the border states properly. It also is said to make sharp rejoinder to suggestions of the Mexican communications which officials regard as discourteous and uncalled for. Carranza questioned the good faith of the Washington administration and openly hinted that President Wilson had his eyes on the American political situation in dealing with the situation beyond the border.

Carranza's request for a new statement of the intentions of the United States toward Mexico probably will be complied with. It is understood, however, that the declaration will be so framed that the de facto government can have no doubt that the United States government regards such a request as wholly unnecessary in view of the consistency in view of all previous utterances of President Wilson, the acts of his administration and the Harry's Lord's Lowell team, encouraged by their two successive wins in close battles this week, went after Lou Pieper and the rest of the Lynn outfit at Spalding park this afternoon with the weather anything but favorable for baseball. Clouds settled in the heavens and threatened to throw a down-pour onto the ball park at any minute. It was also cold, both for the ball players and the spectators.

The snap displayed by the Lowell players in the last two games was evident at practice this afternoon. Both the infield and the outfield worked better and it now looks as if the team has struck its stride.

Pieper was on deck early and, as usual, pitched to his men in batting practice. Pieper was still a little peeved over his defeat yesterday, especially as his new twirler, Billy Harrington, was beaten in his first game in the Eastern League.

There were two new players in Lowell uniform this afternoon, both having been recommended by Charles Keelner, manager of last year's team. Greenold, who played with Albright college in Pennsylvania and considered a good man on the first bag, covered first base. The other recruit is John Dousack, a pitcher, who hails from Pennsylvania also.

Umpire Bannon called the game at 3 o'clock, the batting order of the teams being as follows:

Lowell
Downey 2b.....2b Gleason
Lord 3b.....3b Daley
Briggs 1b.....1b DeNoville
Stimpson 1c.....1c Carroll
Kilhullen c.....c Prysock
Torphy ss.....ss Conley
Greenold 2b.....2b Williams
King p.....p Williams

First Inning
Neither side scored in the first, in the home team going out in quick order while the visitors succeeded in getting a hit but it was not productive of a run.

In the first half of the inning Gleason singled over Downey's head. Daley bunted to Lord who threw to first for a put out and when Gleason attempted to take third he was thrown out. Orcutt drew a free pass but was caught while trying to steal second.

No runs, one hit, no errors.

In the latter half of the inning Downey hit to Gleason and was out at first. Lord fouled to Conley. Briggs was third out on a fly to Orcutt.

Score—Lowell 0, Lynn 0.

Second Inning
Lowell broke the ice in the second inning and scored the first run of the game, the visitors failing to make a tally.

De Noville opened with a fly to Barrows and Carroll followed with a two bagger to left ground. Prysock hit one too hard for Lord to handle and reached first but when Carroll tried to make third on play he was nailed by Lord. Conley sent a high fly to Barrows and was third out.

No runs, two hits, no errors.

In Lowell's half Barrows hit one over Orcutt's head to the center field fence for a three bagger. Stimpson fled to Daley. Kilhullen singled scoring Barrows. Torphy then hit into a double play. Prysock took his grounders and threw to Gleason forcing Kilhullen and Gleason threw to first for the completion of the play.

One run, two hits, no errors.

Third Inning
Masterman went out on strikes and Williams followed with a single. Daley was second out on a fly to Dow. Daley singled and Williams went to third. Orcutt hit one to Torphy but the latter booted the ball and Williams

Lowell, true to her traditions, sent forth to the nation last night the message that Americanism means today just what it meant in 1776.

Through the city's streets, from 7.45 o'clock until 10.45, marched more than 15,000 men and women, row after row of them, thundering the message home to the rhythm of marching feet, piling conviction upon conviction that a solid American citizenship is determined by patriotism ever national preparedness, shall live forever.

The potent force of it all struck deep. Thousands of spectators, banked at the edges of this human torrent, caught up the message and shouted it out in one of the greatest demonstrations of patriotism ever witnessed in this or any other city.

Not a man, woman or child will forget the impressiveness of the scene and the feeling that went with it when the parade halted and the thousands of voices joined in singing "America." Recollections of that moment will not die until the end comes, regardless of how many the years. And high above the heads of all was the emblem which symbolized the spirit of it all—Old Glory.

The parade started at 7.45 o'clock sharp.

Long before that hour the route of parade was choked with the largest crowds of humanity ever assembled in Lowell's history. The windows of every building, home or office, along the line of march were the frames for countless more faces. Roofs were black with people and young America cheered from perilous positions. Not a tree or post but held its quota of spectators.

Through the long line of packed humanity there ran a tremor and the onlooker watched a sight that will live always in memory—an inspiration all through life. Words cannot paint the picture; superlatives seem weak. Now it would be row upon row of uniformed men. Now it would be row upon row of sombre-garbed civilians, transformed by the fluttering flags they carried into a great human wave of red, white and blue.

Now it would be row upon row of white-garbed women, sweeping into view like a huge white cloud, and women never looked lovelier than those who marched last night.

Trained, uniformed men, or recruits from plain civil life—everyday men and women—it was all the same. The same spirit prevailed and actuated them. Shoulders straightened and eyes fixed. Recollections of the frames in front of the eyes of the mayor, the lieutenant governor and others, including army officers, active and retired.

There was nothing frivolous about the bearing of these men and women. They did not laugh. They did not smile. They were serious and they were determined.

There were many other features, impressive and unique; but next to that of the marching women in impressiveness was the enormous numbers of men and women in the division from the U. S. Cartridge factories. The other industries also showed up in splendid style, as did the business men, the large stores and the fraternal organizations.

Weather Clerk a Dear
A woman at city hall said the weather clerk was "a perfect dear" to hold back the rain which threatened all the afternoon until the parade was over. Not a drop of rain was felt until the last unit had passed the reviewing stand and then a heavy mist settled over the city, but there was no downpour.

Parade the Best Ever
Lieut. Col. Beaumont B. Buck, U. S. A., and Justice James B. Carroll of Springfield, of the supreme court, were among those on the reviewing stand. Lieut. Col. Buck was chief marshal of Boston's big Preparedness parade and he said last night that Lowell's parade was a close second. The number of marchers in the Boston parade was 20,000.

TO RE-NOMINATE WILSON AND MARSHALL TONIGHT

COLISEUM, St. Louis, Mo., June 15.—The democratic national convention today changed its program of procedure and agreed to make nominations for president and vice president tonight instead of tomorrow.

The rules were amended and the convention will assemble at 9 o'clock tonight to remain in continuous session until nominations are made.

With one demonstration after another today the democratic national convention registered its approval of President Wilson's conduct of foreign affairs which has kept the country at peace.

When permanent Chairman James re-counted the diplomatic achievements of the president in the negotiations with Germany the convention launched into an 15 minute uproar of cheering, waving of flags, in which William J. Bryan, from his seat in the press section, joined.

There were calls for speech from Bryan but it was found that he had slipped out while the demonstration was going on.

Jerry C. South, clerk of the house of representatives, a delegate from Arkansas, announced that he would raise a point of order if consent were asked of Bryan to speak.

The convention machinery was all ready to be thrown into high gear by a report from the rules committee recommending that nominations be made tonight. All the leaders were agreeable to the new plan.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., June 15.—While the democratic national convention was in its second session today adopting a permanent organization and hearing the speech of Senator Oille James as permanent chairman, the platform makers were working with President Wilson's "own draft" and various suggested planks, hoping to have a completed draft of the platform ready for submission to the full resolutions committee late this afternoon.

By unanimous vote the democratic rules committee today recommended that nominations for president and vice-president begin at 9 o'clock tonight.

The proposal was carried after an extended argument in its behalf by Chairman William A. Glassow, Jr. of Pennsylvania. His chief contention was that it would be impossible to hold the delegates later than tonight and that it would be poor politics to make the nominations with seats empty.

Charles B. Strecker of Massachusetts opposed a change of program. He insisted it was due the St. Louis business men who had given the national committee a bonus of $100,000 for the convention, that delegates be kept until tomorrow night. Essentially, he too, agreed to Mr. Glassow's plan.

When the platform will be considered has not been definitely decided. The tentative plan of the rules committee was to recess at the conclusion of Senator James' speech until 10 o'clock, at which time nominations would begin. Whether the platform should be considered tonight after the nominations of tomorrow was left to the rules committee.

A resolution to limit all first nominating speeches to thirty minutes and

PROPOSE ARBITRATION

R. R. OFFICIALS CANNOT MEET DEMANDS OF THEIR EMPLOYEES

NEW YORK, June 15.—The railroad managers today notified the heads of the four railroad brotherhoods of employees that they could not meet their demands for an eight-hour day and time and a half for overtime work. They proposed arbitration as a solution of their difficulties or submission of the dispute to the interstate commerce commission.

A. B. Garretson, head of the conductors' organization, announced on receiving the railroads' answer that the arbitration proposition was not acceptable and that the proposition to submit the matter to the interstate commerce commission was impracticable, because that body had no power to settle the dispute.

Mr. Garretson finally announced that the reply of the railroads would be reported back to the men.

"Upon the verdict they render our future actions will be based," he said.

gressive remedial legislation than the nation has ever had written upon its statute books since its birth. In former national contests in the last two decades our party came as a prophet with performance, not promise. The democratic party has kept its word with the American people. We have made good."

The chairman reviewed at length the legislative records of the administration and eulogized the president for his direction of foreign affairs. The democratic party, he said, had enacted a tariff law under which monopolies were crushed and unexampled prosperity attained; a banking law taking the money control out of the hands of an oligarchy and making panics no longer possible; and many reform measures of lesser importance.

He declared President Wilson's Mexican policy and his course in protecting American rights against the encroachments of European belligerents had shown all the world that the president "neither bullies the weak nor fears the strong."

In a concluding appeal for the triumph of patriotism above policy, Senator James said the renomination of such a president in partisan convention ought not to be necessary, and that to discredit him might play the hand that could write the peace treaty of the world.

At the outset the senator referred briefly to President Wilson's policy against lobbying in congress and pointed out that under this administration the constitution has been amended for the first time since the Civil war when "we freed the senate from the control of the great interests by making it elective by the people at the polls."

He then eulogized the Underwood-Simmons tariff act as one of which the party was justly proud.

"Not a schedule in it fosters a monopoly," he said. "Our republican friends told us it would close the factories, fill the streets with idle men, produce a panic, close the houses and distract would reign everywhere; but we rejoice today to point to an unexampled prosperity in the nation with labor more generally employed, at higher rates, shorter hours, and better conditions than ever before. Our republican friends tell us that after the war is over poor, stricken, prostrate, torn, bleeding Europe will take our home market from us. I have no such fear. America is going to take the markets of the world. But we shall out from them the last hope of having even a false issue, for we shall pass a bill creating a tariff board to gather the facts created by new war conditions."

Turning to the federal reserve law, Senator James declared that it alone averted a panic at the outbreak of the European war.

"What would have been the result if the old republican system had been in effect," he asked. "The stock exchanges in every city in the world were closed. Europe poured its vast holdings in plethoric streams upon our shores. Who thinks that the old republican system of finance under the guidance of those patriotic guardians would have been able to gather the facts created by new war conditions? But what was the result? Not a bank closed its doors; not a laborer was thrown out of employment; not a business was forced into bankruptcy; but there stood strong, serving the masses of mankind, this great legislative achievement of the democratic party. As the master mind, next to keeping a hundred million people at peace with the world, the historian will record the federal reserve law."

Declaring that "self-defense and preparation for it is as necessary now as ever before," the speaker pointed to the administration's preparedness program as a proof that the party be-

"In 1906," he continued, "I attended the great peace conference held in London. I thought that the millennium of peace had come and such a thing as the world's war was impossible; but that day when the Christian heart shall rule the world is not in sight. We must not mistake dishonor for peace, as we cannot mistake oppression for justice. Woodrow Wilson and the democratic party advocate an army big enough to make aggressors think the second time before they strike a blow. Democracy wants an army and a navy in keeping with the dignity, preservation, and worth of this great republic. We do not want a foot of anybody's else soil, and, by the eternal God, they shall not take a foot of ours."

"During this administration we have done more to build up an army and navy in three years than the republican party did in 40 years of its existence. More has been done to give the American people a navy and army in three months than Col. Roosevelt and Mr. Taft did in 11 years."

Senator James spoke of the republican platform declaration for "a continuous policy of national defense," declaring that only two propositions for a serious people's navy and army in three months than Col. Roosevelt and Mr. Taft did in 11 years."

The republican plank, declaring for "an effective system of rural credits as opposed to the ineffective law proposed by the present democratic administration," was assailed by Senator James, who declared that almost every republican in the house and senate had voted for the administration's rural credit bill and that none had charged that it was ineffective or had proposed a substitute.

The senator also replied to republican criticism of the administration's shipping bill which he declared would have given the United States an adequate merchant marine by now; had it not been killed at the last session of congress by a republican filibuster.

"For the first time in the history of our country," said Senator James, after reviewing briefly democratic legislation which he declared had made prosperity possible, "the United States leads the world in exports. We are more prosperous than ever, and mills which have not turned a spindle for years are now busy. All the laborers of the United States are employed as never before. With the world-war raging, our country is the only neutral one that for not in distress and the only that has not declared a moratorium. Every demand of the stress of war, the democratic party has met quickly. We have freed business from the blackmail of the politician as we have emancipated it from the clutch of monopoly."

The senator likened President Wilson's Mexican policy to that of Lincoln, and quoted from a declaration of the latter to show that he had declined to intervene when conditions were much the same as now.

"It is a perfectly easy thing," he continued, "for the president of the United States to plunge his country into war if he is a politician before he is a patriot. He would seek his own re-election as he came upon horseback up the bloody highway of conquering armies. Of course our army could invade Mexico and march in triumph to its capital, but after the war we would have an army of pensioners, an army of tax collectors gathering up the earnings of the people to pay the great war debt."

The president had acted quickly, the senator said, when there was an invasion of American territory, and the punitive expedition now was doing all that this country could do with honor in Mexico.

"No president during the life of this republic," said the senator, "has ever had to deal with so many delicate and serious questions as those which have confronted President Wilson. With more than half of the world in arms in Europe, with Mexico in revolution at our border, these difficult and complicating problems have confronted him almost daily, and he has handled them as a patriot and a statesman. When the Lusitania was sunk the militant voice of Theodore Roosevelt said: 'It is a perfectly easy thing, for the president of the United States to plunge his country into war if he is a politician before he is a patriot. He would seek his own re-election as he came upon horseback up the bloody highway of conquering armies. Of course our army could invade Mexico and march in triumph to its capital, but after the war we would have an army of pensioners, an army of tax collectors gathering up the earnings of the people to pay the great war debt.'

well cried out for war, and if he had been president of the United States at that time, today 500,000 brave American sons would be contending around the forts of Verdun in this mighty maelstrom of blood—thousands would have been buried in ditches. Our president, patient, patriotic, far-sighted, the real statesman of this question with the greatest ability, and won for America its greatest diplomatic victory. "There are happily two kinds of courage, the courage of the man who is willing to undertake the dangers himself and the courage of the man that sends others to the conflict. Woodrow Wilson has both kinds of courage—the courage of conflict and the courage to act coolly and sensibly when he is dealing with the lives of others—the fate of a nation."

"Four years ago they sneeringly called Woodrow Wilson the school teacher. Today he is the world teacher. His subject is the protection of American life and American rights under international law. And without orphaning a single American child, without wounding a single American mother, without firing a single gun, he wrung from the most militant spirit that Woodrow Wilson has both kinds of courage—the courage of conflict and the courage to act coolly and sensibly when he is dealing with the lives of others—the fate of a nation."

ST. LOUIS, June 15.—Still fired with the enthusiasm stirred up yesterday by the keynote speech of former Governor Glynn of New York on Americanism, preparedness, peace and prosperity, delegates today crowded into the Convention hall for the democratic national convention, is being held, to hear more party doctrine expounded by leaders of the democracy.

While the sub-committee of the resolutions committee was engaged in its work of platform building, the program called for the permanent organization of the convention, another keynote speech by the permanent chairman, and the delivery of addresses by well known party leaders.

The day's plans provided for the opening of the convention at 11 o'clock by Temporary Chairman Glynn, with a prayer by the Right Rev. John J. Gleason, archbishop of St. Louis. The report of the committee on credentials was expected to take up but a few minutes.

James Chairman

The committee on permanent organization recommended Senator Ollie James of Kentucky for permanent chairman, who was prepared to deliver an address that was looked forward to with much interest.

The committee on rules and order of business had recommended the rigorous changes in the rules that governed former democratic national conventions. The rules of the house of representatives are to be adopted. President Wilson will be nominated by acclamation and Vice President Marshall, leaders said, will have more than two-thirds of the 1997 votes in the convention for renomination.

Nomination Friday Night

No change is expected in the program to nominate President Wilson Friday night, though William A. Glasgow, Jr., the Pennsylvania member of the rules committee, may offer a resolution in the convention providing that nominations be made the order of business at 8 o'clock tonight, it was said. The resolutions committee, however, has pointed out that the platform for the convention for the consideration of the convention until probably Friday morning.

Bryan Going on Stump

Managers of the convention said that William Bryan would be given over to well known and popular party orators. That William J. Bryan, who is attending the convention as a newspaper correspondent, will be called upon for a speech, no one doubts. Mr. Bryan, it is known, would respond and make a speech of support for the platform. The Nebraska senator was quoted last night as saying that he had nothing to offer the convention except that which the president wanted. "His plank will be mine," Mr. Bryan was reported to have said. "I expect to go before the people in his behalf."

With the platform the day carried out, the convention was expected to adjourn until 10 o'clock tomorrow, when the resolutions committee will be ready to report. With the adoption of the platform a recess will be declared until tomorrow night, when the presidential nomination will be made.

Committee On Resolutions

The sub-committee on resolutions met today and planned to sit until its work was ready for the full committee, which will meet at 3 o'clock this afternoon to receive the report. The sub-committee is composed of Senator Stone of Missouri, chairman; Representative Rainey, Illinois; Senator Walsh, Montana; Senator Hollis, New Hampshire; Representative Fitzgerald, New York; Senator Forrester, Ohio; former Representative A. Mitchell Palmer, Pennsylvania; Senator Martin, Virginia and Gov. Stanley, Kentucky. When the members began work today they had a fair idea what the platform should contain. A declaration on Americanism appeared to be of paramount interest among them, and the president's flag day speech at Washington yesterday received some attention. It was said that President Wilson's idea of what the plank on Americanism should be was telegraphed here last night. It virtually charged conspiracy on the part of some foreign-born citizens to influence foreign and domestic affairs and condemned organizations that failed to repudiate such alleged conspiracy, it was said.

It is understood that President Wilson has not suggested in any definite language approval of his action in maintaining peace.

Planks prepared by the president have been turned over to the sub-committee by Secretary of War Baker. It is learned there will be no specific mention of Mexico in the declaration of principles but that the question will be covered in a general way in the plank dealing with foreign affairs. This plank will declare that every nation has a right to regulate its own internal affairs.

Protection For Americans

Adequate protection for Americans at home and abroad will be among the pronouncements and a permanent peace tribunal will be favored. There will be a preparedness plank and an unequivocal expression against war for aggression.

If there is any friction in the resolutions committee it will come over the equal suffrage question. There are some committeemen who are opposed to any reference to the equal rights question; some want a declaration along the lines of the plank in-

FIGHT FOR SUFFRAGE

Suffragists Regard Committee Appointment as None Too Favorable to Their Cause

ST. LOUIS, Mo., June 15.—Suffragists fighting for an equal rights plank in the democratic national platform today regarded the resolutions sub-committee appointed last night as none too favorable to their cause. Only three of its members, Representative Rainey of Illinois, Senator Walsh of Montana, and Senator Hollis of New Hampshire, are outspoken for suffrage, it was declared.

The sub-committee was declared by democratic leaders to be inclined enough toward suffrage to give it only about the same measure of endorsement as is contained in the republican platform. Such a declaration would be entirely satisfactory to the National American Woman Suffrage association, but unsatisfactory to the women's party. Hence, the latter organization today exerted every influence to convince members of the sub-committee that democratic success next fall in 12 states in which women are enfranchised depended largely on the democrats going further in their platform than the republicans have gone.

PLANK ON AMERICANISM

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Out of the flood of messages reaching the White House today from the democratic national convention at St. Louis, those of special interest to President Wilson told of the reception of his proposed plank condemning citizens of foreign birth for political activity in behalf of their native land.

The president yesterday sent to convention leaders a request that the plank on Americanism include an unequivocal challenge to so-called "hyphenates," who seek to embarrass the national government in its dealings with foreign nations. He came out strongly for such an attitude in his flag day address yesterday, when he charged that a small group of foreign-born citizens are seeking "to levy political blackmail" to accomplish their purpose.

The president's wish is to pledge the democratic party against any change in policy on account of activity of these propagandists and thus virtually challenge the republican nominee to take a similar stand.

(Modes of Today)

At very little cost any woman can rid her face of hairy growths if she will use the delatone treatment. This is made by mixing some water with a little powdered delatone. This paste is spread upon the hairy surface for 2 or 3 minutes, then rubbed off and the skin washed, when every trace of hair will have vanished. No harm results from this treatment, but care should be used to buy real delatone.

If you want help at home or in your business, try The Sun "Want" column.

It is believed here that Mr. McCormick will be able to solidify the party and harmonize different elements. The president looks upon him as progressive and thoroughly in harmony with his ideas of how the coming campaign should be run.

The democratic national committee elects its chairman, but there is no doubt that the president's choice will be formally ratified.

McCormick, who is a native of Harrisburg and 44 years old, owns the Harrisburg Patriot and has been identified with democratic policies since his youth. He was mayor from 1902 to 1905 and this year was the party's candidate for governor.

PRES. WILSON'S WARNING

WASHINGTON, June 15.—A charge that foreign-born citizens of the United States are trying to levy political blackmail and to undermine the influence of the national government was made by President Wilson in a flag speech here yesterday.

His assertion sounded the keynote of one of the foremost issues on which he will go before the country for reelection, and touched upon a platform declaration which will be submitted by the administration to the St. Louis convention.

The president spoke before a crowd of thousands gathered at the foot of the Washington monument after he had reviewed for five hours a great preparedness parade, at the head of which he himself had marched down Pennsylvania avenue. He declared that since the Civil war had it been tested as it now is being tested, whether the Stars and Stripes stood for any one united purpose.

Loyalty to Flag First Test

"There is disloyalty active in the United States and it must be absolutely crushed," declared the president, speaking emphatically. "It proceeds from a minority, a very small minority, but a very active and subtle minority."

"It works underground, but it also shows its ugly head where we can see it; and there are those at this moment who are trying to levy a species of blackmail, saying, 'Do what we wish in the interest of foreign sentiment or we will wreck our vengeance at the polls.' That is the sort of thing against which the American nation will turn with a might and triumph of sentiment which will teach these gentlemen once for all that loyalty to this flag is the first test of tolerance in the United States."

The president's words were taken as an open challenge to foreign-born Americans who, he had learned from foreign language newspapers and other sources, are opposing him for reelection.

Flag Raised on Monument

While the democratic convention was being opened at St. Louis Mr. Wilson devoted the entire day to the flag day and preparedness demonstration. Carrying a large American flag, he walked from the capitol to the White House at the head of more than 50,000 marchers, including many high government officials, government employees, employees of the capitol's business houses, companies of cadets, National Guardsmen, Union and Confederate veterans, and members of commercial and social organizations.

The parade started from the capitol grounds. At the White House, the president took his place in the reviewing stand and was joined there by Secretaries McAdoo, Redfield, Lane and Wilson, Postmaster General Burleson, Atty Gen. Gregory and Sec. Lansing.

Before he began speaking, cannon fired a national salute of 21 guns and the Marine band played the "Star Spangled Banner" while a huge flag was drawn slowly to the top of the white monument, 550 feet above the ground. Sec. Lansing presided, and in introducing the president, emphasized the duty of present-day Americans to preserve unsullied ideals handed down by the founders of the republic.

Sentiment That Needs Action

Mr. Wilson first referred to the "very moving spectacle of the morning—an almost unmediated outpouring of thousands of sober citizens to manifest their interest in the safety of the country and the sacredness of the flag."

"I need not remind you," he said, "how much sentiment has been poured out in honor of the flag of the United States. Sentiment is a propulsive power, but it does not propel in the way that is serviceable to the nation, unless it has a definite purpose before it. This is not merely a day of sentiment. It is a day of purpose."

"It is an eloquent symbol of the unity of our history that upon this monument which commemorates the man who did most to establish the American Union we should have hoisted those stars that have so multiplied since his time, associated with those lines of red and white, which mean all that is pure in our purpose and all that is red in our blood in the service of a nation whose history has been full of inspiration because of his example."

"But Washington was one of the least sentimental men that America has ever produced. The thing that thrills me about Washington is that he is impatient of any sentiment that has not got definite purpose in it. His letters run along the lines of sentiment, and the most inspiring times that this nation has ever seen have been the times when sentiment had to be translated into action."

New Questions of Loyalty

"Apparently this nation is again and again and again to be tested and ways tested in the same way. The last supreme test this nation went through was the test of the Civil war. You know how deep that cut. While it seemed a time of terror, it has turned out a proof of the validity of our hope. Did you not see the Blue and the Gray mingled this morning in the procession? Was there any contradiction of feeling or division of sentiment evident there for a moment?"

"And yet again the test is applied. My fellow countrymen, a new sort of division of feeling has sprung up among us. You know that we are derived in our citizenship from every nation in the world. It is not singular that sentiment should be disturbed by what is going on on the other side of the water, but while sentiment may be disturbed, loyalty ought not to be."

To Be Quelled by Spiritual Force

"I believe that the vast majority of those men whose loyalties are directly derived from the nations now at war are just as loyal to the flag of the United States as any native citizen of this beloved land, but there are some men of that extraction who are not, and they, not only in past months, but at the present time, are doing their best to undermine the influence of the government of the United States in the world, and which is derived from the questions of our own politics."

"The president here declared there is disloyalty in the United States which must be absolutely crushed."

"That is the lesson," he continued, "that I have come to remind you of on this day—no mere sentiment. Are you going yourselves, individually and collectively to see to it that no man is tolerated who does not do honor to this flag? It is not a matter of force—it is a matter of spiritual force."

"It is to be achieved as we think, as we purpose, as we believe, and when the world finally learns that America is indivisible, then the world will learn how truly and profoundly great and powerful America is."

Intrigue and Sedition

"I realize personally, my fellow citizens, the peculiar significance of the flag of the United States at this time, because there was a day not many years ago when, although I thought I knew what the flag stood for, it had not penetrated my whole consciousness as it has now."

"If you could have gone with me through the space of the last two years and could have felt the subtle impact of intrigue and sedition and have realized with me that these to whom you have entrusted authority are trustees not only of the power, but of the very spirit and purpose of the United States, you would realize with me that solemnity with which I look upon that sublime symbol of our unity and power."

"I want you to share that consciousness with me. I want you to realize that in what I am saying I am merely your spokesman, merely trying to interpret your thoughts, merely trying to put into inadequate words the purpose that is in your hearts. I regard this day as a day of reeducation to all the ideals of the United States."

"I took the liberty a few weeks ago to ask our fellow-citizens all over the United States to gather together in celebration of this day, the anniversary of the adoption of our present flag as the emblem of the nation."

"I had no legal right to declare it a holiday. I had no legal right to ask for the cessation of business; but when you read the papers tomorrow morning I think you will see that authority was not necessary; that the people of the country were waiting for an opportunity to cease their ordinary business and gather together in united demonstration of their feelings as a nation."

Vindicate Honor of United States

"The inauguration parade is a very interesting thing, but it is painfully interesting to the man who is being inaugurated, because there is ahead of him the hues of responsibilities whose horoscope cannot be cast by any man. But today was interesting because the inauguration parade of the day of my inauguration is more than three years gone by. I have gone through deep waters with you in the meantime."

"This parade was not a demonstration in honor of any man. It was an outpouring of people to demonstrate a great national sentiment. I was not the object of it. I was one citizen among millions whose heart beat in unison with it."

"I felt caught up and buoyed up along the great stream of human purpose which seemed to flow there in front of me by the stand by the White House, and I shall go away from this morning as I came away from that parade, with all the deepest purposes of my heart renewed; and as I see the winds lovingly unfold the beautiful lines of our great flag, I shall seem to see a hand pointing the way of duty, no matter how hard, no matter how long, which we shall tread while we vindicate the glory and honor of the United States."

VICIOUS ATTACK MADE IN BOSTON

STORE-PROPRIETOR, WIFE AND SON ARE VICTIMS

BOSTON, June 15.—An unknown woman stabbed three persons in a dry goods store at 354 Hanover street last evening, and made her escape, leaving no trace of her identity. Her victims were taken to the Relief hospital, suffering from painful wounds.

The woman entered the store conducted by the Slavins just before 3 last evening, and Mrs. Slavin waited on her.

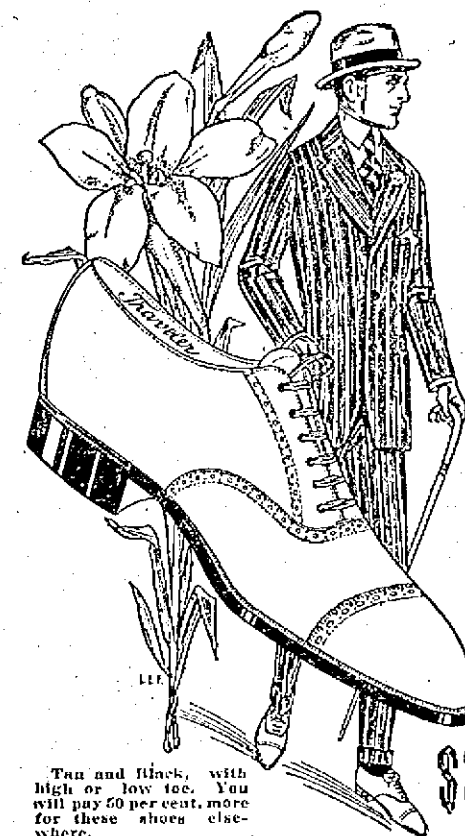

A dispute arose, and the woman suddenly drew a knife and stabbed Mrs. Slavin. The latter screamed and her husband ran to her assistance. The woman at once turned on him, and stabbed him twice. Then the son attempted to aid his parents, only to be met by the ever-ready assailant.

The woman then rushed from the store, hiding her knife in the folds of her skirt as she ran.

BROADWAY CLUB

The Broadway Social & Athletic association held open house at its rooms after the parade. Exercises appropriate to the day were carried out. President T. F. O'Sullivan complimented the members upon their large numbers in the parade and the fine appearance they made. Messrs. Kane & Roark, old time vaudeville artists, entertained the members during the evening. Refreshments were served and the occasion came to a close with all standing and singing "America" and waving Old Glory.

THE SPELLBINDER

Mayor O'Donnell demonstrated his ability to put through successfully a big project on short notice, in planning and carrying out the Preparedness parade of last evening, within two weeks' time. His chief aide in the undertaking was "General Co-operation," for everybody took a hand, and considering the fact that it was the biggest thing in the parade line that Lowell has ever witnessed, there was comparatively little of a disappointing nature and less dissatisfaction over the affair.

Of course there were some who didn't like the places in line assigned them, but Senator Lowell couldn't have pleased everybody under similar circumstances. The idea of the committee in arranging the roster was to divide up the music evenly so that all would have an opportunity to march within a reasonable time, and the parade line was accordingly divided into two parts. This was done because many of the organizations couldn't afford to engage music nor could the city provide them, and in order to insure good marching all organizations had to march to music.

That was one reason why the parade was so successful. Another reason was certain obligations of the committee to some of the organizations appearing in line. Annually the Elks, all over the country observe Flag day; it is a matter of ritual. The Elks, therefore, were obliged to have exercises on that day, and on other occasions. They agreed to postpone their exercises until after the parade and only asked in return that they be assigned a position as near the front of the line as possible, in order that they might get back to their hall before the night and could go on with their duties.

The Middlesex street business men wanted the parade to pass along the white way of that section but the committee found it impossible to grant their request on account of the length of the parade; the fact that there were hundreds of women and young people in line, making a short route necessary and because of the grade crossing there. It was suggested that the parade be formed on Broadway street, but again the length of the parade put this suggestion out of commission for in order to form properly it was necessary to have a number of side and intersecting streets for the different divisions to occupy in line up and down square at the junction of Gorbam, Central and Thorndike streets made an ideal formation point for so large a lineup. A parade of the magnitude of last night's affair made up for a large part of undrilled organizations has never been attempted before in this city, and surely its promoters deserve great credit.

The Bridge Contract

The contract for the new Pawtucket bridge has been given out and that means that the bridge will be a reality at last. After a lengthy discussion yesterday afternoon the municipal council formally voted the contract to the National Engineering company, and no further time will be lost in beginning the work which has been under discussion for over a year. This year's government found itself up against a succession of obstacles and obstructions but finally overcame all of them and to the probable disappointment of some who desired to see the government fall down on the proposition as its predecessors did, is ready to proceed with the work.

Of course the public is naturally interested in the identity of the contractors who are to do the work. Among contractors and building interests they are already favorably known by their work in this city. The National Engineering company was organized in Lowell, in the latter part of 1915 to absorb the contracting business of F. Q. Barrows & Company. The officers of the company are all well known in the contracting field. Mr. Barrows, the vice-president and general manager, is a Harvard graduate, class of 1906, formerly associated with the Henshield Construction company, of New York and Paris. Mr. Page, the general superintendent of construction for the Swift interests in Chicago. Mr. McQuay, the secretary was formerly active in the dredging business in Boston and Portland, and Captain Doe, who is the president of the company represents the local interests.

In Lowell, last year this company did nearly $1,000,000 worth of work for the U. S. Cartridge Co., the R. H. Phillips Co., the Newton Mfg. Co., and the American Hide and Leather company besides other industrial plants in Worcester, Portsmouth and Boston. The remarkable speed record made by them on the South Lowell plant of the U. S. Cartridge Co. is still a topic of discussion among builders, and at the same time the company is reported to have put up a five story concrete building in Boston for the American Steam Gauge and Valve company in 11 days. While with the Henshield company Mr. Barrows and some of his associates had a wide experience in bridge building in many important structures both in the United States and in France. Mr. Van Deerin, formerly chief engineer of the Henshield company is chief engineer of the N.E.C. and with Mr. Ramsey, local superintendent of construction of the company is already well known in local circles.

Mayor O'Donnell put up a hard and persistent fight to get the bridge started this year, as he had promised to do before election. Last year's government after discussing the project for a whole year, left the matter in a state of chaos for its successors and only by continuous and persistent effort has the municipal council finally disposed of the multitudinous preliminaries without which no bridge could ever be built.

Demand for More Policemen

The demand for additional policemen becomes greater each day. Since the warm weather came the Sunday auto traffic is becoming tremendous and traffic officers are needed at least at Central and Merrimack streets and in Merrimack square on Sundays. There are also demands for traffic officers at Moody and Allen streets and at Pawtucket square, and at the present time there is an open traffic post. Then there are demands for police on the parks and commons during the summer months. The introduction of the deer family at Fort Hill park has been followed by a great increase in the number of visitors to the park and those who have gone there to see the deer have become so favorably impressed with the beauty of the park that they have returned and brought others and now the largest crowds that have ever been known to visit Fort Hill are gathering there daily. It would seem that after many years Lowell's most picturesque breathing spot, is at last appreciated by the public. On account of the restrictions on the old Fair Grounds, the circus and Wild West show cannot hire that land this year, and hence when the advance men came here to look for locations, one of them sought out Shedd park, and going to the summit of Fort Hill surveyed the area beneath him, with a view to locating a site, which of course he subsequently found was out of the question. Speaking of his visit to Fort Hill to Secretary John H. Murphy, of the board of trade, the circus man said: "I have visited all of the parks of the principal cities of the United States but I want to say for your Fort Hill park, that for a park of its size this country does not contain a finer park, for natural beauty and picturesque layout. I should think it would be crowded with people all the time."

With a view to providing a few extra officers without necessitating the raising of more money this year, Mayor O'Donnell has asked the superintendent of police to make an analysis of his appropriation, together with an estimate of his departmental expenses for the remainder of the year to ascertain if there will be a sufficient amount of money left in the appropriation to permit of the employment of a few more men, for the summer months. During the first half of the year the expenses of the police department have been kept down to a minimum, and for that reason the mayor is of the opinion that it may be possible to put on a few men, as they are badly needed. Lowell has one of the smallest police forces per population of any city in the country.

WORCESTER, June 15.—Senator Robert M. Washburn of the first Worcester district, who was obliged to give up his duties at the state house early in the recent session of the general court and go to Baltimore for a rest in an attempt to recover his health, announced yesterday his retirement from politics, temporarily at least. He will not be a candidate for re-election to the senate next fall.

ton parade was 42,000 and it was, in reality, a state affair, so that Lowell's showing last night, considering size and all else, was away ahead of Boston. Asked what he thought of the parade, Justice Carroll said: "It was the finest parade I have ever seen outside of New York."

Parade Started on Time

It was 7:45 o'clock, and not a minute later, when Chief Marshal John Jacob Rogers gave the order to march, and the staff moved forward, followed closely by the military division. Thirty-five minutes later, two mounted policemen, advance agents for the parade, passed the reviewing stand. Stiles' Military band of Lynn appeared next, playing Reaves' "See-

James F. O'Donnell, Bishop Henri da Silva, Rev. C. E. Fisher, D.D., Gen. Adelbert Ames and Warren M. Powers of the committee on arrangements and others.

Decorations

The decorations throughout the city were profuse and beautiful, and some of the big stores had elaborate displays. Although bunting and flags were artistically arranged on different buildings throughout the city, inasmuch as yesterday was Flag day, the decorations on The Sun building, which consisted entirely of flags, was in keeping with the day. Flags were displayed from every window on the front of the building, while from the parapet on the roof there was a line of flags. There were 115 flags in all, not including the large American flag which floated from the top of the flagpole 150 feet above the street, and the American flag which hung over the entrance to the building. During the day the flags, wafted by a gentle breeze, floated to and fro, and when the wind died down in the evening they hung straight downward making a very pretty as well as patriotic decoration.

FIRST DIVISION

The first division, which might be termed the military division, presented an imposing sight, it being composed of the four local companies of the 6th regiment, M.V.M., the Lowell section of battery C, Field Artillery, the three Irish semi-military organizations, six companies of the Angel Guardian cadets, several other guards, the business men's battalion, Spanish War veterans, a detachment of former soldiers and sailors, Sons of veterans, high school regiment, Boys' brigade, Boy Scouts, the O.M.I. cadets and clerks and carriers of the local post office.

The militia companies appeared to advantage and the entire line of this division presented a sight that will long be remembered. It impressed those who witnessed the parade, especially from a standpoint of "preparedness." It was also one of the longest divisions, as it took about half an hour to pass a given point at a good marching pace.

Chief Marshal Pearson

The division was headed by Gen. Gardner W. Pearson, as chief marshal, together with the members of his mounted staff which consisted of Lieut. W. C. MacBrayne of the governor's staff, chief aide, Capt. Lewis G. Hunton, Sixth regiment; Capt. Harold G. Patten, Eighth regiment; Capt. Charles A. Ranlett, formerly of the Eighth regiment; Capt. Mason D. Bryant, Sixth regiment medical corps; Sergt. Harry G. Roberts and a detachment of Sixth regiment scouts.

Then came the Sixth Regiment band led by Sergt. Major George D. Crowell, who acted as drum major and under the direction of Chief Musician Z. I. Bissonnette. The selections played along the line of march were greatly enjoyed by everyone. It was inspiring to say the least and sent a thrill of patriotism to the hearts of the people.

National Guard Companies

Next in order came the four companies of the National Guard headed by Major Colby T. Kittredge of the second battalion of the Sixth regiment with Lieut. Harry G. Sheldon, battalion adjutant as his aid. The members of the companies with one exception wore the olive drab uniforms. The exceptary organizations, namely: The Wolfe Tones Guards, Sheridan Guards and Meagher Guards. Capt. Francis J. Kierce and Lieuts. Michael Monahan and Thomas Kenney were at the head of the Wolfe Tones Guards. There were forty men in line, all attired in blue full dress uniforms.

The Sheridan Guards, headed by Capt. C. H. Daley and Lieuts. James O'Gara and Michael McDermott wore blue uniforms.

The Meagher Guards, forty strong, wearing the regulation blue, were headed by Capt. Jeremiah Leary and

The officers of the A. C. cadets were as follows: Major Alcide Bellefeuille, Co. A, Capt. Charles Rondeau, Lieuts. Joseph Daribault and Armand Belanger; Co. B, Capt. Rodolphe Rondeau, Lieuts. Arthur Lemay and Bernard Bernier; Co. C, Capt. Albert Corcoran, Lieut. Leo Mongeau; Co. D, Capt. Ar-

best organizations of its kind in this part of the country, commanded by Jean Missud, headed the Business Men's battalion. This battalion, which was only recently organized, presented a beautiful sight and they were cheered all along the route of parade. There were four companies in the battalion, and a total of 250 men were in line. Despite the fact that the members had but four or five practice drills they kept an excellent line and every man was in step.

The battalion was led by Col. Butler Ames, A. D. Milliken and Collins Van-

attention in the Fourth of July parade in this city last year.

Army and Navy

Next in order came a detachment of former regular soldiers and sailors with Yeoman L. E. Tucker of the United States naval recruiting station at its head. There were 25 men in line and Yeoman Tucker was assisted in commanding by former Sergt. J. A. Brown of the hospital corps.

Sons of Veterans

The Sons of Veterans to the number of fifty and headed by Commander L. I. Munro, followed. The members were attired in camp uniforms of blue and wore white gloves. Assisting in the command were Fred Fletcher and Charles H. Foote.

High School Regiment

The High School regiment, composed of 12 companies, made an excellent appearance. It was headed by the High School Rifle and Drum corps. The young soldiers were in command of Col. Herbert T. Kerrigan, with a staff comprising Lieut. Col. Raymond P. Bourgeois, Regt. Adj. R. B. Nichols, Regt. Quartermaster William Barlosky and Capt. C. H. O'Donnell and Lieut. R. E. Cardell as regimental orderlies.

Boys' Brigade

Next in order came the Boys' Brigade of the First Trinitarian church, led by Commander George F. Lockhart and the chaplain, Rev. Raymond C. Clapp. Following the brigade were eight members of the Nashua, N. H., Boys' Brigade headed by Capt. Harry S. Cutler.

Boy Scouts

Another feature of this division was the 25 troops of the Boy Scouts. The regulation scout uniforms were worn and almost every boy carried an American flag. The scouts were led by Scout Commissioner Luther W. Faulstich and Scout Executives Alex Williams and James Kibberd. They made an excellent showing in numbers, marching and general appearance.

O.M.I. Cadets

The O.M.I. Cadets, who were next in line, presented a splendid alignment. Their marching, from the largest boy to the smallest, was truly marvelous. Owing to some misunderstanding the Cadets were without their corps, it having previously been engaged by the United States Cartridge Co. Nevertheless, even without the band, the boys kept good step. Major William Conroy was in command. The boys were attired in their new uniforms, blue brass-buttoned coats, West Point style, and white duck pants. One of the features of this detachment was a number of boys dressed all in white, carrying large American flags held by the edges.

Postoffice Employees

One of the big features of this division was that of the employees of the local postoffice, headed by the Letter Carriers' band of Boston. The men marched excellently and maintained a good line.

The postoffice men were headed by Postmaster Edward Cheney, owing to the absence of Postmaster Meehan in St. Louis. On Mr. Cheney's staff were Lieut. George S. Howard, as adjutant; Supt. of Mails Edwin H. Cooke and Supt. of Delivery Albion S. Ashworth.

The letter carriers wore their regulation uniform, with red carnations in their buttonholes and each carried a along the line hats went off and cheer after cheer went up. Yet there was nothing of show or of ostentation in their manner. They marched like drilled ranks and their marshals and aides had the various divisions in perfect control. After the sober uniforms of the soldiers in the first division, the dresses of the women gave refreshing variety, but what was admired most was their spirit and their splendid discipline. There was also a wonderful lesson of democracy in the spectacle. Daughter of veteran, nurse, college graduate, mill girl, society leader and office girl marched along under the Stars and Stripes in one grand American sisterhood. No mention of the parade can be made for years to come that will not recall the splendid showing of the women of Lowell, and those who made the showing possible are entitled to a hearty share of credit.

At the head of the division marched

THOMAS J. O'DONNELL, Chief of Staff

D.A.N. Band

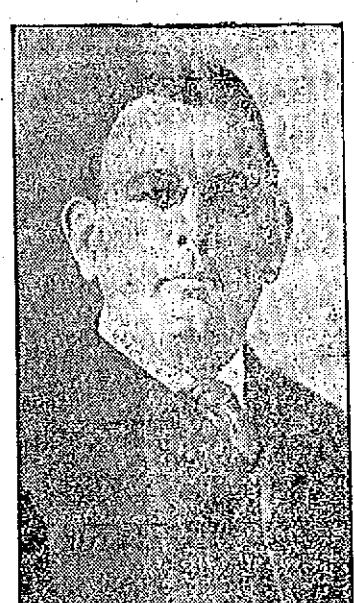

The Lowell Military band was followed by one of the most inspiring divisions in the parade, the Daughters of the American Revolution, Molly Varman, Lydia Darrah and Old Bay State chapters. Marching in true soldier fashion, dressed in white with sashes of red, white and blue and headed by a captain with the motto "D.A.R.—for Home and Country," borne by Mrs. Joseph Barber, they made a splendid showing. Commanding the three chapters were Mrs. Burton H. Wiggin, major, Mrs. Charles E. Howes, color bearer, and escorts, Mrs. Charles K. Miller and Mrs. Robert Fulton. In command of the various companies were Mrs. A. W. Thompson, Miss Belle Horner, Mrs.

Next in order came the Lowell section of battery C, Field Artillery, whose headquarters are at Methuen, Mass. There were 25 men in this feature. They were attired in olive drab uniforms and were commanded by Lieut. Sumner H. Needham, Sergt. Edward Watts and Corp. George Emley.

Irish Semi-Military Companies

Then came the three Irish semi-mil-

Angel Guardian Cadets

Then came the Angel Guardian cadets led by the Angel Guardian band of 22 pieces. Arthur Gionet was the director of the band. There were six companies of the A. C. cadets and four companies of French-American military organizations.

The cadets were commanded by Major Alcide Bellefeuille. There were about 25 men in each company, their uniforms being blue with gold trimmings. They also wore white gloves.

The members of Garde Frontenac wore blue uniforms trimmed with yellow braid while the members of the Garde d'Honneur were attired in grey

Spanish War Veterans

Then came the United Spanish War Veterans, led by Commander Alexander D. Mitchell. A feature of this contingent was a large American flag, 36 by 26 feet which was carried by a number of the veterans, it being the same flag that attracted so much flag. The clerks were dressed in dark colored suits and wore white ties and white gloves and carried flags.

SECOND DIVISION

The enthusiasm created by the marching part of the First Division was as nothing compared to that aroused by the Second Division. This was due in greatest part to the presence of the women in the parade, two by two, four by four, in tens, in scores, in hundreds they marched along in splendid order, earnestly and seriously showing their interest in the patriotic call. The women in the parade were nothing short of magnificent, and as they swung into sight all

John K. Whittier, Miss Leslie Pullen and Mrs. Charles C. Barron. The dress of the woman in this division was simple but effectively uniform. Mrs. Wiggin, Mrs. Dudley L. Page and Mrs. Charles K. Miller were the chapter regents.

From Tewksbury

The state hospital at Tewksbury made an impressive showing with a dozen doctors, about 100 nurses and many other employees of the institution. The nurses were dressed in their attractive uniforms and caps with immaculate aprons, and the physicians were in sanitary white duck. All carried American flags. The delegation was in charge of Dr. G. A.

Continued

Merce and Dr. John H. Nichols and he nurses were in charge of their respective departments. Miss Laura McEachern, the public cheered lustily as this splendid group went by.

City Districts

Then followed groups of ladies from Belvidere, Centralville and Pawtucket in orderly array. An especially attractive showing was made by the ladies of Belvidere, one group of whom wore silk sweaters of every conceivable shade. Contrasted with the severe uniforms and dresses of most of the marchers this group looked like an animated bouquet of summer flowers, especially as they fluted over each shoulder. The ladies in charge of the various divisions in this section were "on to their job" and looked on at the square remarked how they marked time while waiting for instructions.

Marching of "America"

When the ladies from the various city sections reached the square, the order was given to halt and the first section bands struck up "America." The crowd all along the line of march took up the refrain, the high rich voices of the women blending with the strong voices of the men as the solemn anthem rose from the first division to the last. Stirred by patriotic emotion, the men on the sidewalks took off their hats and all joined in the singing.

College Club

Impressive in a different sort of way was the college club, under the general direction of Mrs. R. F. Mardon and Mrs. Alvah Sturges, who had charge of the "suburban section." The serious marching women kept splendid order and their caps and gowns gave them unique distinction. No group in the parade was more impressive. About 100 were in line under the direction of Miss Mary Killpatrick. To this section of Towkissbury contributed a score of marchers in charge of Rev. Sarah Dixon and the Mystery club of Billerica contributed 30 or 40 in charge of Miss Elizabeth Walker.

Daughters of Liberty

Lady Franklin council, Daughters of Liberty, made a fine showing with their float, the first in the parade. It represented the famous story of Molly Pitcher, the gallant, and it took 25 women and 10 men to present the tableau. Many members of the council marched and carried flags. Leading the Daughters of Liberty were State Council Mrs. Ethel Whitney and Mrs. Caroline Crawford. Then came the Daughters of Veterans and the Looian camp, Campfire Girls of America from North Chelmsford, their Indian costumes making a charming picture.

Business Women

Serious, alert and splendidly disciplined marched the business women, led by Miss Martha P. Worcester, Miss Ella M. Wells, Miss Nora Donohoe and Miss Florence Harshorn. First came the stenographers, fifty or so, in charge of Miss Alice Cox, assisted by Miss Irene Cote. All the girls in this section were in white and carried flags. A large flag six feet by ten was borne. The milliners made an exceptionally fine showing, headed by stately Miss Ella M. Burke, with Miss Mary Louise Deland as captain. Nurses from the Lowell hospitals made a splendid showing, each group in its distinctive uniform, Mrs. E. D. Holden and Mrs. A. J. Murkland were the captains.

Industrial Section

No section of the parade appealed more strongly to those looking on than the industrial section in which marched so many groups of entirely working girls. Practically all of the mills were represented, and as they marched by, headed by the municipal band of Lynn, they were cheered to the echo. Mrs. H. D. Pickering, Mrs. William E. Mitchell, Mrs. George E. Garrity and Mrs. Thomas R. Doe were in charge of this division and they had every reason to feel proud of it. The Tremont and Suffolk and the U. S. Worsted company had large representations. Almost 400 women turned out from the Massachusetts cotton mills of whom over 100 were Polish women, who have been drilling for weeks or more. Dora Ciesla was marshal of the Polish group, assisted by Victoria Welch and Florence Dziok. The Shaw Stocking company made a good showing, with a delegation of 200, and then followed groups of employees from the Lawrence Manufacturing Co., Scripture's laundry, Harbor Mfg. Co., Ideal Comb Co., Merrimack Mfg. Co., Federal Shoe Co., and George H. Snow Co.

THIRD DIVISION

The most effective page of preparedness was sounded in the third division, in which participated about 5,000 men and women, whose business it is to manufacture ammunition of war. According to many this division was one of the most important in the entire parade and it came in the nature of a surprise. The officials and employees of the United States Cartridge Co. spared no time, efforts or money to make their end of the parade one of the largest and most attractive and they credit it may be said that they succeeded. The men and women devoted considerable time to drilling, the large garage of the company having been placed at their disposal and their training brought good results.

Over 3,000 small American flags and 2,000 yards of red, white and blue bunting were used in the decorative features, the women wearing the bunting about their bodies, while each marcher carried the national colors. The appearance of this body of workers was very fine, while the marching was also good.

Lowell Lodge of Elks

Following the cartridge makers came the members of the Lowell Lodge of Elks, headed by James E. Donnelly as marshal. The officers of the lodge appeared in frock coats and wearing silk hats came first and they were followed by about 200 members of the organization, who wore straw hats and carried flags. This body of men made a fine appearance and their marching was attractive.

The Haverhill Military band supplied music for the Elks and the officers of the lodge were William Scott, Eugene Y. Brown, E. W. Killpatrick, Harry Pitts, Joseph Haggerty, C. F. Gilmore, C. J. Hagan, Charles H. Moily, W. H. Mahan, Fred H. Rourke, W. D. Regan, F. A. Pilling and A. W. Churchill.

Knights of Pythias

A feature of the Knights of Pythias division, which was composed of the four local lodges of the organization in one unit, was the carrying of a huge American flag by 30 members. This section was composed of about 200 men. The roster was as follows:

Daniel E. Starkey, marshal

Charles S. Pettigrew, aide

Samuel H. Cohn, lodge

Lowell lodge

Wameet lodge

Mathews

The members of the Mathew Temperance institute turned out 150 strong, and they made a fine showing. The men wore white gloves and straw hats and carried flags. A feature of the marchers was the word "Preparedness" spelled on cards one letter on the breast of each man in the first row. All members wore the society badges. Patrick J. Kane was marshal of this section.

Newton Mfg. Co.

The rear of this division was taken up by the employees of the Newton Mfg. Co., about 200 in number, headed by John G. Burrows as marshal. Charles Winkler impersonated "Uncle Sam." The lineup of the company was as follows:

John I. Burrows, marshal

Uncle Sam (Charles Winkler)

Heads of Departments: Claude Dertman, Harry Copp, James Spray, William Waugh, Alfred Hiler, Arthur Bean

FOURTH DIVISION

The fourth division was composed of employees of the Lowell Bleachery Co., the Saco-Lowell shops, Lowell acie of Eagles and Knights of Columbus and A.O.H. This division was headed by William F. Thornton as marshal and proved very interesting, especially the K. of C. and Eagles' sections. This division was featured with two floats, one by the Lowell Bleachery Co. and the other by the Saco-Lowell shops, two splendid pageants.

The front of the division was taken up by the employees of the Lowell Bleachery Co., who had a Liberty bell float emblematic of the spirit of 1776. It was made up of bunting appropriately arranged with miniature incandescents of varied colors, Uncle Sam and Columbia.

Saco-Lowell

The employees of the Saco-Lowell shops came next with several hundred men in line. A miniature Zeppelin mounted on a truck, richly decorated with the national colors was the feature of this section. Howard Wood acted as marshal and his aide was William Edney. The division commanders were Stewart Shaw and Michael Monahan, while the captains were Harry Allen, William Kelly, Edward Hadden, Frank Osborne, John Ready, Eugene Page, Paul Fawcett, Patrick Monahan, Charles Smith and Jim Jennings. The division commander for the K. of C. section of the Saco-Lowell was John Conley, while the captains were Shepard Harral, William H. Cronin, William F. Savage and George W. Faneuf.

Eagles

The Eagles were well represented in the fourth division, for over 700 members of the order turned out. A feature of this section was the front, which was taken up by 30 members, uniformed, of the organization, 10 policemen, 10 firemen and 10 street car conductors and motormen. Thomas H. Corcoran acted as marshal. The Lowell Cadet band headed the organization and following the street car men were the degree staff of the Eagles in uniforms. The members of the order followed, all wearing straw hats and carrying flags. This section made a very fine showing.

K. of C.

The rear of the fourth division, but not the least in appearance, was taken up by the members of the Knights of Columbus, headed by the Lawrence Brass band. Thomas B. Delaney was marshal and he was escorted by Jos. F. Roarke, grand knight and Dr. Hugh Walker, navigator.

The members of the fourth degree, attired in Prince Albert coats and wearing silk hats, baldric, grey gloves and carrying flags, were in the front of the line. They were followed by about 225 members of the society, all neatly dressed and presenting a fine appearance.

A.O.H.

A detachment of the local divisions of the Ancient Order of Hibernians formed a section of the fourth division.

The men carried small flags and they marched exceedingly well. They were headed by the Irish Volunteer Drum Corps and their marshal was Daniel Cosgrove and other division officers.

FIFTH DIVISION

The industrial section of the city was well represented in the fifth division, which was marshalled by Frank Haggerty. First came Teel's band of Boston which played the strains of a march for the 200 or more employees of the Lowell Electric Light corporation. Men from the offices and plant of the company joined together and displayed a knowledge of military marching.

Following the electrical employees marched a delegation from the Lowell board of trade, led by Secretary John Murphy. True the marchers represented but a small part of the board membership, but it was explained that the majority of the members are connected either with the industries of the city or the Business Men's battalion. The members in line marched with a military step, however, and some of them carried a huge American flag horizontally caught by the edges.

Featured by an electric auto truck showing the spirit of '76, the American Express Co. was very conspicuous. The employees of the company marched in line, each carrying an American flag.

For some reason there was a break in the parade at this point and the presence of children in the street led many to believe that the parade was once. Not so, however, for in a few minutes appeared a banner heralding the arrival of the New England Telephone & Telegraph Co. employees. In the telephone section was a large number of young women attired in white, operators and employees of the counting department. Besides two large handsome flags spread out and upheld by the girls, each person in the section carried a small American flag, lighted by an incandescent bulb. The male employees of the company, more than a hundred strong, followed. They won applause along the lines and many hellos were launched at the girls.

The J. I. Chalfoux store employees contributed one of the most pleasing spectacles of the division, if not of the entire parade. Over 200, by actual count, marched under the banners of this store. The young women, who turned out in fully as large numbers as the men, wore white dresses and carried sweaters and the men were dressed in white duck trousers, a coat and straw hats. Each person carried a small American flag with tiny red, white and blue lights which showed up with fine effect even at a distance. The Chalfoux department marched to music furnished by the Municipal band.

The Gilbride Company

The Gilbride employees, both men and women, came next. The young women were neatly attired in white and together with the men marched in the same precision that marked the other sections. They were led by Mr. John

PREMIER ASQUITH CAUSE OF WRECK

Calls Sea Fight Rout for Kaiser—Settlement Needed in Ireland

LADY BANK, Scotland, June 15.—In observance of the 30th anniversary of his election to the house of commons from East Fife, Premier Asquith yesterday visited his constituency for the first time since the outbreak of the war, addressing a great meeting of his supporters and many who in past years have been his opponents.

The premier made a touching reference to the death of Field Marshal Earl Kitchener as "leaving a place in our constitutional life that none else can fill and a memory that will live as long as the British empire."

Lord Kitchener had bequeathed to the country an array of armies, said the premier, and it was for the country to make the best use of these.

In a survey of the situation, Premier Asquith declared that the Russian advance was one of the most brilliant features of the war.

The Italian resistance to the Austrian onslaught, Mr. Asquith said, every day was becoming more effective.

As for the French, nothing could exceed the valor with which they were maintaining the defense of Verdun. Co-operation among the general staffs of the allies was becoming more intimate and complete every month.

British assistance had been sent to General Joffre, and the steps which would be taken were those dictated by sound strategy.

"This war is not merely a struggle of armies," the premier continued. "It is a struggle of general and economic resources, and these will prove in the long run to be the deciding factor."

After speaking of the effectiveness of the navy's blockade, Mr. Asquith said:

"Owing to the rashness of the enemy we were allowed to see another and more stirring, dramatic aspect of the navy's quality a fortnight ago. The naval action on May 31 was worthy of the best and most treasured traditions of the British navy."

"The Germans were driven back into their ports without so much as making an effort to grapple with the main body of our grand fleet, and had the temerity to claim what really was a rout as a complete victory."

"A couple more such victories and there will be nothing left of the German navy worth speaking about. The truth is slowly leaking out, and its full extent is not yet realized or appreciated."

In reference to Ireland Mr. Asquith said the recent rioting, leading to the loss of many innocent lives, had created a situation which seemed to a majority of responsible Irishmen all parties to call for a settlement.

The history of the relations between Great Britain and Ireland exhibited a tragic series of missed or misused opportunities.

"Don't let us add another to their number," said the premier.

What he desired, he explained, was a provisional settlement, for when the war came to an end the country would have to take stock of its internal relations, the fabric of the empire would have to be refashioned and relations between Great Britain and Ireland and the dominions would of necessity be brought into close and connected review.

COCONUT OIL FINE FOR WASHING HAIR

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulled coconut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly.

The latter rinses out easily, and leaves every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulled coconut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

Flagman and Engineer Blamed for Disaster at Bradford, R. I.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Blame for the passenger wreck on the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad at Bradford, R. I., April 17, in which five persons were killed and 17 injured, was placed by the interstate commerce commission today on the failure of Flagman Coombs and Engineer Mansfield to attend signals properly.

Old fashioned wooden cars and gas lights contributed to the fatalities, the report said.

It pointed out that had the cars been of modern steel construction they would not have been destroyed by fire and it would have been possible to save more lives.

The report presents a tabulation of nine accidents on the New Haven since July, 1911, wherein employees failed to obey signals or properly protect their trains as required by rules and showing that in all 65 persons were killed and 475 persons injured.

"The recurrence of such distressing accidents," says the report in conclusion, "directs attention forcibly to the fact that competent and experienced employees are not infallible, as it is to be noted in each instance that these accidents were due to the same fundamental cause, namely, fallibility of the human element responsible for the safe operation of trains."

"Wreck prevention is the highest duty of railroads. This obligation is not satisfied by merely making rules which prove insufficient in operation. If the human element repeatedly fails, then safety requires that the highest degree of mechanical skill be applied to properly supplement the human element as to the particular point of danger."

The commission's investigation developed that the wrecked train arrived at Bradford seven minutes before the accident, which allowed Flagman Coombs time in which to walk back a proper distance to protect his train.

Tests showed that Coombs had time to go back 2600 feet, but had gone only 1120 feet when he was passed by the train which crashed into the halted train at Bradford.

"Had the flagman exercised the proper degree of care under the circumstances prevailing and hastened back immediately," the report says, "there is every reason to believe that he could and would have warned the engineer of the other train in plenty of time to have permitted him to stop before colliding."

Tests indicated that the electric signals were working properly, and while there is evidence that some fog existed it was not dense enough to obscure Engineer Mansfield's view of signals.

RATS IN CITY HALL

No, Not in Lowell, But in the Municipal Palace at Brockton—Board of Health Asked to Take Action

BROCKTON, June 15.—City hall has been invaded by a small army of mice and rats. Some of the women clerks are on the ragged edge of nervous prostration. The office of Mayor John S. Burbank, and that of City Clerk Calvin R. Barrett, appear to be the favorite fields for the gambling rats and mice, which, according to varying estimates, are from an inch to two feet long.

City Messenger Seth L. French made an effort to stop the advancing army with a mouse trap, but with little effect, although he nailed seven yesterday. The board of health has been asked to take action.

Hughes, Jr., son of the republican nominee for the presidency, is an active believer in preparedness and has backed up his belief by enrolling in the Plattsburg business men's military training camp. The picture shows him lined up at the camp with his comrades. Mr. Hughes is a lawyer by profession, with his office in New York city. He was graduated from Brown university, his father's alma mater also, in 1909, and from Harvard law school in 1911. He was married on June 17, 1914, to Miss Marjory Bruce Stuart of New York city.

BRIDGE FLOORING GAVE WAY

Traffic over the Pawtucket bridge was impeded for about an hour this morning as a result of one of the rear wheels of a heavy cart loaded with coal going through the planking of the roadway. The accident happened about 8:30 o'clock and the planking which sunk through the wood flooring up to the axle was so firmly wedged that it proved quite a task to extricate it. The street department was notified and Commissioner Morse soon had his "wrecking" crew on the scene and with the assistance of planks and jacks the wagon was raised and drawn to a place of safety on the Pawtucketville side.

Edna Goodrich's classic beauty is greatly enhanced by the artistic drapery which she wears as the Italian model in this absorbing story. Be sure to see the magnificent photoplay at your very first opportunity. You'll never regret having made a determined effort to see it.

Another splendid five-act feature play which will also be shown at the popular Merrimack Square theatre today, Friday and Saturday will be "The Reapers," starring that powerful stage and screen star, John Mason. It is to be noticed that whenever the name of John Mason appears on the program of the Merrimack Square theatre, crowded houses always follow. What must be expected when it is announced that this celebrated luminary will appear in one of his mightiest successes, "The Reapers?" The word to the wise is attend as early as possible and avoid the disappointment of being turned away or being forced to stand throughout the entire show. "The Reapers" is a play which goes to the very root of human happiness, into the causes which make life worth living. The play ends with the restoration of man's belief in God and in woman. What theme could command more genuine interest? It is a play in which every one will take a personal interest. For it is easy to imagine one's own self in the same situation. Besides these two exceptional plays, just referred to, the performances for the rest of the week at the Merrimack Square theatre will consist of a very amusing L-Ro comedy, the educational Burton Holmes travel pictures of foreign lands and a number of other pictures, none of which you can afford to miss.

OWI THEATRE

George Walsh and Doris Pawn, two of the most popular stars in the motion picture world, will again be seen at the Owl theatre this afternoon and evening in the gripping five-part Fox photoplay, "Blue Blood and Red." Telling a story of a young college man's experience and romance in the west, it is one which is bound to please. Other excellent attractions will also be presented at the Owl theatre today.

LOWELL WINS FROM LYNN

Lohman Pitched Masterly Game and His Teammates Landed on Harrington—Score 3 to 2

Special to The Sun.

LYNN, Mass., June 15.—Lowell's bunched hits in the second inning of yesterday's game at Ocean Park, which sent three runs across the plate proved sufficient to be too much of a lead for Lynn to overcome and Harry Lord's Spindle City crew romped home with the matinee 3-2.

Lynn battled hard to overcome Lowell's big lead and failed to puncture Zeke Lohman's delivery to any extent until the sixth chapter when two runs crossed the pentagon. Thereafter Lynn got men on the sacks twice but the driver lacked the necessary punch to hit the tying tally over the plate.

Billy Harrington made his debut in a Lynn uniform after four years' absence and pitched a good game on the side of the fatal second team. Billy had his curve ball working well and many times got out of bad holes by good headwork making the Lowell men hit bad balls. Harrington also contributed a ringing double to the box score on his first appearance at the plate.

Lohman's work in the box was of the same character which has featured his pitching during the season thus far. Zeke was nipped for five hits two of which were doubles but not any with the exception of one hit out safely to left in the sixth inning in Lynn's run getting. Lohman was mainly responsible for Lowell's win as it was his crash in the second which sent the Spindle City's third run home.

Jud Daley and Earl Stimpson rival left gardeners contributed feature plays, the Lowell man carrying off the honors, however, with a sliding catch off Prysock in the ninth. Daley also backed up on a couple of occasions and made two fine catches of long drives. Tom Denoville was also in the line of the night with a double killing unassisted.

After Kane had died in the first Lord walked, but Briggs lined to Denoville and Lord was doubled off the bag. In Lynn's half Gleason beat out a hit to Torphy but Torphy forced out at second Lord to Downey. Orr cut tried to steal but was nailed. Kihullen to Torphy. Daley grounded to Kane.

The second saw all of Lowell's scores. Barrows opened with a drive for two bases to deep right. Downey flied to Daley. Stimpson walked. Kihullen hit into the right field bleachers for two bases scoring Barrows. Stimpson scored on Torphy's long hit to Daley. Lohman scored Kihullen with a stinger to left but Kane ended the inning by being thrown out by Conley. Prysock doubled with a drive down but was left as Conley rolled out to Downey.

Lowell died easily in the third but with Harris out of the way Harrington

Flah, who has done considerable flying in Mexico, planned to show the people of Lynn how easy it is for aeroplanes to bombard cities. He had no difficulty in rising from the old race track in Saugus.

The Lynn club was having a hard time trying to solve the pitching of Lohman of Lowell when the biplane flew above Ocean Park and the spectators derived much enjoyment by shouting to Lohman that he was due to make an ascension. Just as Lohman started to pitch Sprague dropped one of the bombs which exploded perfectly, scattering lamp black.

Flah then headed for Saugus, but before he got his bearings a heavy fog closed in on him.

For a while the pilot was at sea, literally as well as figuratively. He only discovered that he was above the Point of Pines. Then the bombs began to explode and for a few seconds Flah and Sprague were in a bad way. After ascertaining that no great harm had been done, Flah continued his course to Saugus. He believes that the vibration of the machine caused the acid in the bombs to wash against the fuses, in turn detonating the explosive.

WILL MATTY COME BACK

In Christy Mathewson going to flash the same sensational comeback that Cy Young did in 1907 just when everyone had figured him as completely through?

In many ways, the records of Mathewson and Young parallel each other. Just recently it seemed that they would diverge—that Mathewson had reached the end—but the great showing by "Big Six" during the past month, has led many to hope that he too will do as Young did.

Young broke into the majors back in 1890. For ten years he starred with the Cleveland club, the St. Louis Cardinals, and, in 1901, was sold to the Red Sox. It was the brilliant pitching of Cy during 1903 and 1904 that enabled the Bostonians to win two pennants and one world's championship.

But in 1905 something went amiss with Young's arm. The old whip wouldn't crack as it had in the other years; the old zipp was gone from the ball. The opposition clubbers found little or no difficulty in swatting the heavens of the veteran.

Just about then the "wise ones" began to chant the swan song. They predicted that Young was through. "He's been pitching for sixteen years and no matter how good a man is he can't go on forever," they declared. "Furthermore, Cy is thirty-eight years old—an age far beyond the athletic prime."

When Young turned in his 1905 season it was found that he has won only 18 of the 37 combats in which he had figured. Young's showing for 1906 was even worse. He won only 15 out of 31 games and didn't seem able to go the route. He finished the season with an average of .382—the worst he ever amassed. That convinced the bulk of the fans that Cy was through.

But the Red Sox manager wouldn't "can" Cy. He figured that his great work for the Red Sox in the other years merited his keeping him for another season, even if Cy did nothing but coaching duty.

And so Cy, then thirty-nine years old, was kept on the Red Sox roster, while the fans clamored for his banishment to the Old Men's Home. That probably peeved him a bit, because, after having his arm tinkered here and there, he begged for a change and was traded to the Yankees in 1907. He did and won 22 out of 37 combats, for a pitching average of .595. The next season—1908—Cy won 21 out of 32 games for an average of .556, which is quite a healthy showing for a 41-year-old hurler. On June 30, 1908, he shut out the Yankees without a hit, only one man reaching first.

In 1909 he went back to the Cleveland club and won 19 out of 34 games. The following year—1910—he figured in 17 games and won 10. In 1911 he took unto himself a job with the Boston Braves and won four out of nine starts. He decided then that he was getting a bit too old to pitch, being forty-four years old at the time, and he retired from the trade.

Reviewing Young's record from the end of the 1906 campaign when he was considered "all through" until the time he actually quit, we find that he won 73 and lost only 56 games, giving him a grand average of .567 for the five years from 1907 to 1911 inclusive.

Now let us consider the case of Mathewson:

Matty joined the Giants in 1900. Over a sweep of 15 seasons—from 1900 until the end of the 1914 season, the big blond hurler was the king pin of the Giant pitching staff. But late in the 1914 season he contracted "armitis," as did Young at the end of his sixteenth year.

In 1915 Matty, then in his sixteenth year as a major performer, was of no real value to his club. His arm seemed gone. He won only eight out of his twenty-two starts and some of these victories were of the fluke order. Before the season ended, the "wise ones" declared that Matty was about through.

"He's been pitching for sixteen years and no matter how good a man is he can't go on forever," they said, repeating what the "wise ones" had said about Cy Young back in 1905. The folks pointed out also that Matty was quite an elderly person, as baseballers go, then approaching his thirty-sixth birthday.

But Matty in 1916 seems to be defying what Young did in 1907. He has started off the season at a good rate. His arm trouble seems gone. In his first tryout of the year, "Big Six" didn't look overly good. That is because he merely was giving the wing a workout. But since then he has been pitching valiantly. He hasn't the old speed of his twenty-two years but he is using a spitter and his brain, and by mixing up his delivery, he is breezing along in a way that makes it seem as if he still has a number of years of major league usefulness in his system.

BOMBARDED BALL PARK

AVIATORS DROP BOMBS ON OCEAN PARK, LYNN, DURING LOWELL-LYNN GAME

LYNN, June 15.—Luckily for Farnum F. Fish, a Saugus aviator, and his companion, George E. Sprague of Cliftondale, who essayed a bomb-dropping stunt over Lynn, late yesterday afternoon, five bombs which exploded simultaneously while the biplane was lost in a fog bank above the Point of Pines were of a comparatively harmless type. Had they been bombs loaded with more than a small quantity of explosive, both occupants of the biplane probably would have been killed and the machine demolished at an altitude of several hundred feet.

Sprague was slightly burned on the legs, and his shoes and clothing were burned. He was sitting above a bomb box, but despite the unexpected explosion, retained self-possession, and

The Lowell-Lawrence high school game played at Spalding park yesterday afternoon did not develop into the exciting contest that was expected between these two teams. It was an uninteresting game, both teams playing wild ball and failing to display any form that would class them as All-Schoolboy teams. The home team won the game by the score of 13 to 0.

The local aggregation hammered the Lawrence pitchers for 13 hits. Though the home team was halfhearted, the number, he was wild at times and issued eight free tickets to first base. Lowell also carried off honors in the error column, making six against five misplays of their opponents.

After batting of Lynch, Switzer and Falls featured for Coach Puffer's team, while Meyer and Fleming of the visitors turned in some classy stick work. Fielding features were contributed by Switzer, Hayward and Fleming.

Lowell scored four runs in the first inning and the rest of the game was uninteresting. They added three more in the fourth, four in the fifth and two in the eighth. Lawrence made a good up-hill fight, scoring seven runs in the last three innings. The score:

DRAMATIC EXIT

Kinney, Charged With Larceny, Rides to Trial in His Own Auto

BOSTON, June 15.—Edward E. Kinney, who while in the city established something of a record as a spender of cash, made a brand new record yesterday, when, a prisoner in custody, he sat at the wheel of his high-powered car and started to New York, with his "baiters" as passengers.

Never before in the history of the Commonwealth has a prisoner taken out of the state as a fugitive from justice been allowed to drive his own automobile, and thus bring himself to trial.

Kinney, sometimes called Kindred, shot after a clock yesterday afternoon stepped into his big auto and took the wheel. Two New York detectives and a couple of attorneys accompanied him. Kinney is to be placed on trial on charge of stealing $123,173 from his employers, the Flinn-O'Rourke company, last summer.

Becoming a Social Lion

Kinney arrived here by auto some months ago, while the police of New York and other states were searching for him under the name of Kindred. He rented an expensive suite at 704 Commonwealth avenue and started in to make himself known. He was becoming quite a social lion, when, last Monday evening, just as he was entertaining some friends, the police descended upon him.

Among the stunts Kindred or Kinney had pulled off was the gift of a $500 pool table to the Bay State Automobile association and a $1000 dinner at Back Bay hotel. An unusually complete outfit of clothing, packed in several trunks, and a $1000 hunting outfit were found by the police in his flat.

CUNARD CO. CHARGED WITH NEGLIGENCE IN SUITS—MUNITIONS CARGO AS COMPLAINT

NEW YORK, June 15.—Entire new allegations of negligence against the Cunard Steamship Co., in connection with the sinking of the Lusitania by a German submarine on May 7, 1915, were contained in complaints filed here yesterday in two damage suits instituted in behalf of the heirs of victims of the tragedy. The steamship company is charged with wilfully placing the lives of the vessel's passengers in danger.

The cargo carried by the Lusitania, together with the belligerent appearance given the vessel by a covering of gray paint, invited the submarine attack, according to allegations in the complaints.

The complaints also declare that the concussion of the torpedo explosion caused various explosions among the cargo of munitions, and that the "disturbance" occasioned thereby in the Lusitania, the plaintiffs in both cases are residents of Illinois.

TRIED TO KILL HIS WIFE

GROOM OF FIVE MONTHS THEN ENDED HIS LIFE BY TAKING POISON

BRIDGEPORT, June 15.—Henry Colbert, aged 29, of Westfield, Mass., last night made two attempts to kill his wife and then committed suicide, by swallowing two kinds of poison, draining the contents of two bottles.

"It is better for himself that he is dead," said his wife, Ethel Dutcher Colbert of West Point. He has been drinking heavily since we were married, five months ago.

They eloped and were married in Chatham, N. Y. He turned on the gas while she slept during the night, but she awakened and turned it off. He tried to cut her throat with a razor last evening, when she came out and escaped. When he came home last night his wife called him a coward.

"Watch me and you'll see I'm no coward," he said, as he lifted a bottle of poison and drained the contents. He then picked up the other bottle and swallowed its contents.

THE DAY'S BEST BET

BROOKLYN, June 15.—A contribution of $10 was made yesterday to the fund for the Jewish war sufferers by Harry Cohen of 39 Othman street. This is how it happened:

Julius Rankin of 38 Bay Street bet $10 he could borrow more money from friends in 24 hours than could Cohen. Cohen took the wager, the understanding being that the winner should send the $10 to the relief fund.

Cohen and Rankin did some tall hustling. There was a stipulation that the funds raised must be in cash, and that the lenders were not to be informed of the reason for the "pressing need."

Yesterday the two men, with several others, opened bags and counted out their money. Rankin contained $364 in bills, while Cohen had only $191. It took 30 minutes to count the money, which will now be paid back in full.

DANCED AT THE KASINO

U. S. Cartridge Co. Welfare Association Conducted Big Social Event After Parade

At the close of last evening's parade the employees of the United States Cartridge Co. with their four brass bands held a parade of their own, marching through the principal streets of the city to the Kasino in Thorndike street, where they held a social gathering.

The event, which was in the form of a dancing party, was conducted under the auspices of the Welfare Association for the benefit of the association, and it proved an unprecedented success. So large was the gathering that one time during the evening the hall was taxed to its capacity and dancing was almost impossible. It was figured that over 1800 men and women attended.

The United States Cartridge Co. orchestra of ten pieces furnished music for the dancing, and all present spent a most enjoyable evening. There were no decorations about the hall, but the stage, where the orchestra was seated, was converted into a veritable flower garden. The national colors were much in evidence and the scene was a pretty one.

The financial success of the evening was very flattering to the organization, who were well repaid for their untiring efforts. They were also highly complimented by the numerous members of the organization. Those responsible for the success of the evening were as follows:

General manager, William Regan; assistant general manager, Frank Gold; floor director, Kathryn Lynch; assistant floor director, Daisy O. Abbott; chief aids, Misses M. Morgan, M. Murray, R. Gilchrist, M. O'Hare, Mrs. M. Riley, Mrs. J. Farrell, Mrs. V. Duffy.

of the Massachusetts mill furnished a section of over 100 men after which came the John Hancock Insurance Co., the Metropolitan Insurance Co., and the Lowell Gas Light Co. All marched excellently. The Metropolitan leaders wore dress suits and tall silk hats and looked decidedly slick. This feature was headed by John P. Saunders, Jr., and he has reason to be proud of this showing made by his company.

SIXTH DIVISION

The Sixth Division, led by Marshal Bernard McArdle, displayed a real spirit of patriotism that deeply impressed all who watched it pass by. In the different sections of this division were Poles, Armenians, Italians, Germans, Greeks, Hebrews and other nationalities who, with American flags over their shoulders, marched proudly to the applauding spectators. Some of the men have been in this country but a short while, others are naturalized citizens, but all showed last night that they were true Americans. The natives of the different foreign countries marched along almost shoulder to shoulder and all honored the Stars and Stripes which they carried. This made an inspiring climax to the great parade and sent the spectators, of all classes, home filled with a spirit of patriotism that will not soon die out.

Chelmsford Street Delegations

Broadway Club

York Club

The York club whose members responded in goodly numbers, provided a feature of this division. They were headed by the famous Concord and Lexington Fife and Drum corps, with the men typifying the spirit of the Civil war, and dressed in uniforms of Colonial days. The 100 or more members of the York club in line were led by Dr. J. V. Meigs, president of the club. The music furnished by the Lexington corps, was purely of the old and aided the members materially in marching. Hon. Samuel P. Hadley, former justice in the local police court, started the march with the York club. Like some others who have not gone half the distance in life that he has, Judge Hadley found the pace too fast and slacked. He is believed to have finished with the following division, however. Charles N. Allen, formerly assistant secretary of the navy and governor of Porto Rico, also marched with the York club.

Highland Club

Next in line came the Highland club marching in fine step under the direction of their president, A. G. McCurdy. Each man was dressed in a dark suit and a straw hat. James Scott, a club porter, carried the banner at the head of the delegation.

Mystery Club

The Mystery club of Centerville was led by Fred and John Scanlon and the band team in uniform. Following the members of the baseball team, about 40 men marched in business suits.

Lowell Chauffeurs

The Polish Workers

With over 300 men in line, uniformed by the United Polish Workers of Lowell made an attractive showing marching with a military style that characterized the whole representation. Their uniforms were dark in tone, black shirts and black caps with white ties. Jacob Targ led the workers and the Polish Cadet band played the music for them.

Armenian Club

The Armenian Military and Athletic club turned out something like 50 men. The company wore olive drab uniforms and was led by Capt. Paul Menassian, a former U. S. cavalry officer.

Greek Community

About 350 members of the Greek community, marching under the direction of President Thomas Noulas, made a fine showing as they passed along the street. They were headed by the Bellini band, the members of which were dressed in blue uniforms which were covered by sparkling trimmings. The music furnished by this band was also worthy of special note.

German-American Club

Next in line was the German-American club, with about 50 members in line. The club was led by Carl Heldreich and marched well.

Jewish Community

The Jewish Community was one of the prominent sections of the division. Over 300 men, wearing dark suits and straw hats, followed their leader, Benoit Silverblatt. There were also girls in line, several of whom supported a large flag. The Lawrence Military band furnished music for this group.

Loomfixers

The next unit was the Loomfixers' union of this city, 734, with over 200 members marching. The union marched as though it had gone through some military training. Last in line was the St. Anthony's society, escorted by the Lowell Infantry band. The members of this society, 70 in number, wore attractive uniforms with bright sashes and were led by Fred Dirtezzo, Vincent Marotta and J. Musa.

Two Noted Heroes

The only two men in Lowell who wear the Congressional Medal of Honor and the little 13-starred button of the American Legion of Honor occupied the reviewing stand at city hall last evening. They were Brigadier General Adelbert Ames, who won his medal in the Civil war, and Chief Gunner George Charette, who received his for distinguished service in the Spanish-American war. Chief Gunner Charette was the only representative of the navy on the stand. He is still in active service, and it is thought that in 15 years that he has appeared in full uniform in his native city. Chief Gunner Charette was not "dolled up" in regiments simply for the purpose of displaying himself, but his appearance in full dress was obligatory upon him, under the rules of the navy. Upon receiving the mayor's invitation to review the parade he was required to submit it to his commandant, who assigned him to the duty, and it is a rule of the navy that officers attending such functions must appear in full dress, which included, in this case, the famous and much coveted Congressional Medal of Honor. Chief Gunner Charette's last appearance in full uniform in this city was upon the occasion of a banquet tendered him in Associate hall 15 years ago.

Ex-Servicemen in Line

The following named ex-servicemen marched in the soldiers, sailors and marine division:

Frederick C. Tucker, (mascoat) age 7 years. Carried a sign "My Mother Raised her Boy to be a Sailor." He was dressed in full regulation "Blue-Jacket's Uniform." Son of the Navy Recruiting officer, Lowell.

H. C. Tucker, Chief Yeoman, U. S. Navy. In charge of Navy Recruiting station, 7 Merrimack street. In charge, P. V. J. Mullin, older, U. S. Navy assistant navy recruiting officer, carried the navy Jack.

W. H. Berry, ship fitter 1st class, U. S. Navy, carried the American ensign.

L. P. Glancey, ex-soldier and A. G. Bennett, apprentice seaman, U. S. Navy, Newport Training station, carried the navy recruiting banner.

James Arthur Brown, ex-sergt. U. S. hospital corps, had charge of a platoon composed of ex-servicemen.

The army recruiting banner was carried by Corp. C. Nichols, U. S. Infantry, assistant recruiting officer at Lawrence, Mass., and Sgt. H. L. Douglas, U. S. Army detailed for this duty. Sergt. C. Koch, U. S. Infantry, in charge of army recruiting station, Lawrence, Mass., had charge of the Lawrence platoon.

The success of this detail was due to the local navy recruiting officer and James Arthur Brown (ex-sergt. U. S. hospital corps) employed by Riker, Jaynes Drug Co., this city.

PARADE NOTES

America First.

Lowell is prepared.

The demonstration was one of patriotism without regard to politics.

That Salem Cadet band in some band.

The cowgirls attracted their share of attention.

The Knights of Columbus certainly made a very fine appearance.

The employees of Shaw hosiery made a fine appearance.

The Mathews "preparedness" feature made a great hit.

The O.M.I. cadets came in for considerable applause all along the route.

Uniform dressing was much in evidence along all parts of the line.

The decorations along the line were very original as well as elaborate.

There were no accidents and no fires.

penditures including music, signs and incidentals just equalled that amount.

One of the features of the parade was the fact that it started promptly on time. This was an exception to the rule of parades.

Dr. Joe V. Meigs took longer steps last night than ever before since his college days. He made a fine chief marshal for the York club.

Many of those large flags were showered with enough money to pay for them. This demonstrates how the Stars and Stripes are respected.

The most impressive feature of the evening came at 8.30 o'clock when the line halted and all bands played "America" as the crowds sang.

The parade was unquestionably the best Lowell has ever had, and all those who assisted in any way in making it the "best ever" are entitled to congratulations.

Lieut. George Howard, the well known letter carrier, carried himself just as bravely as he did 18 years ago when he returned from Porto Rico with the Sixth regiment.

The United States Cartridge company's chief of police is some lead in making the parade a success. He had marched in the Preparedness parade in Boston.

The merchants, mill men and other employers of help did their "bit" in making the parade a success. It was fitting that a preparedness parade should start on time, and it certainly did.

The fact that the merchants and mill men contributed to help the parade by the uniforms worn by those in line shows the great spirit of co-operation between employer and employee.

The York club members did themselves proud not only as paraders but as hosts. They kept open house after the parade and those fortunate enough to be their guests enjoyed a most pleasant evening.

The Metropolitan Insurance men followed their marshal, Mr. Redway, for appearance, dress and marching won general plaudits along the route. Nobody supposed there were so many of them.

When it came to keeping step, straight line and grace in turning corners Company A of the Pawtucketville Ladies, headed by Mrs. Edward F. Saunders, made a hit. Much credit is due Mrs. Saunders for her painstaking in drilling the members of her company.

Hats off to the members of the Business Men's battalion. They certainly made a fine showing and their knowledge of military tactics after so few days certainly reflects much credit on them and shows that there is no lack of enthusiasm on their part.

The Chelmsford street young men made a fine showing in last night's parade behind the Mission church band of Boston. They expressed their deep gratitude to Manager Garrity of the Washington Tavern who furnished automobiles to transport the band from Boston.

As the members of the Mathew Temperance Institute marched past St. Peter's church all uncovered, and Rev. W. George Mullin, who was standing nearby began clapping and cheering for the institute. The applause continued until the "Mats" were out of sight.

Proprietor Garrity of the Washington Tavern introduced an original feature into the patriotic celebration last evening when he had a quartet sing "America" in the office of his hotel. The feature became so catching that in a short time everybody in the cafe crowded into the office and with their hands joined in singing the national anthem. The singing was kept up until after 11 o'clock when it was transferred to the sidewalk and attracted a crowd of hundreds of people.

The following bulletin was posted in the various departments of the United States Cartridge Co. this morning:

"We must congratulate each other this morning on the wonderful showing we made in the preparedness parade. Without harmony and co-operation such a demonstration would have been impossible."

"Let us continue the good work and may peace and prosperity be our portion in years to come."

Signed: U. S. Cartridge Co.

THE VICTIM OF RAIDS

Toul, sacked by Goths, Burgundians and Vandals before taken by the Franks

WASHINGTON, D. C., June.—Toul, the scene of the recent German air raid, is the subject of today's war geography bulletin of the National Geographic society, issued from its Washington headquarters, which says:

"From the beginning of the Christian era Toul, known in Roman days as Tullum, has been the victim of raids. It had been sacked by Goths, Burgundians, Huns, and Vandals before it was taken by the Franks in the middle of the fifth century. In the meantime its people had been converted to Christianity by the Irish monk, St. Mansuy, in the early fifth century. It played an important part in the annals of the church until its bishopric, after nearly fourteen centuries, was suppressed during the early days of the Napoleonic era.

"The history of Toul recalls one of the most singular fratricidal strife of the early years of the seventh century, centering around the strong-willed Brunhilda, daughter of a Visigoth ruler who married Sigebert, a Frankish king reigning at Metz. The fame of this wedding, sung by Fortunatus, an Italian poet, king of the Goths, and Chilperic, Sigebert's brother, who shortly thereafter married Brunhilda's sister. The new bride being murdered at the behest of Chilperic's favorite, a war between the two brothers occurred. After Sigebert's assassination, Brunhilda, Chilperic's favorite, was condemned to death by her own son's death, Brunhilda spurred her two grandsons to war with each other, Theoderic II. de feating Theoderic and putting him to death, in 612. This unnatural grandmother met a horrible fate a few months later, when she fell into the hands of the son of Fredegond, the woman who had inspired Chilperic to assassinate his wife, Brunhilda's sister. This royal bride was condemned to be dragged at the heels of a wild horse until death released her from the torture.

"Toul was a free German town during the middle ages until 1552 when Henry II of France seized it together with Metz and Verdun, and three towns comprising the territory known as Trois-Eveches. This victory of the French was one of the factors instrumental in determining Charles V to abdicate, leaving his imperial throne to his brother, Ferdinand, and his Spanish-Netherlands possessions to his son Philip. During this century Toul was twice scourged by the plague which swept over Europe.

"In the Franco-Prussian war of 1870 Toul played an honorable part under Major Huck, commanding 200 intrepid troops, withstood a siege of 40 days' duration, capitulating only after 13,000 men, employing 100 guns, had bombarded the city for 12 days. Four years after this war France began to build new forts to take the place of the old ones, and the defenses constructed in 1870. At the outbreak of the present struggle the ring of forts surrounding this town made it the most formidable French fortress on the Meuse-Moselle frontier.

"In times of peace this city of 10,000 inhabitants is noted for its porcelain industry. It is situated between the Marne-Rhone canal and the Moselle, the latter flowing to the east of the town, which is 14 miles west of Nancy, in an airline. Verdun lies 45 miles to the northwest."

NOTRE DAME GRADUATION

With beautiful and impressive ceremonies fourteen members of the graduating class of Notre Dame academy, Adams street, received their diplomas this morning, and another group of accomplished young ladies went forth to carry the training received in the beloved halls of Notre Dame into their various walks of life. The main feature of the program consisted of the solemn high mass in the chapel, during which the diplomas were awarded by Rt. Rev. William O'Brien, and the address to the graduates delivered by Rev. W. J. O'Brien of Brockton.

The setting for the solemn and inspiring scene was strikingly beautiful, reflecting the spirit of the occasion adequately. At 10 a. m. the chapel was crowded by the large number of relatives, friends and former pupils in attendance. The altar was brilliant with clusters of cut flowers, among which were two great masses of crimson peonies, and there were hundreds of candles and other special decorative features. At the stroke of 10, the thrilling Processional by Massenet was played and the graduating class marched in two by two, each girl wearing a white dress and a veil. The front seats in the chapel had been reserved, and the girls made a pretty picture when they had taken their places.

Solemn high mass was celebrated by Rev. Joseph A. Curtin of St. Patrick's, with Rev. Frs. Callahan and Kerrigan as deacon and sub-deacon, respectively. Rt. Rev. Monsignor O'Brien sat within the sanctuary, and the following clergymen also occupied places within the sanctuary: Rev. M. C. Gilbride, St. Mary's, Collinsville; Rev. E. A. Costello, St. Augustine's, South Doston; Rev. W.

J. O'Brien, Brockton; Rev. B. C. Shea, St. Mary's, Long Branch, N. J.; Rev. Thomas W. Buckley, St. Columba's, Pawtucketville, and others.

Miss Marion Alberta Doyle.
Miss Camilla Euphrasia Fedrant.
Miss Marian Beatrice Kelly.

Miss Helen Agnes Monahan.
Miss Mary Elizabeth Bourke.

calling forth many expressions of commendation from the visiting priests and other guests. The mass was solemn Gregorian and the choir and orchestra of Notre Dame sang the various sections with devotion and appreciation of musical values. The shading and graduation of tone was beautifully effective, the voices dying away softly in waves of sounds or swelling out in full volume according to the appeal of the text. During the mass Tozer's "Veni Sanctus Spiritus" was beautifully rendered and at the offertory Singingbierger's "Ave Maria" was sung most effectively. At the close of the mass of Pentecost, the usual Te Deum and the Recessional were sung very impressively.

The address to the graduates was preached by Rev. W. J. O'Brien of Brockton, and was an eloquent discourse on Catholic education. To the graduates personally he addressed words of congratulation. To the graduates he said:

"Now, dear graduates, fortune has kindly favored you in placing you here for a sound Catholic education. You have been chosen from among thousands and placed under the tender and watchful care of the good sisters of Notre Dame. They, who have consecrated their lives to the service of God and put forth all their energies in the acquisition of that knowledge which they have imparted to you, have been well equipped to guide you in life. But you must remember that there is an obligation on you always to carry yourselves in every phase of life as graduates of Notre Dame. And as you go forth inspired by the exemplary lives of your pious instructors who have been to you as guardian angels during the happy years you have spent here under this hallowed roof, your lives hereafter must have a great influence for good or evil on those with whom you come in contact in your daily intercourse. Therefore, it remains for you to bear in mind the lessons you have been taught and no doubt learned well to so live that every thought and action of yours may not only reflect credit on your alma mater but also merit the approval of those around you and as we trust above all the approval of Him who will one day be our Judge."

EUROPEAN WAR NEWS

Intense artillery activity is reported on both banks of the river Meuse on the Verdun front. The Germans are directing a heavy fire on Fort Souville, north of the fortress, whose guns have so far lent powerful aid in balking the efforts of the crown prince to push the French back to their inner line of defense.

West of the river, Chantecourt, south of Cumlecrs, where the Germans have already driven a wedge into the French lines, is an especial point of attack. No infantry action has occurred on either bank, the Paris afternoon bulletin states. In their offensive on the eastern front, the Russians are apparently making steady headway although still some distance from Lemberg, their immediate objective in Galicia. Last reports place them just across the border some 40 miles north of the city. Kovel, the railway junction point where the link between the German and Austrian forces on this front is formed, has been more closely approached by General Brusiloff's armies. In Bukovina, Czernowitz, the capital, apparently is cut off from all directions but the south.

ADMINISTRATOR'S SALE OF REAL ESTATE AT PUBLIC AUCTION

ON NEXT SATURDAY, JUNE 17, 1916 AT 3 O'CLOCK, P. M.

By virtue of a license issued by the Probate court, the administrator of the estate of Peter L. Deauville, late of Lowell, has instructed the auctioneer to sell at absolute auction sale to whomsoever will bid the most this attractive home and investment property, located within 12 minutes' walk of Merrimack Square.

The property comprises a two-story house of nine rooms with bath, pantry and furnace heat at No. 42 Jewett street, and a two-story two-tenement house of five rooms, separate entrance to each, bathroom and furnace in lower tenement at Nos. 39-41 Jewett street.

The lot has an area of about 1433 square feet of land, more or less, with a frontage of about 59 feet on Jewett street.

This sale should attract any person contemplating buying real estate this spring, when you take into consideration a full two-story house, now occupied as a home, that one could if desired convert into a two-apartment property at a low cost. Its present plan makes it an easy problem. There are four large rooms besides halls and pantry of the first floor, and five good sized chambers and storeroom on the second floor; building is heavily timbered, has a high-posted cellar, cemented in part, and on the same lot a two-story, two-tenement house of five rooms each, that will practically pay the carrying charges of the entire property.

The buildings are in A-1 condition, and the location, within easy walking distance to the largest of Lowell's manufacturing plants, also to the very center of the city, will assure one of a steady and continuous occupancy.

If you are looking for a home, and wish a chance to purchase at the same time, on the same lot, and in no way connected with your home, an investment that will make your rent cost you almost nothing, and pay you interest on your money, then be on hand next Saturday at this sale.

Terms—$300 must be paid to the auctioneer just as soon as the property is struck off. Other terms at sale.

WILLIAM D. REGAN, Attorney for the Administrator.
